Case Notes

Missing Vehicle Headlight Constituting Objective and Particularized Suspicion of Wrongdoing to Justify Investigative Stop: Officers conducting surveillance of a house where drug activities were suspected noticed that a vehicle leaving the area was missing a headlight. The officers believed that the driver, Farabee, may have just completed a drug transaction at the house and pulled over the vehicle, based on the fact that the vehicle appeared to be in violation of this section, which requires two working headlights. Upon receiving permission and searching the vehicle, the officers discovered marijuana and paraphernalia. On appeal, Farabee argued that the officer who stopped him did not have a particularized suspicion that Farabee was committing an offense because the stop occurred at 1:30 p.m., in broad daylight, and Farabee's headlights were turned off, so the officers could only speculate that the headlight was inoperable. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the officers' suspicions were particularized. From the objective and particularized data that the vehicle appeared to be missing a headlight, the officers made the reasonable inference that the headlight was inoperable. Particularized suspicion does not require certainty on the part of an officer; thus, the District Court's conclusion that Farabee was engaged in wrongdoing that justified an investigative stop was not clearly erroneous. St. v. Farabee, 2000 MT 265, 302 M 29, 22 P3d 175, 57 St. Rep. 1106 (2000), distinguishing Grinde v. St., 249 M 77, 813 P2d 473 (1991), and St. v. Reynolds, 272 M 46, 899 P2d 540 (1995).

Traffic Stop of Illegally Operated Vehicle Not Considered Pretext for Search of Vehicle for Narcotics: Officers conducting surveillance of a house where drug activities were suspected noticed that a vehicle leaving the area was missing a headlight. The officers believed that the driver, Farabee, may have just completed a drug transaction at the house and pulled over the vehicle, based on the fact that the vehicle appeared to be in violation of this section, which requires two working headlights. Upon receiving permission and searching the vehicle, the officers discovered marijuana and paraphernalia. On appeal, Farabee argued that the evidence should be suppressed because the officers used the equipment violation as a pretext to stop him and investigate their hunch, in violation of Art. II, sec. 10 and 11, Mont. Const. The Supreme Court disagreed, applying the rationale in Whren v. U.S., 517 US 806 (1996), that an officer's motive for a traffic stop does not render an objectively reasonable stop invalid. The constitutional reasonableness of a traffic stop does not depend on the subjective motivations of the individual officers involved. In this case, based on the objective and particularized data that the vehicle appeared to be missing a headlight, the officers made the reasonable inference that the headlight was inoperable, so the totality of the circumstances justified the investigative stop. Farabee's motion to suppress was properly denied. St. v. Farabee, 2000 MT 265, 302 M 29, 22 P3d 175, 57 St. Rep. 1106 (2000), distinguishing St. v. Lahr, 172 M 32, 560 P2d 527 (1977).

61-9-105. Obedience to peace officers, highway patrol officers, and public safety workers.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in first sentence substituted "peace officer" for "police officer" and after "patrol officer" inserted "or public safety worker"; inserted second sentence defining public safety worker; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: Changed "patrolman" to "patrol officer".

61-9-109. Driving vehicle in unsafe condition prohibited — applicability of chapter.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in (1), after "drive or", deleted "move or for the owner to cause or knowingly permit" and after "driven" deleted "or moved"; inserted (5) requiring maintenance of required lamps and equipment; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Military Personnel: Noncommissioned officer acting under direct order to engage in emergency snow removal project related to threatened flood and who was operating a tilt-deck trailer upon a public highway without proper lights was immune from prosecution under this section. St., Fergus County, Lewistown v. Christopher, 345 F. Supp. 60 (D.C. Mont. 1972).

Part 2 Lighting Equipment

61-9-201. When lighted lamps are required.

Case Notes

Parked and Disabled Vehicle Not Proximate Cause of Accident — Verdict Supported by Substantial Evidence: Where the defendant parked his stalled pickup truck at the side of a frontage road and turned on the floodlights of the haygrinder he was pulling before leaving the truck to seek help, but the truck was nevertheless struck by the plaintiff's vehicle, the Supreme Court found that the jury verdict for the defendant was supported by substantial evidence. The record showed that the plaintiff had seen the defendant's lights from one-half mile away but failed to avoid the accident. The jury found defendant 0% negligent and plaintiff 100% negligent; it was entitled to conclude, as it did, that negligence on the part of the defendant was not the proximate cause of the accident. Griffel v. Faust, 205 M 372, 668 P2d 247, 40 St. Rep. 1370 (1983).

Driving Before Dusk: An automobile dealer's service manager went to plaintiff's ranch to pick up his car. While driving the car back to the dealer's garage for repairs, the service manager drove the car into a creek extensively damaging the car. The service manager had 1½ hours in which to drive the 50 miles back to town before dusk. The absence of one beam of one headlight did not establish either contributory negligence or assumption of risk on the part of plaintiff, so as to preclude his recovery of damages. Win Del Ranches, Inc. v. Rolfe & Wood, Inc., 137 M 44, 350 P2d 581 (1960).

Causal Relationship to Accident: Violation of section 32-1132, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), requiring headlights on automobiles between 1 hour after sunset and 1 hour before sunrise, constituted negligence. In considering whether or not such negligence contributed to an accident or barred recovery, courts must take into consideration the conditions existing at the time and place of the accident. Simpson v. Miller, 97 M 328, 34 P2d 528 (1934).

Unfavorable Atmospheric Conditions: In an action for damages for personal injuries sustained in a collision after dark between plaintiff's automobile, the lights of which were burning, and that of the defendant without lights, the negligence alleged was defendant's driving without lights when a reasonably prudent man would have had them burning. An instruction that if the accident occurred before the hour fixed by section 32-1132, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), for having lights, the absence of lights could not be deemed negligence, was properly refused. The hour fixed by statute was immaterial if the conditions were such as to require the display of lights. Knott v. Pepper, 74 M 236, 239 P 1037 (1925).

61-9-203. Headlamps on motor vehicles.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 inserted third sentence in (2) permitting installation of modulating high beam on motorcycle but prohibiting owner from modulating during periods of required headlamp use; in (3) substituted "less than 24 inches" for "less than 22 inches"; inserted (4) prohibiting person from operating motor vehicle on highway with substance obscuring headlamps or diminishing visibility; inserted (5) permitting operation of motor vehicle with headlamps composed of treated or tinted substance if equipment complied with federal law at time of manufacture; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Throughout section after "motorcycle", inserted "quadricycle" (effective January 1, 1986).

1983 Amendment: In (2), inserted second sentence prohibiting a motorcycle from being operated without headlamps upon a highway or street from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise or if persons and vehicles are not clearly discernible at 500 feet.

61-9-204. Taillamps.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 413 in (1) in second sentence substituted "with at least one mounted on each side of the rear of the vehicle" for "mounted on the rear". Amendment effective April 28, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 458 in (6) substituted (a) and (b) allowing the use of and defining blue dot taillights for former language that read: "This section does not prohibit a vehicle manufactured prior to 1960 from being equipped with a taillamp that includes within the red cover a center lens that is blue in color"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 28, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in first and second sentences in (1), before "taillamp", inserted "properly functioning" and at end of second sentence, after "rear", substituted "that emit a red light plainly visible from a distance of 1,000 feet to the rear of the vehicle" for "which when lighted as herein required, shall comply with the provisions of this section"; at end of (3), after "headlamps", deleted "or auxiliary driving lamps"; inserted (5) prohibiting operation of motor vehicle with substance covering, obscuring, or diminishing visibility of taillamps; inserted (6) permitting operation of motor vehicle with taillamps with blue center lens on vehicle manufactured prior to 1960; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: In (1), in last sentence, inserted "motorcycle, motor-driven cycle, quadricycle, or".

1983 Amendment: Inserted (4) prohibiting motorcycles from being operated without tail lights on a highway or street from one-half hour after sunset to one-half hour before sunrise or when persons and vehicles are not clearly discernible at 500 feet.

Case Notes

Statutory Violations a Jury Question: The plaintiff sued the defendants for injuries he suffered when he drove his truck into the rear of their car. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants violated various motor vehicle statutes and the duty of care owed to the plaintiff, but the Supreme Court found that these were questions of fact for the jury and substantial evidence supported the findings for the defendants. Substantial and sufficient evidence also was found to support the jury's determination that the defendants' actions did not proximately cause the plaintiff's injury. Gunnels v. Hoyt, 194 M 265, 633 P2d 1187, 38 St. Rep. 1492 (1981).

County Road Grader: Statute requiring that tail lamps be not more than 72 inches from ground did not apply to county road grader on which two red tail lamps had been mounted 10 feet from the ground. A motorist suing the county for injury sustained when his auto struck the road grader from rear was not entitled to an instruction that the statute had been violated and that the county was therefore negligent as matter of law. Bernhard v. Lincoln County, 150 M 557, 437 P2d 377 (1968).

61-9-205. New motor vehicles to be equipped with reflectors.

1985 Amendment: In (1) after "motorcycle", inserted "quadricycle" (effective January 1, 1986).

61-9-206. Stop lamps — when required.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 near beginning of (1), after "vehicle", deleted "including any motorcycle, quadricycle, or motor-driven cycle" and after "equipped" substituted "with at least two properly functioning stop lamps" for "with at least one stop lamp meeting the requirements of 61-9-218" and inserted second sentence requiring vehicle manufactured before 1956 and all cycles to be equipped with at least one functioning stop lamp; inserted (2) describing the required visibility of rear stop lamps; inserted (3) prohibiting stop lamp from projecting glaring light; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: After "motorcycle", inserted "quadricycle" (effective January 1, 1986).

Case Notes

Driving Without Properly Functioning Brake Lights Constitutes Sufficient Particularized Suspicion for Investigative Stop: Operating a motor vehicle that is not equipped with functional brake lights is a misdemeanor offense, and thus deputy's decision to pull over defendant's vehicle was supported by a particularized suspicion. St. v. Faber, 2008 MT 368, 346 M 449, 197 P3d 941 (2008).

61-9-207. Application of succeeding sections.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at beginning substituted "Sections 61-9-208 through 61-9-229" for "Those sections of this chapter which follow immediately, including 61-9-208 through 61-9-211 and 61-9-213 relating to clearance and marker lamps, reflectors, and stoplights" and after "enumerated" substituted "in those sections" for "namely passenger buses, trucks, truck tractors, and certain trailers, semitrailers, and pole trailers, respectively"; at end of second sentence substituted "1,000 feet" for "500 feet"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-208. Additional equipment required on certain vehicles.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at end of (1) and (4)(d), after "side", deleted "and one stoplight"; deleted (3)(b) that required a truck tractor to have "on the rear, one stoplight"; inserted second sentence in (6)(a) requiring safety chain or cable to be connected to towing vehicle hitch or frame; in (6)(b), after "reflectors", inserted "and two stoplights" and deleted second sentence that read: "If any trailer or semitrailer is so loaded or is of such dimensions as to obscure the stoplight on the towing vehicle, then such vehicle shall also be equipped with one stoplight"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-209. Color of clearance lamps, side marker lamps, reflectors, and backup lamps.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in (3), after "reflectors", inserted "and stoplights"; substituted exception language in (3)(a) regarding rear signal devices defined in 61-9-218 for "the stoplight or other signal device which may be red, amber, or yellow"; at end of (3)(c), after "white", deleted "amber, or red"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-213. Lamp or flag on projecting load.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in first sentence in (1) inserted "the following lamps and reflectors"; at beginning of (1)(a) substituted "red lamp" for "red light or lantern" and after "least" substituted "500 feet to the sides and 1,000 feet to the rear and located to indicate maximum overhang" for "500 feet to the sides and rear"; inserted (1)(b) requiring display of red reflector visible from the rear with low beams from 100 feet to 600 feet; at beginning of first sentence of (2) substituted "red lights and reflectors" for "red light or lantern" and in second sentence, after "12 inches square", substituted "marking the extremities of the load, at each point where a lamp or reflector would otherwise be required by this section" for "and so hung that the entire area is visible to the driver of a vehicle approaching from the rear"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-214. Lamps on parked vehicles.Case Notes

Violation as Negligence: A violation of section 32-1132, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), constituted negligence, and a traveler on the highway was entitled to assume that a truck standing upon the highway at night would display lights both upon the front and rear thereof. Ashley v. Safeway Stores, Inc., 100 M 312, 47 P2d 53 (1935).

61-9-215. Lamps on farm tractors, farm equipment, and implements of husbandry.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in (2), after "system", inserted "or an implement of husbandry being towed by a motor vehicle"; in (2)(a), (2)(b), (3), and (4)(b), after "indicate", deleted "as nearly as practicable"; in first sentence in (3), after "requirements", substituted "61-9-220 or 61-9-222" for "61-9-222 or 61-9-220 respectively, or as an alternative, 61-9-224"; at end of (4)(a), after "61-9-222", deleted "or 61-9-224"; in second sentence of (4)(c), after "lamps must", deleted "be installed or capable of being positioned so as to"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-216. Lamps on other vehicles and equipment.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in two places in first sentence and one place in second sentence increased required distance for visibility from "500 feet" to "1,000 feet"; in first sentence, near beginning substituted "61-9-109(4)" for "61-9-109(3)"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Headlamp Illumination Requirements Erroneously Stated — Harmless Error: A jury instruction regarding the applicable statutory provisions governing the degree of illumination required of headlamps of motor vehicles, although erroneously stated by a judge, constituted only harmless error since the outcome of the verdict against defendant was not affected and since the statute that was erroneously involved actually helped defendant. Lauman v. Lee, 192 M 84, 626 P2d 830, 38 St. Rep. 499 (1981).

61-9-217. Spot lamps, fog lamps, and auxiliary lamps.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in first sentence in (2), after "lamps", inserted "that provide a low, wide-angle light pattern to increase short-range visibility", near beginning of second sentence, after "not", deleted "less than 12 inches", and inserted fourth sentence prohibiting substitution of fog lamp for headlamps; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) Any motor vehicle may be equipped with not to exceed two auxiliary passing lamps mounted on the front at a height not less than 24 inches or more than 42 inches above the level surface upon which the vehicle stands. The provisions of 61-9-220 shall apply to any combination of headlamps and auxiliary passing lamps"; in first sentence in (3), after "lamps", inserted "that produce a long-range, pencil-shaped light pattern and that are used to supplement the upper beams of headlamps" and inserted fourth sentence prohibiting use of auxiliary driving lamps as substitute for required headlamps; inserted (4) prohibiting use of auxiliary off-road lamps mounted above 42 inches; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Parked and Disabled Vehicle Not Proximate Cause of Accident — Verdict Supported by Substantial Evidence: Where the defendant parked his stalled pickup truck at the side of a frontage road and turned on the floodlights of the haygrinder he was pulling before leaving the truck to seek help, but the truck was nevertheless struck by the plaintiff's vehicle, the Supreme Court found that the jury verdict for the defendant was supported by substantial evidence. The record showed that the plaintiff had seen the defendant's lights from one-half mile away but failed to avoid the accident. The jury found defendant 0% negligent and plaintiff 100% negligent; it was entitled to conclude, as it did, that negligence on the part of the defendant was not the proximate cause of the accident. Griffel v. Faust, 205 M 372, 668 P2d 247, 40 St. Rep. 1370 (1983).

61-9-218. Signal lamps and signal devices — when required.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) Any motor vehicle may be equipped and when required under this chapter shall be equipped with a stop lamp or lamps on the rear of the vehicle which shall display a red or amber light, or any shade of color between red and amber, visible from a distance of not less than 100 feet to the rear in normal sunlight, and which shall be actuated upon application of the service (foot) brake, and which may but need not be incorporated with one or more other rear lamps"; in first sentence in (1), after "vehicle", inserted "or combination of vehicles" and after "with" inserted "signal", at beginning of third and fifth sentences inserted exception clause, and in third and fifth sentences substituted "not less than 300 feet" for "not less than 100 feet"; inserted (2) requiring signal lamps on certain vehicles; inserted (3) setting visibility distance for signal lamps on vehicles manufactured before 1964 and providing an exemption from signal lamp requirement for vehicles manufactured before 1953; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-220. Multiple-beam road-lighting equipment.Compiler's Comments

2011 Amendment: Chapter 209 in first sentence and in subsection (3) after "motor-driven cycle" inserted "or low-speed electric vehicle"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2012.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in first sentence of introductory clause, after "driving lamps", deleted "or the auxiliary passing lamp"; in first sentence in (3) substituted "manufactured after January 1, 1956" for "registered in this state after January 1, 1956"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In lead-in and in (3) inserted "quadricycle(s)" after "motorcycle(s)" (effective January 1, 1986).

Instructions on Statutes Preferred: In a wrongful death action arising out of a head-on collision, plaintiff offered instructions quoting federal and state laws which concern the dimming of headlights at night on the highway. The court gave the instruction concerning the federal regulations but refused to give the instruction quoting 61-9-220 and 61-9-221. Plaintiff pointed out that a violation of the federal regulation may be considered by the jury in determining negligence, while a violation of a Montana statute is negligence as a matter of law. The Supreme Court said it would have been preferable for the District Court to instruct on Montana statutes as they pertain to the use of high and low beams of headlights at night. The court also found that the instruction given was consistent with the statutes, so the jury was not misled. Lindberg v. Leatham Bros., Inc., 215 M 11, 693 P2d 1234, 42 St. Rep. 137 (1985).

Brakes

61-9-301. Brake equipment required.

Case Notes

Double Jeopardy: Conviction under section 32-21-143, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), did not bar prosecution for involuntary manslaughter arising out of the same accident in subsequent action, because proof of the latter requires proof of an additional fact. *St. v. 61-9-302. Service brakes — adequacy.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 at beginning substituted "motor vehicle, trailer, semitrailer, and pole trailer" for "vehicle"; after "special mobile equipment" deleted "as defined in 61-1-104"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

61-9-303. Parking brakes — adequacy.

Compiler's Comments

1985 Amendment: Near beginning after "motorcycles", inserted "quadricycles" (effective January 1, 1986).

61-9-304. Brakes required on all wheels — exceptions.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 in (4) at end deleted "as defined in 61-1-104". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 276 in (3), after "front wheels", substituted "if the vehicle was manufactured before July 25, 1980" for "except that when such vehicles are equipped with at least two steerable axles, the wheels of one steerable axle need not have brakes"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (5) after "brakes", substituted "However, a quadricycle" for "provided that such" and after "motor-driven cycle" changed "is" to "must be" (effective January 1, 1986).

61-9-308. Two means of emergency brake operation.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at beginning of (1) and (2) deleted "After January 1, 1966"; and made minor changes in style.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at end of first sentence in (1), after "below", substituted "60 pounds per square inch" for "50% of the air compressor governor cutout pressure"; at beginning of (2) deleted "After January 1, 1966"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-312. Performance ability of brakes.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 574 in (3) substituted "61-3-411(2)(a)" for "61-3-411(3)(a)". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 substituted text outlining required braking distances for various vehicles for former text (see 1997 Session Law for former text and table).

1985 Amendment: Inserted "quadricycles" in classification B-1 (effective January 1, 1986).

61-9-313. Maintenance of brakes.Case Notes

Proximate Cause — Jury Question: The court properly refused to grant a directed verdict against defendant for failing to keep its brakes from freezing and in failing to display brake lights and keep them free from snow because whether such violations proximately caused the death of plaintiff's husband was a question of fact for the jury to determine. However, the erroneous jury instruction on the sudden emergency doctrine necessitated a new trial on the issue of liability. Kudrna v. Comet Corp., 175 M 29, 572 P2d 183 (1977).

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 449 in (6) near beginning after "state or of a" substituted "governmental fire agency organized under Title 7, chapter 33" for "fire department"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective June 1, 2007.

Chapter 520 in (5) near middle after "signal or light" substituted "as provided in 61-8-346 and" for "only with caution and at a speed that is no greater than is reasonable and proper under the conditions existing at the point of operation". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 in (7) in third sentence after "as defined in" substituted "61-8-102" for "61-1-118"; and in (8) at beginning substituted "police vehicle" for "police car". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 352 in (1) deleted former second sentence that read: "The use of signal equipment as described in this section imposes upon the drivers of other vehicles the obligation to yield right-of-way or to stop and to proceed past the signal or light only with caution and at a speed that is no greater than is reasonable and proper under the conditions existing at the point of operation"; in (5) near beginning after "upon the" substituted "operators" for "drivers"; in (10) near middle after "provided in" substituted "61-8-301(4)" for "61-8-315" and at end substituted "61-8-715" for "61-8-715(2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Chapter 379 at end of (10) substituted "61-8-715(1)" for "61-8-715(2)". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 520 at end of (4)(a) inserted "subject to the provisions of 61-8-209 and 61-8-303"; inserted (4)(b) concerning limit on liability; inserted (8) concerning reckless endangerment of a highway worker; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at beginning of third sentence in (5) inserted exception clause; in first sentence in (6), after "equipped", substituted "with a flashing signal lamp that is green in color, visible from 360 degrees, and attached to the exterior roof" for "with a portable signal lamp that is green in color and capable of magnetic attachment to the exterior roof" and inserted third sentence restricting display of green lights, lenses, or globes to on-scene command and control vehicle; inserted (7) restricting use of flashing or alternating headlamp or backup lights to police or emergency vehicle; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: Near beginning of (6), after "required in", deleted "subsections (1), (2), and (3) of".

1985 Amendments: Chapter 361 inserted (7) permitting a police car and authorized emergency vehicle to be equipped with a portable green magnetic signal lamp designating it as the on-scene command and control vehicle in an emergency or disaster.

Chapter 503 in (4) substituted reference to department of justice for reference to division of motor vehicles.

Case Notes

Public Duty Doctrine Inapplicable Based on Special Relationship Between Pursuing Officers and Pedestrian: Plaintiff was injured when defendant, a runaway juvenile probationer, hit plaintiff with a stolen vehicle while being pursued by law enforcement officers during a high-speed chase through Harlowton. Plaintiff sued the county and the County Sheriff for damages related to the crash. The District Court granted summary judgment to the county and the County Sheriff, holding that the public duty doctrine applied and that neither plaintiff's nor the juvenile's actions were foreseeable. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed. The public duty doctrine generally shields law enforcement officers from negligence claims, but an exception arises when there is a special relationship between an officer and an individual that gives rise to a special duty that is more particular than the duty owed to the public at large. Applying the circumstances set out in Nelson v. Driscoll, 1999 MT 193, 295 M 363, 983 P2d 972 (1999), the court noted that the first exception to the public trust doctrine is whether a statute intended to protect a specific class of persons, of which plaintiff is a member, creates a special relationship. Under 61-8-107, a duty of care is created on the part of the drivers of emergency vehicles to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons. Based on this special relationship, the court held that the public duty doctrine did not apply. As a bystander on a public road, plaintiff was within the scope of risk and was thus a foreseeable plaintiff. Last, the court considered the issue of causation. Plaintiff claimed negligence on the part of the county and the officers, but plaintiff was actually injured by the actions of the juvenile, so the question was whether the juvenile's actions were intervening superseding acts that broke the chain of causation as a matter of law. Whether plaintiff's injuries were caused primarily by the juvenile or by the officers was an issue that reasonable minds might disagree upon and therefore appropriately adjudicated by a jury, so the Supreme Court reversed the summary judgment and remanded for trial on the issues of breach of duty, causation, including intervening superseding cause, and damages. Eklund v. Trost, 2006 MT 333, 335 M 112, 151 P3d 870 (2006), applying Stenberg v. Neel, 188 M 333, 613 P2d 1007 (1980), and Day v. St., 980 P2d 1171 (Utah 1999).

Failure to Use Siren — Reckless Driving Conviction Affirmed: Appellant contended he was not guilty of reckless driving because the officer who pursued him at speeds of up to 110 miles an hour did not use his siren. The argument was without merit. This section simply requires that a police car be equipped with a siren. The mere presence of the siren on the car does not mandate its use; therefore, use of a siren is not an essential element of the offense of reckless driving. St. v. Keil, 231 M 187, 751 P2d 680, 45 St. Rep. 532 (1988).

Duty to Drive With "Due Regard": In interpreting 61-8-107, the test for "due regard" is whether, with the privileges and immunities provided by that statute, the driver of an emergency vehicle acted in a reasonably careful manner. Stenberg v. Neel, 188 M 333, 613 P2d 1007, 37 St. Rep. 1170 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

Yield of Right-of-Way Required Upon Approach of Emergency Vehicle Using Only Visual Signals: Upon the immediate approach of an authorized emergency vehicle making use of only visual signals pursuant to this section, other drivers shall yield the right-of-way or stop. They may then proceed past the signal with caution and at a reasonable and proper speed. 43 A.G. Op. 11 (1989).

61-9-405. Windshields required, exception — unobstructed and equipped with wipers — window tinting and sunscreening — restrictions — exemptions.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 deleted former (5)(a) that read: "(a) 'Camper' means a structure designed to be mounted in the cargo area of a truck or attached to an incomplete vehicle for the purpose of providing shelter for persons"; deleted former (5)(e) that read: "(e) 'Motor home' means a multipurpose passenger vehicle that provides living accommodations"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 inserted (1) requiring that certain vehicles be equipped with front windshield and providing exceptions to requirements; in (2)(a), after "poster", inserted "substance", and after "vehicle" substituted "that materially obstructs, obscures, or impairs" for "that obstructs"; inserted (2)(b) prohibiting driving of vehicle with shattered or defective windshield that materially impairs driver's view; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 133 in (4)(b), at end, substituted "24%" for "35%"; in (4)(c), near middle, substituted "14%" for "20%"; inserted (6) relating to vehicles with tinted windows to which additional sunscreening material has been applied; in (7), near beginning before "vehicle", inserted "multipurpose"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (2), at end after "windshield", deleted "which device shall be so constructed as to be controlled or operated by the driver of the vehicle"; inserted (4) concerning prohibiting windshield sunscreening material below the AS-1 line or red, yellow, or amber material above the AS-1 line, establishing acceptable level of luminous reflectance and light transmission for side and rear window sunscreening material, and requiring windows of camper, motor home, pickup cover, slide-in camper, or other vehicle to meet standards for safety glazing material specified by federal law; inserted (5) defining camper, glass-plastic glazing material, light transmission, luminous reflectance, motor home, multipurpose vehicle, pickup cover, slide-in camper, and sunscreening material; inserted (6) concerning exception for certain vehicles and vehicles with waiver certificate affixed or registered in state on October 1, 1991; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Obscured Vision — Negligence: A driver who permits the windshield of his vehicle to become so covered with dust and dirt so as to obscure his vision so that he cannot readily perceive the condition of the road is negligent. However, the mere fact that dust is observable on the windshield is not evidence of negligence on the part of the driver. West v. Wilson, 90 M 522, 4 P2d 469 (1931).

61-9-406. Restrictions as to tire equipment — particular tires, chains, or traction devices — definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 93 in (6) at beginning substituted "The department of transportation may determine" for "If the department of transportation determines", substituted "traction devices" for "traction equipment", and after "pneumatic rubber tires" deleted former remainder of introductory clause and (a) through (c) that read: "the department may establish the following recommendations or requirements with respect to the use of the equipment for all vehicles using the highway:

- (a) chains or other approved traction devices recommended for driver wheels;
- (b) chains or other approved traction devices required for driver wheels; or
- (c) chains required for driver wheels"; deleted former (7) that read: "(7) Equipment required by subsection (6)(b) or (6)(c) must conform to rules established by the department of justice"; in (7) in first sentence substituted "traction device requirement" for "traction equipment recommendation or requirement", in second sentence substituted "traction devices" for "traction equipment", and in last sentence before "requirements" deleted "recommendations or"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 18, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 114 in (3) at beginning of third sentence inserted exception clause; inserted (4) concerning use of retractable devices on tires; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 in (4) near beginning after "local authorities" inserted "as defined in 61-8-102"; in (7) in second sentence near end after "axle" inserted "as defined in 61-10-104"; inserted (8) defining metal tire and pneumatic tire; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 448 in (3), near middle of second sentence after "tire tread", inserted language concerning all season mud and snow tires; inserted (5) concerning Department establishing recommendations or requirements for use of chains or other traction devices; inserted (6) concerning conformance of equipment to Department of Justice rules; inserted (7) concerning Department maintaining signs indicating tire or traction device recommended or required on roadway; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 512 substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 448, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because it amends 61-9-406 by adding subsection (5) that allows the department of highways to recommend or require the use of chains or other approved traction devices under certain conditions in conformance with rules authorized in subsection (6) to be established by the department of justice. It is the intent of the legislature that the recommendations or requirements of the department of highways or the rules established by the department of justice not require the installation of chains or approved traction devices on the driver wheels of more than one axle of a vehicle."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 at beginning deleted "On or after January 1, 1956"; and made minor changes in style.

61-9-409. Seatbelts required in vehicles manufactured after 1964.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 in (1) substituted "after January 1, 1965, and on or before January 1, 1968, must be" for "commencing with the 1966 models unless such vehicle is"; inserted (2) requiring designated seating position in vehicle manufactured after 1968 to be equipped with regulation safety belt system; inserted (3) requiring required safety belts to remain installed and working; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Seatbelt Rendered Inoperable — Negligence Per Se: Pursuant to 61-9-409, there is a duty to maintain a motor vehicle in a way that seatbelts are available for the driver's and passenger's use in the event they choose to use them. Breach of that duty constitutes negligence per se. Nothing in 61-13-106, in this section, or in Kopischke v. First Cont. Corp., 187 M 471, 610 P2d 668 (1980), precludes evidence that seatbelts were unavailable and thus not in use at the time of an accident. Nor does the fact that the unavailability of a seatbelt was not the cause of the original accident relieve the duty under 61-9-409 to provide seatbelts. Califato v. Gerke, 258 M 68, 852 P2d 121, 50 St. Rep. 428 (1993).

No Seatbelt Defense: In the light of the history and the numerous legislative problems that must be considered to effectively extend the seatbelt rule of law, the well-reasoned position of the Washington court in Amend v. Bell, 89 Wash. 2d 124, 570 P2d 138 (1977), produces the better rule. To adopt a seatbelt defense when the Legislature has failed to do so would be ill-advised. The trial court properly refused to allow defendant to introduce evidence that plaintiff's failure to use a seatbelt contributed to her injuries. (See 61-13-106.) Kopischke v. First Cont. Corp., 187 M 471, 610 P2d 668, 37 St. Rep. 437 (1980), distinguished in Califato v. Gerke, 258 M 68, 852 P2d 121, 50 St. Rep. 428 (1993), in cases in which a person breaches the duty to make seatbelts available by rendering the seatbelt inoperable.

61-9-412. Display of warning devices when vehicle disabled.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 inserted (7) defining flammable liquid; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

Case Notes

Instruction on Duty to Display Traffic Warning Flags — Important Theory of Case: Plaintiff objected to giving of an instruction regarding his duty to display warning flags on the highway near his disabled vehicle on the ground that because a truck parked behind the disabled vehicle was exhibiting its flashing emergency lights, there was no need for warning flags. The Supreme Court disagreed, noting both the statutory duty to place warning flags and defendant's right to instruction on that duty as an important theory of the case. Smith v. Rorvik, 231 M 85, 751 P2d 1053, 45 St. Rep. 451 (1988).

Negligence: Driver of truck was negligent in allowing the truck, which had run out of gas, to stand on highway at nighttime without placing flares required by sec. 8, Ch. 199, L. 1943 (section 31-108, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed)). Burns v. Fisher, 132 M 26, 313 P2d 1044, 67 ALR 2d 1 (1957).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 520 at end of (1)(b) substituted "as provided in 61-9-431" for "of a uniform type, with dimensions of 3 x 3 feet, lettering 5 inches high, and reflectorized orange background and black border, as prescribed by the department. The signs must be designed to be visible both day and night. The warning signs must bear the words "wreck ahead", "tow truck ahead", or "wrecker ahead", as prescribed by the department"; at end of (2) substituted "61-9-431" for "subsection (1)(b):

(a) in an area in which the posted speed limit is 45 miles an hour or less, not less than 450 feet in advance of the disabled vehicle and an equal distance to the rear of the disabled vehicle; and

(b) in an area in which the posted speed limit is more than 45 miles an hour or no speed limit is posted, 600 feet in advance of the disabled vehicle, except on a divided highway where the disabled vehicle does not cause disruption of traffic traveling on the opposite side of the divided highway, and an equal distance to the rear of the disabled vehicle"; deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) A local government unit may adopt an ordinance exempting a commercial tow truck operator from the requirements of subsection (2) within the limits of an incorporated city or town.

(4) When a motor vehicle is disabled on the highway during the hours of darkness, the tow truck operator called to render assistance shall immediately upon arrival place warning signs upon the highway as prescribed in this section and shall also place not less than one red flare, red lantern, or warning light or reflector in close proximity to each warning sign"; inserted (4) concerning limit on liability; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 431 deleted last sentence in (1)(b) that read: "When a motor vehicle is disabled on the highway, the tow truck operator called to render assistance during the hours of darkness shall immediately upon arrival place warning signs upon the highway as prescribed in this section and shall also place not less than one red flare, red lantern, or warning light or reflector in close proximity to each warning sign"; in (1)(d), after "flashing", substituted "red or amber light meeting the requirements of 61-9-402(5)" for "or steady red or amber light"; in third sentence in (1)(g), after "towed", deleted "during the hours of darkness and the rear lamp or lamps on the disabled vehicle cannot be lighted" and after "capable of" substituted "displaying a stop signal, turn signal, and taillamps" for "emitting a stop and a directional signal"; in (2), after "roadway", deleted "outside a business or residence district"; in (2)(b), after "hour", inserted "or no speed limit is posted"; inserted (3) authorizing local government unit to adopt ordinance exempting commercial tow truck operator from warning sign requirements; inserted (4) requiring operator rendering after dark road service to place warning signs and flare, lantern, or light on highway; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 283 in (1) substituted introductory clause for former language that read: "A commercial tow truck used to tow a vehicle by means of a crane, hoist, towbar, towline, or dolly must be"; in (1)(d), near beginning of first sentence after "red", inserted "or amber" and after "light" inserted "or both a red and amber light" and in fifth sentence, near beginning after "red", inserted "or amber"; in (1)(g), near beginning of first sentence after "cord", inserted "or other device" and after "displaying" substituted "stop, turn, and tail lights" for "a light" and in second sentence, near middle after "rear light", inserted "that is capable of emitting a stop and a directional signal" and near end, after "cord", inserted "or other device"; in (3) inserted reference to 61-8-906 and 61-8-907; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 29, 1995.

1991 Amendment: Throughout section substituted "truck" for "car"; in first sentence of (1)(b) inserted language establishing dimensions, lettering, and color for highway warning signs, inserted third sentence pertaining to wording on highway warning signs, and deleted requirement that warning signs be placed 200 feet in front of and behind disabled vehicle when the rendering of assistance necessitates obstruction of portion of roadway outside business or residence district; in (1)(c), before "fire extinguisher", inserted "dry chemical", and substituted "5 pound capacity or an equivalent alternative type of fire extinguisher, approved by the department" for "2 quart capacity of a type capable of extinguishing a fire"; inserted (2) pertaining to placement of highway warning signs in front of and behind disabled vehicles when the rendering of assistance necessitates the obstruction of portion of roadway outside a business or residence district; and made minor changes in style. Part Case Notes

Mandatory Nature of Penalty: Once court determined that defendant was driving logging truck upon highways of state when gross weight exceeded maximum gross weight allowed by statute by some 28,000 pounds, court had no choice but to levy an additional fine of $1,000. The penalty is in addition to the other penalties provided by statute, is obligatory upon judge, is not a violation of double jeopardy provision of constitution, and does not violate statute providing that when action is punishable under different provisions of code, punishment may be had under only one of them. Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 542 inserted (6)(a) defining axle; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 58 in (2)(a), near middle of second sentence, inserted "or 61 feet in combined trailer length"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 232 in (5)(a), in third sentence, substituted "61-10-124(2)" for "61-10-124(3)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 209 in (1) increased length from 45 feet to 55 feet.

Chapter 313 in (5)(a), in first sentence after "one", deleted "trailer".

1993 Amendment: Chapter 423 inserted (5) concerning maximum length of truck and trailer hauling logs; and in (6)(c), near beginning, inserted "except as provided in subsection (5)(a)".

1991 Amendments: Chapter 327 in (3), at end, increased allowable overall length from 65 feet to 75 feet; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 672 in (1), at end, increased maximum overall length from 40 feet to 45 feet; in (2)(a), at end before "combination length limit", substituted "a" for "an overall"; in (2)(c) and (3), after "have", substituted "a combination length" for "an overall length, inclusive of front and rear bumpers"; in (4) substituted "a length" for "an overall length, inclusive of front and rear bumpers"; and inserted (5) defining combination length, combined trailer length, length, and Rocky Mountain double.

1989 Amendment: In (2)(a) increased length to 53 feet from 48 feet, in two places inserted "truck tractor-semitrailer-semitrailer", and inserted "or the two semitrailers" before "may not exceed 28 ½ feet"; inserted (2)(b) relating to stinger-steered automobile or boat transporters; and in (3) allowed triple saddle-mount of three vehicles from dual saddle-mount of two vehicles.

1983 Amendment: In (2) inserted first three sentences, relating to length limits for truck tractor semitrailer combinations, and in fourth sentence, substituted "75" for "65", inserted exception relating to special permits, and at beginning substituted "All other combinations" for "A combination of truck and trailer, tractor and semitrailer, tractor-semitrailer-full-trailer, or tractor-semitrailer-semitrailer converted to a trailer by use of a dolly equipped with a fifth wheel".

1981 Amendment: Increased the maximum length in (2), (3), and (4) from 60 to 65 feet.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: (Temporary version) Chapter 219 in (1)(b) inserted "or on Montana highway 16 from the border between Canada and the United States to 20 miles south of the border". Amendment effective October 1, 2015.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 342 in (1)(a) at beginning of fourth sentence inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(b) concerning exemption from weight limits on portion of highway 93; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005, and terminates on occurrence of contingency.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 283 in (1) deleted former fourth sentence that read: "A vehicle or combination may not have more than nine axles" and inserted last two sentences providing that the maximum gross weight may not exceed the weight limits adopted by the department and requiring the department to adopt rules for weight limits. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 232 deleted former (3) requiring special permit for vehicles exceeding 80,000 pounds in gross weight (see 1997 Session Law for former text); deleted (4) regarding special permit for farm vehicles (see 1997 Session Law for former text); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 236 in (2)(a), in first sentence after "subsection (1)", substituted remainder of subsection relating to tires and maximum loads per axle for "its maximum load per inch of tire width, excluding the steering axle, may not exceed 500 pounds, based on the table in 61-10-105(3)"; inserted (2)(b) concerning exception for passenger buses; inserted (2)(c) concerning computation of maximum tire weight; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 1995.

Date of Compliance: Section 15, Ch. 236, L. 1995, provided: "All equipment existing on or after [the effective date of this act] [effective March 24, 1995] must comply with the provision of 61-10-107(2) by January 1, 1996."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 399 in (1) inserted second sentence describing axle load; and in (2) decreased maximum load per inch of tire width from 600 pounds to 500 pounds. Amendment effective January 1, 1995.

Compliance Date: Section 2, Ch. 399, L. 1993, was a date of compliance and provided: "All equipment existing on or after [the date the governor signs this act] [signed April 19, 1993] must comply with the provisions of 61-10-107(2) by January 1, 1996."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 16 in (3) corrected citation to subsection of 61-10-124; and made minor changes in style.

Reducible Loads — Compliance of State Statutes With Federal Law: Montana oversize and overweight vehicle permit provisions, as applied to reducible loads, comply with federal law and regulations because the provisions became grandfathered exceptions after July 1, 1956. Therefore, with the exception of longer combination vehicles, which are subject to 1991 law, and groups of two or more consecutive axles, whose overall gross weight is subject to 1974 law, Montana's oversize and overweight vehicle permit provisions in effect on July 1, 1956, may be applied to vehicles carrying reducible loads. 48 A.G. Case Notes

Special Permit Valid Under Federal-Aid Highway Act: The Montana state Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) on July 1, 1956, had the authority under section 32-1123, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), to issue special permits for overweight vehicles. Since this statute had been reenacted into law each time other provisions of the section were changed, continuous authority had been provided for the issuance of the special permits. The state Highway Commission (now Transportation Commission) had the power to issue permits without jeopardizing the right of the State of Montana to receive federal funds for highway purposes. (c) truck-trailer-trailer operations are restricted to the specified routes those vehicles operated on before July 1, 1987; and

(d) a person, firm, or corporation applying for a permit provides the department of transportation with an affidavit designating the routes the vehicle operated on before July 1, 1987”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 320 in (3)(a), in three places, inserted reference to subsection (7); inserted (7) to allow issuance of special permits for certain truck-trailer-trailer combinations operated before July 1, 1987; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 512 substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 672 in (3)(a) inserted third and fourth sentences concerning combined trailer length and semitrailer cargo unit length of Rocky Mountain double and excepting Rocky Mountain double from combination length limit; in (3)(c), near beginning after "gross weight", substituted "fees required by 61-10-201 and 61-10-202" for "fee required by 61-10-203"; and in (3)(d), near beginning before "length", inserted "combination".

Effective Date: Section 1, Ch. 604, L. 1991, amended 1-2-201 to provide that "Every statute providing for taxation or the imposition of a fee on motor vehicles takes effect on the first day of January following its passage and approval unless a different time is prescribed therein". The Code Commissioner has determined that pursuant to sec. 1, Ch. 604, L. 1991, the amendment to this section by Ch. 672 is effective January 1, 1992.

1989 Amendment: In (2) and (3)(a) inserted reference to subsection (3)(d); inserted (3)(d) referring to combinations of vehicles between 95 feet and 100 feet in length; and made minor change in phraseology. Amendment effective April 4, 1989.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 10, L. 1989, repealed sec. 8, Ch. 474, L. 1987, which terminated on July 1, 1989, the amendments made by Ch. 474. Repealer effective February 15, 1989.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 73 near middle of (3)(a) increased height from 13½ to 14 feet.

In Chapter 248 section 1 was codified as subsection (1). Section 2 inserted (5) establishing criteria and fee for issuance of 30-day special permit for overweight crane.

Chapter 370 in (2), at end after "department", and in (4), near middle of second sentence after "department", inserted "of highways".

Chapter 474, near beginning of (2) and (3)(a), inserted reference to subsection (6); in third sentence of (3)(a), after "trailers", inserted "or more than two units designed for or used to carry a load", after "permitted" substituted "except as provided in subsection (6)" for "under this section", and near beginning of fourth sentence inserted "and special permits under subsection (6) must specify"; and inserted (6) establishing conditions under which Department may issue special permits for truck-trailer-trailer or truck-semitrailer-trailer-trailer combinations.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 73, L. 1987, read: "WHEREAS, to establish uniformity with neighboring states in the matter of height of trucks traveling between states, Montana must adopt a height limit of 14 feet."

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 474, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana is surrounded by states and provinces that allow motor carriers to pull special vehicle combinations upon their four-lane highways while Montana prohibits such combinations; and

WHEREAS, shippers will increasingly route their shipments around Montana to the detriment of Montana's transportation industry and of public revenues if special vehicle combinations continue to be excluded here; and

WHEREAS, highway traffic safety will be enhanced by the allowance and strict regulation of special vehicle combinations."

1983 Amendments: Chapter 462 inserted (2)(c) establishing the allowable gross weight of a five-axle logging vehicle as 80,000 pounds. This amendment was effective April 12, 1983.

Chapter 487, in (2)(a) in first sentence, substituted "95" for "85" and at end inserted two sentences prohibiting special permits for vehicle combinations of more than two trailers and allowing special permits for vehicle combinations to prescribe conditions of operation.

1981 Amendment: Increased the trip permit fee from $6 to $10 and inserted the $75 fee for term permits.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 24 inserted (2)(a)(vii) providing a fee of $3,000 for a term permit for a load in excess of statutory limits but that does not exceed 35,000 pounds in excess axle weight; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 311 inserted (2)(a)(v) through (2)(a)(vii) imposing fees for term permits for loads in excess of the limits in 61-10-107(1) and not over a specific excess axle weight with no axle or axle group exceeding the maximum weight allowed by a weight analysis; and in (2)(d) in two places after "department" inserted "of transportation". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 71 inserted (2)(a)(ii) providing for a $500 term permit for a load not exceeding a total of 10,000 pounds in excess axle weight, with no single axle exceeding 5,000 pounds in excess axle weight; inserted (2)(a)(iii) providing for a $750 term permit for a load not exceeding a total of 15,000 pounds in excess axle weight, with no single axle exceeding 5,000 pounds in excess axle weight; inserted (2)(a)(iv) providing for a $1,000 term permit for a load not exceeding a total of 20,000 pounds in excess axle weight, with no single axle exceeding 5,000 pounds in excess axle weight; inserted (2)(b) providing that the fees in subsection (2)(a) are annual fees but may be prorated and providing for an additional fee of $10 if the fees are paid other than annually; inserted (2)(c) providing that a permit issued is valid for a period not less than 1 calendar quarter or more than 1 calendar year; and inserted (2)(d) providing that a term permit may not be issued for loads that exceed 10,000 pounds in excess axle weight unless the person applying for the permit has obtained approval from the Department.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 571 in (1), at beginning, deleted "In addition to the permit fee" and at end substituted "provided for by the formula in 61-10-107(1) but that does not exceed axle limits set forth in 61-10-107(1)" for "or the sum of the excess axle loads, whichever is greater"; inserted (2) providing for charging a fee for a term permit for a load not exceeding 5,000 pounds in excess axle weight; inserted (3) providing for charging a fee for a load exceeding the single axle, tandem axle, or axle group limits and listing the fee by poundage; inserted (4) relating to rounding off of mileage and weight; inserted (5) providing that a vehicle must be licensed to the maximum allowable weight before an overweight permit may be issued; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1994.

1981 Amendment: Increased the fee in (1) from $5 to $10, in (2) from $15 to $30, and in (3) from $25 to $50.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 518 inserted (4) exempting hay grinders and their towing units from weight limits. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 232 deleted former (3)(b) that read: "(b) a permit has been issued under 61-10-107(3), regardless of the vehicle's gross weight, specifying the route from point of loading to the nearest nonrestricted road"; inserted (3)(c) regarding use of direct route; deleted (4) that read: "(4) A permit referred to in subsection (3) may be revoked for violating any condition of the permit"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 236 in (1) deleted reference to 61-10-105; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 57 in (2), near beginning of third sentence, inserted reference to Department of Transportation and at end inserted "subject to the provisions of subsection (3)"; inserted (3) regarding prohibition or restriction of a vehicle loaded with perishable seed potatoes; inserted (4) regarding revocation of a transportation permit; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 57, L. 1993, provided: "The legislature in 1991 temporarily prohibited the department of transportation from subjecting seed potato haulers to weight and speed restrictions under certain conditions and with a permit requirement. It is the intent of the legislature to now make that prohibition permanent under the same conditions and permit requirements as were contained in the 1991 temporary law. The legislature expects that with the passage of time, roads will be upgraded and that equipment used by the potato haulers will be upgraded in a fashion that will eliminate the wear and tear on roads that makes special weight and speed restrictions necessary. For the time being, the legislature recognizes the necessity of exempting seed potato haulers from special restrictions under certain conditions. The legislature intends to allow the exemption with the understanding that in the future, the people involved in the seed potato industry will continue to work on upgrading their equipment so that eventually the equipment will not require exemptions from special speed and weight limits and that as equipment is replaced, the new equipment will meet regular limits, without special exemptions, that will protect the state's highways."

1991 Amendments: Chapter 476 in (3), in introductory clause, substituted "seed potatoes" for "agricultural seeds"; inserted (3)(b) regarding operation of a vehicle under permit regardless of gross weight; inserted (4) regarding revocation of the permit; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

Chapter 512 substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 476, L. 1991, provided: "It is the intent of the legislature to allow the department of highways to require vehicles transporting perishable seed potatoes on restricted roads to be routed to the nearest road that is not restricted, even if the routing is not the shortest route to the destination."

Termination Date Extended: Section 2, Ch. 476, L. 1991, amended sec. 1, Ch. 237, L. 1989, which extended the termination date for this section, established in sec. 4, Ch. 468, L. 1987, and provided: "This act terminates June 30, 1993."

Termination Provision Amended: Section 1, Ch. 237, L. 1989, amended sec. 4, Ch. 468, L. 1987, to extend termination date to June 30, 1991. Amendment effective March 22, 1989.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 370 in (2), at beginning of first and second sentences after "department", inserted "of highways".

Chapter 468 at beginning of (1) inserted "Neither the department nor" and after "local authority may" deleted "not"; in (2), at end of third sentence, inserted "subject to the provisions of subsection (3)"; and inserted (3) establishing conditions under which Department or local authority may impose restriction on weight of vehicle loaded with perishable agricultural seeds that is traveling on public highway. Amendment terminates June 30, 1991.

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 10, L. 1989, repealed sec. 8, Ch. 474, L. 1987, which terminated this section July 1, 1989. Repealer effective February 15, 1989.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 474, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this act because section 4 [5] [61-10-129] grants to the department of highways [now department of transportation] authority to make rules prescribing qualifications of drivers and for the equipping and operation of special vehicle combinations."

The legislature intends that the rules for operation of special vehicle combinations be consistent with those rules adopted by states and provinces allowing these vehicle combinations. Rules are to include provisions for general operation, equipment, combination description, drivers, speed, stability, weight, load sequence, operational procedures, accidents, and insurance.

The legislature intends that the department of highways may restrict the operation of special vehicle combinations during times or periods when adverse conditions, weather, or other safety considerations make such operation unsafe or inadvisable."

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 369 in (3) and (4) in first sentences increased distance to 100-mile radius from 50-mile radius; in (3) deleted former fourth sentence that read: "The truck may not be operated in excess of 40 miles per hour"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 574 in (4) near beginning after "limitations" deleted "and until July 1, 1991, may be operated within the same tolerances granted trucks under subsection (3)"; at end of (6)(a) substituted "state general fund" for "county general fund in the county in which the permittee declares the greatest amount of time will be spent to operate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

1991 Amendment: Substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In introductory clause of (1) inserted "overlength" and substituted "may pay a special permit fee" for "shall pay a fee"; in introductory clause of (2) inserted "overlength" and before "fee" inserted "special permit"; inserted (3) relating to transport of agricultural products under a custom combiner's special permit; inserted (4) relating to combine trailers; deleted former (6) that read: "(6) Any owner or operator of any equipment included in the unit definition in subsection (1) or (2) of this section who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor and punishable by a fine of not more than $300 or by a sentence of not more than 60 days in the county jail, or both"; and inserted (8) authorizing the adoption of administrative rules. Amendment effective March 20, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 183, L. 1989, provided: "This bill requires a statement of intent because [subsection (8) of section 1] [61-10-130(8)] authorizes the department of highways [now department of transportation] to adopt administrative rules to implement the act. The act is intended to provide a special permit fee for the vehicles and equipment of custom combiners operating in the state, in lieu of the usual vehicle license fees and gross vehicle weight, overwidth, overlength, and overheight fees otherwise required. The custom combiner has the option of paying the regular fees.

The act also permits the use of the custom combiner's truck or trailer to haul grain, but only from the field to the point of first unloading, within certain limitations. This authority is given so that the combiner may assist the producer in getting the harvested grain out of the field and is not intended to allow transportation of the grain in commerce.

It is the intent of the legislature that the department of highways adopt necessary rules to implement the custom combiner's special permit and to regulate the operation of the vehicles involved in conformity with the act and special permit requirements."

1985 Amendment: In first sentence of (1) made minor changes in phraseology for clarity.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 48 deleted "for a period beginning July 1 and ending October 31" after "per unit" at end of the first sentence in (1); at end of first sentence in (2), deleted "for a period beginning May 1 and ending October 31 of the same year" after "per unit"; at end of (3), substituted "the calendar year in which the fee is collected" for "a period beginning July 1 and ending October 31"; and in (4), changed "December 1" to "January 31".

Chapter 277 substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 340 in (1)(a) near end of first sentence after “portable” inserted “scales used on an engineered site”, and in second sentence after “nearest” substituted “stationary scales or engineered site for use of portable scales if those stationary scales or an engineered site is” for “scales if those scales are”; in (3) at end of second sentence after “crews” inserted “when the portable scales are used on an engineered site”; inserted (4) defining engineered site; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 366 in (1)(b) at beginning substituted “If it is determined in the weighing process that the maximum allowable weights specified in 61-10-101 through 61-10-104 and 61-10-106 through 61-10-110 have been exceeded, the peace officer, officer of the highway patrol, or employee of the department of transportation” for “That person”; deleted former (4) through (7) that read: “(4) The department of transportation shall work with the highway patrol in the enforcement of safety standards adopted pursuant to 44-1-1005. For the purposes of the joint enforcement, the highway patrol is designated as the lead agency. The highway patrol and the department of transportation shall cooperate to ensure minimum duplication and maximum coordination of enforcement effort.

(5) In order to enforce compliance with safety standards adopted pursuant to 44-1-1005, the department of transportation shall designate employees as peace officers. The designated employees must be employed in the administration of the motor carrier services functions of the department of transportation. Each employee designated as a peace officer may:

(a) issue citations and make arrests in connection with violations of safety standards adopted under 44-1-1005;

(b) issue summons;

(c) accept bail;

(d) serve warrants for arrest;

(e) make reasonable inspections of cargo carried by commercial motor vehicles;

(f) make reasonable safety inspections of commercial motor vehicles used by motor carriers; and

(g) require production of documents relating to the cargo, driver, routing, or ownership of the commercial motor vehicles.

(6) In addition to other enforcement duties assigned under this section, an employee of the department of transportation who is appointed pursuant to 61-12-201 has:

(a) the same authority to enforce provisions of the motor carriers law as that granted the public service commission under 69-12-203;

(b) the duty to secure or make copies, or both, of all bills of lading or other evidence of delivery for shipment of agricultural seeds as defined in 80-5-120 that have been sold or are intended for sale in Montana and to forward the copies to the department of agriculture within 24 hours of the date the bill of lading was obtained; and

(c) the authority, if probable cause exists, to stop and inspect a supply tank connected to the engine of any diesel-powered motor vehicle operating on the public highways of this state in order to determine compliance with Title 15, chapter 70, part 3.

(7) The department of transportation shall report to the revenue and transportation interim committee at least once each year on its enforcement, pursuant to the authority provided in subsection (6)(c), of the provisions of Title 15, chapter 70, part 3, and on any impacts that enforcement has had on the state special revenue fund”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 57 in first sentence of (1), after “61-10-110”, inserted “except recreational vehicles as defined in 61-1-132”; and in (3), after “G.V.W.”, inserted “and recreational vehicles as defined in 61-1-132 (that are not new or used recreational vehicles traveling into or through Montana for delivery to a distributor or a dealer)”.

Chapter 446 inserted (6)(b) relating to documents on shipments of agricultural seeds. Amendment effective April 5, 1989, and terminates July 1, 1991.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 446, L. 1989, provided: “WHEREAS, the growth and spread of noxious weeds in the State of Montana has become one of the single greatest natural threats to the state’s agricultural industry and economy; and

WHEREAS, this threat frequently materializes when seeds shipped into this state contain unlawful noxious weed seeds which become planted with agricultural seed crops before the Department of Agriculture has the knowledge and opportunity to embargo the shipment; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature of the State of Montana finds it appropriate to use existing Department of Highways personnel and the facilities in the Gross Vehicle Weight Division to obtain bills of lading on all seed shipments into the state and forward the bills of lading to the Montana Department of Agriculture in order to enhance its enforcement capabilities.”

1987 Amendment: Throughout section, after “department”, inserted “of highways”.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (4) requiring department to work with highway patrol in enforcement of motor safety standards; inserted (5) requiring department to designate employees as peace officers with authority to enforce compliance with motor safety standards; and deleted second and third sentences of former (4) that read: “This section does not relieve the public service commission from its responsibility as the lead agency as required in 69-12-201 through 69-12-203 and 69-12-205. Case Notes

Escape From Arresting Officer — Physical Restraint Not Prerequisite of Arrest: A valid arrest is an underlying element of “official detention” as that term is used in 45-7-306 and is therefore also an underlying element of the offense of escape. A valid arrest occurred when a Department of Highways (now Department of Transportation) enforcement officer stopped a truck to weigh it and a passenger began to unload it, threatened the officer when he was told to stop unloading, and was twice told he was under arrest. Actual physical restraint of the passenger is not a prerequisite to a valid arrest. The standard for an arrest when there is no physical restraint is whether a reasonable person, innocent of any crime, would have felt free to walk away under the circumstances. The passenger was properly charged with and convicted of the offense of escape. St. v. Thornton, 218 M 317, 708 P2d 273, 42 St. Rep. 1614 (1985), followed, as to the lack of need for physical restraint, in St. v. Widenhofer, 286 M 341, 950 P2d 1383, 54 St. Rep. 1438 (1997).

Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 62 in (2), in five places before "7%", deleted reference to former 5% allowable axle weight limitation and after "7%" deleted reference to exception for a vehicle or combination of vehicles transporting livestock; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 236 in (1), near end, deleted reference to 61-10-105; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (2)(a), at beginning, substituted "may be required to be" for "must be"; inserted (2)(b) regarding issuance of a permit; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: In (2), in last half of first sentence substituted "allowable total gross weight limitations ... transporting livestock" for "allowable weight limitations by more than 7%", in second sentence substituted "total gross or axle weight limitations by more than 5%, or 7% if the vehicle or combination of vehicles is transporting livestock" for "weight limitations by more than 7%", and in last sentence substituted present language for "Violations in excess of 7% are subject to the fines provided in 61-10-145, and all loads in excess of 7% must be adjusted or reduced to conform to the size and weight limitations before the vehicle or combination of vehicles is moved from the point of weighing."

1981 Amendment: In (3) substituted the language relating to penalties for vehicles or combinations of vehicles exceeding the allowable weight limitations for former text that read: "The operator of a vehicle who has received a permit for the movement of agricultural products during harvest season under 61-10-107 is exempt from the single trip permit fee of $10 charged under subsection (2)."

Case Notes

Evidence of Compliance: A prosecution was instituted for the alleged overweight of a truck driven by the defendant for violation of section 32-1123, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed). The defendant offered evidence which showed that he had been weighed by a state police weighing station a few hours earlier and was found to be within the legal limit. It was reversible error for the court to direct the jury to return a verdict of guilty. St. v. Baillarger, 126 M 310, 249 P2d 799 (1952).

61-10-145. Penalties.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 232 deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The penalties in subsection (1) do not apply to an operator who fails to secure a special permit as provided for in 61-10-107(3) if the vehicle or combination of vehicles is not overweight with that permit. The failure to obtain the special permit is punishable under 61-10-146 and under this section as provided in 61-10-146, and the operator is required to purchase the permit. If the vehicle or combination of vehicles exceeds the weight limitations allowed by special permit and the operator fails to obtain a permit under 61-10-107(3), the penalties of subsection (1) apply to the weight exceeding 80,000 pounds"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1998.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 236 in (1), in two places, and in (3) deleted reference to 61-10-105. Amendment effective March 24, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 70 in (1)(b) increased penalty from $50 to $75; in (1)(c) increased penalty from $70 to $125; in (1)(d) increased penalty from $100 to $175; in (1)(e) increased penalty from $160 to $250; in (1)(f) increased penalty from $220 to $275; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (4), in second sentence after "under 61-10-146", inserted "and under this section as provided in 61-10-146"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) relating to penalties for motor vehicles equipped with a retractable axle.

1983 Amendment: In (1), in first sentence changed fine from "not less than $15 or more than $50" to "not less than $30 or more than $100"; increased fines in subsections (1)(a) through (1)(l) as follows: (1)(a), from $15 to $30; (1)(b), from $25 to $50; (1)(c), from $35 to $70; (1)(d), from $50 to $100; (1)(e), from $80 to $160; (1)(f), from $110 to $220; (1)(g), from $150 to $300; (1)(h), from $200 to $400; (1)(i), from $250 to $500; (1)(j), from $300 to $600; (1)(k), from $500 to $1,000; and (1)(l), from $1,000 to $2,000; inserted (3) relating to penalties for failure to secure a special permit; and deleted former (4), which read: "All fines and forfeitures shall be remitted monthly by the county treasurer to the state treasurer for deposit in the state general fund."

1981 Amendment: Deleted term of imprisonment for violating 61-10-101 through 61-10-110 in (1); added subsection (3) establishing that violation of section is a misdemeanor.

Case Notes

Instructions to Jury: In a prosecution for the overweight of a truck in violation of section 32-1123, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), it was reversible error for the judge to instruct the jury that they could fix the fine at not less than $10 nor more than $50, or could leave the fixing of the fine to the court, since it did not state the law correctly. The penalty prescribed is fine or imprisonment and that is what the jury should have been informed. St. v. Baillarger, 126 M 310, 249 P2d 799 (1952).

1991 Amendment: Substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 371, L. 1989, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants rulemaking authority to the department of highways [now department of transportation] to implement, interpret, and carry out MCA provisions relating to vehicle size and weight, licensing requirements, and special permits.

The legislature intends that the department have discretion to adopt rules or to amend existing rules in a manner that will promote the enforcement of provisions regulating vehicles pursuant to Title 61, chapter 10. It is intended that the department, with its expertise and experience in the administration and enforcement of gross vehicle weight laws, supplement the statutory provisions with enforceable rules necessary to further the administration and regulation of vehicles under chapter 10.

It is contemplated that the rules supplement and interpret the provisions of chapter 10 by, among other things, providing:

- (1) guidance and direction for the administration and collection of gross vehicle weight fees;
- (2) implementation and regulation of the permit systems authorized by statute; and
- (3) regulation of the movement of vehicles with oversize or overweight loads for the purposes of ensuring highway safety and protecting the state highway system.

The legislature intends this rulemaking authority to apply to the existing provisions of chapter 10 as well as to any legislation passed in this session amending chapter 10."

Case Notes

No Youth Court Authority to Expunge DUI Offenses — Elements of Judicial Estoppel Not Met: Following Darrah's completion of a Youth Drug Court program in 2004, the Youth Court ordered that Darrah's prior criminal record be expunged, including a previous minor in possession offense and a 2002 DUI. Darrah was subsequently charged in 2005 with second offense DUI, based on the prior 2002 DUI, and in 2006 Darrah was charged with third offense DUI. Citing the principle of judicial estoppel, Darrah asserted that because the Youth Court record had been expunged, the 2002 DUI should not count against him. The District Court disagreed and Darrah appealed. The Supreme Court applied the elements of judicial estoppel set out in Vogel v. Intercontinental Truck Body, Inc., 2006 MT 131, 332 M 322, 137 P3d 573 (2006), and determined that Darrah had failed to demonstrate that each element was met, so judicial estoppel did not apply. Further, there is no authority under which the Youth Court could order expungement of Darrah's DUI offenses. The District Court was affirmed. St. v. Darrah, 2009 MT 96, 350 M 70, 205 P3d 792 (2009), following St. v. Chesley, 2004 MT 165, 322 M 26, 92 P3d 1212 (2004).

Justice's Court — No Authority to Vacate Conviction and Order Alteration of Driver's Civil Records: A Justice's Court does not have authority to vacate a conviction or to direct alteration of the records of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Therefore, a Justice's Court could not order the Division to strike a prior DUI conviction and not consider it in revoking the driver's license on a second conviction. The District Court properly granted the Division's motion to quash a Writ of Mandate issued by the District Court staying the actions of the Division. Lancaster v. Dept. of Justice, 218 M 97, 706 P2d 126, 42 St. Rep. 1425 (1985).

Implied Consent Suspension Not Relieved by Guilty Plea: Respondent's license was suspended when he refused to take a breath test. Two weeks after arrest, respondent pleaded guilty to the offense of DUI. The District Court found that the plea of guilty constituted a withdrawal of his refusal to take breath test under the implied consent statute and recommended respondent receive a probationary license. Supreme Court reversed and reinstated suspension of respondent's license. The revocation of a driver's license is a civil sanction, not a criminal penalty, and there is no connection between the DUI statute and the implied consent statute. A violation of both statutes means the suspensions run concurrently. Respondent was not eligible for a probationary license until the 90-day implied consent suspension was completed. In re Petition of Burnham, 217 M 513, 705 P2d 603, 42 St. Rep. 1342 (1985), followed in In re Blake, 220 M 27, 712 P2d 1338, 43 St. Rep. 143 (1986), and Walker v. St., 229 M 331, 746 P2d 624, 44 St. Rep. 2008 (1987).

State Law Conflicting With Local Ordinances: Because the Legislature prior to the 1981 amendments to 61-8-714 had provided that jail sentences could not be imposed for the first or second offense of driving under the influence of alcohol, municipal ordinances addressing such offense must be consistent with state law. 37 A.G. 2011 Amendment: Chapter 296 inserted (3)(a) and (3)(b) relating to CDLIS driver records; in (3)(c) at end substituted "CDLIS driver record" for "person's individual Montana driving record"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 30, 2012.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 41 inserted (1)(c) concerning receipt and use of computer-generated driving record; and in (5)(b) at end deleted "A court or the office of a clerk of court of this state that is electronically connected by a terminal device to the department's central database of electronic individual Montana driving records may receive and use as evidence without further foundation the computer-generated certified information obtained by the terminal device from the file. An authorized employee of a court of record of this state may certify in writing that an order, record, or paper was produced from a terminal device that is located in and under the control of the court and that is connected to the department's central database of electronic individual Montana driving records files and that the order, record, or paper was not altered in any way"; Amendment effective January 1, 2010.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 428 inserted (2)(c) requiring the department to retain records in accordance with federal law. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Chapter 596 substituted (1) concerning central database of electronic files for former text that read: "The department shall file every application for a driver's license received by it and shall maintain suitable indexes containing, in alphabetical order:

- (a) all applications denied and on each the reasons for denial;
- (b) all applications granted; and

(c) the name of each licensee whose license has been suspended or revoked by the department and after each name the reasons for the action"; substituted (2)(a) concerning content for driving record for former text that read: "The department shall also file all accident reports and abstracts of court records of convictions received by it under the laws of this state. The department shall maintain records in a manner that allows an individual record of each licensee, showing the convictions of the licensee and certain traffic accidents in which the licensee has been involved. The records must be readily ascertainable and available for the consideration of the department upon any application for renewal of a license and at other suitable times. A record of involvement in a traffic accident may not be entered on a licensee's record unless the licensee was convicted, as defined in 61-11-203, for an act causally related to the accident"; in (2)(b) near beginning substituted "person" for "licensee" and at end substituted "person's individual Montana driving record" for "licensee's record"; in (3) near end after "forward" substituted "by electronic or other means, a report of the conviction" for "a certified copy of the record" and at end inserted "or licensed"; deleted former (4) that read: "(4) The department may photograph, microphotograph, photostat, or reproduce on film any of its records. The film or reproducing material must be durable, and the device used to reproduce the records on the film or material must accurately reproduce and perpetuate the original records. A photograph, microphotograph, photostatic copy, or photographic film of the original record is an original record for all purposes and is admissible in evidence in all courts or administrative agencies. A facsimile, exemplification, or certified copy of the original record is a transcript of the original for purposes stated in this section"; in (5)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause, after "when the" inserted "reproduction of the information is signed by a named custodian of the record and the", after "certification" deleted "by a custodian of the record", and in form substituted "61-11-102(5)" for "61-11-102(6)"; inserted (5)(b) concerning certification from electronic files; inserted (6) concerning removal of record from active database; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 428 in (2)(a) in second sentence after "maintain" substituted "records in a manner that allows" for "convenient records or make suitable notations in order that"; inserted (2)(b) requiring the department to record an imminent hazard disqualification; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Applicability: Section 23(3), Ch. 428, L. 2003, provided that this section applies to conduct or offenses that occur on or after October 1, 2003.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (4) through (6) relating to reproduction and computer storage of Department records.

1985 Amendment: In (1), (1)(c), (2) in two places, and (3) substituted references to department of justice for references to division of motor vehicles.

Case Notes

Previous DUI Conviction Not to Be Considered for Purposes of Felony DUI — Former Requirement for Expungement of Record Held Self-Executing — Lorash Distinguished — Expungement Applicable to Local Records: Bowles was convicted of DUI in 1977 and did not receive another DUI for 5 years but was convicted of two other DUI offenses after 1982. When Bowles was arrested for DUI in Park County in 1996, Park County charged Bowles with felony DUI, fourth offense, counting the 1977 conviction as one of three prior convictions. Bowles moved for dismissal of the felony charge, contending that the 1977 record should have been expunged pursuant to the 1981 version of 61-8-714(5), and the District Court granted the motion. The Supreme Court held that the District Court properly dismissed the felony charge because the expungement provision in effect at the time, unlike the expungement provision in 46-18-204 that was litigated in St. v. Lorash, 238 M 345, 777 P2d 884 (1989), was self-executing and did not require the defendant to move the court to have the record of conviction expunged. The requirement for expungement applied to the 1977 conviction, despite the change in the law in 1989 requiring that the record be held as confidential criminal justice information, because the requirement for expungement was self-executing. The Supreme Court also noted that the expungement requirement applied to records of conviction notwithstanding the requirement in this section that the Department of Justice maintain records of convictions of licensees. Further, the Supreme Court also held, relying upon St. v. Brander, 280 M 148, 930 P2d 31 (1996), that because "expungement" means to destroy and was without limitation, all traces of the conviction record should have been destroyed, that the record of the 1977 conviction was maintained by the Park County Sheriff in violation of the law, and that the 1977 county conviction record should not have been used as the basis for the felony charge. In response to the state's argument that the expungement requirement, enacted in 1981, applied prospectively only to convictions occurring after the requirement's effective date, the Supreme Court noted that it had rejected that argument in St. v. Reams, 284 M 448, 945 P2d 52, 54 St. Rep. 972 (1997). St. v. Bowles, 284 M 490, 947 P2d 52, 54 St. Rep. 962 (1997).

Admissibility of Certified Abstract of Driving History and Copy of Suspension Notification Letter: Once certified as set out in subsection (6) of this section, the authenticity of motor vehicle license information is established for purposes of admissibility without extrinsic evidence. Therefore, a certified abstract of driving history was admissible as was a certified copy of a suspension notification letter, which fell within the class of self-authenticating documents under Rule 902, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10); the public document exception to the hearsay rule under Rule 803, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10); and the requirements of the best evidence rule under Rule 1005, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). Taken together, this evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction for driving with a suspended license. Billings v. Lindell, 236 M 519, 771 P2d 134, 46 St. Rep. 557 (1989).

Justice's Court — No Authority to Vacate Conviction and Order Alteration of Driver's Civil Records: A Justice's Court does not have authority to vacate a conviction or to direct alteration of the records of the Division of Motor Vehicles. Therefore, a Justice's Court could not order the Division to strike a prior DUI conviction and not consider it in revoking the driver's license on a second conviction. The District Court properly granted the Division's motion to quash a Writ of Mandate issued by the District Court staying the actions of the Division. Lancaster v. Dept. of Justice, 218 M 97, 706 P2d 126, 42 St. Rep. 1425 (1985).

Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 363 at beginning of (1) substituted "Subject to the provisions of subsection (2)" for "Except as provided in subsection (2)"; and substituted (2) prohibiting disclosure of information except pursuant to 61-11-507, 61-11-508, or 61-11-509 for former text that read: "Unless the merits of public disclosure exceed the demands of individual privacy, a driving record of a licensee released under subsection (1) may not disclose an individual's address, social security number, photograph, medical or disability information, or information provided through means of a tracking device." Amendment effective April 23, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 416 in (1) after "request" deleted "and with the licensee's approval"; deleted former (1)(a) that read: "(a) licensee identification data, which may not include the individual's residence address, or information provided through means of an electronic tracking device"; inserted (2) prohibiting disclosure of individual's address, social security number, photograph, medical or disability information, or information provided by tracking device when driving record released unless public disclosure exceeds individual privacy demands; deleted second sentence in (3) that read: "The department shall, upon request, furnish a criminal justice agency or any person or firm having a legitimate purpose as determined by the department with the individual Montana driving record of a licensee showing the items listed in subsections (1)(a) through (1)(d)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 346 in (1), after "individual", inserted "Montana"; in (1)(a), after "data", inserted "which may not include the individual's residence address, or information provided through means of an electronic tracking device"; in second sentence of (2), after "individual", inserted "Montana"; in first sentence of (3) increased fee from $3 to $4 and after "each" inserted "individual Montana driving", in second sentence, after "certified", inserted "Montana", and at beginning of third sentence substituted "All" for "Individual"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause and after "request" inserted "and with the licensee's approval"; in (1)(a), after "data", deleted "and address"; inserted last sentence in (2) requiring Department to furnish driving record to agency or individual determined to have legitimate purpose; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 525, L. 1991, provided: "To implement 61-11-105(2), a statement of intent is required for this bill to provide guidelines for the adoption of rules under which the department of justice may determine if a person or firm has a legitimate purpose for requesting the individual driving record of a licensee. "Legitimate purpose" includes the formation and execution of a contract when the contract relies in part upon the contents of an individual's driving record."

1989 Amendment: Inserted (1) specifying information required to be furnished by Department; inserted (3) establishing fees for providing information; and made minor change in phraseology.

1985 Amendment: Substituted reference to department of justice for reference to division of motor vehicles.

Part 2

Habitual Traffic Offenders

Part Case Notes

Unlawful Operation of Motor Vehicle by Minor — Not Violative of Habitual Traffic Offender Law: A finding that a youth has violated 61-12-601 (now repealed) upholds the policy of the habitual traffic offender law and is consistent with the philosophy of emphasizing rehabilitation over retribution. St. v. Gee, 222 M 498, 723 P2d 934, 43 St. Rep. 1452 (1986).

Validity of Citations May Not Be Challenged in Habitual Offender Hearing — Act Constitutional: Defendant, against whom proceedings were brought under the habitual traffic offender law, challenged the law's constitutionality. The District Court denied defendant's constitutional claims and adjudged defendant a habitual offender. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed and held: (1) defendant had adequate notification of all citations involved, even though one citation was omitted from the complaint, because the record substantiated the convictions and there was no ambiguity regarding the convictions; (2) the law does not violate due process or constitute cruel and unusual punishment; (3) the statutory point system is not arbitrary or capricious; (4) traffic offender points that previously resulted in license suspension may be used to determine habitual offender status; (5) due process does not require that a ticketed motorist be advised that habitual traffic offender points result from a conviction; (6) in a hearing to determine habitual offender status, the defendant cannot collaterally attack a citation for which he forfeited bail; (7) the fact that defendant was not advised of his right to counsel in relation to several citations does not prevent use of those citations to determine habitual offender status; and (8) in a license revocation hearing, the District Court Judge does not have power to issue a probationary license, regardless of 3-5-311. State ex rel. Majerus v. Carter, 214 M 272, 693 P2d 501, 41 St. Rep. 2468 (1984), followed in part and distinguished in part in In re Driver's License of Anderson, 284 M 109, 943 P2d 978, 54 St. Rep. 797 (1997).

Administrative Suspension Not to Remove Habitual Offender Points: The Highway Patrol petitioned to have defendant formally declared a habitual traffic offender. The District Court refused, contending that the defendant had accumulated only 11 points since his license had been suspended under 61-5-206. At that time he had 27 habitual offender points. The District Court held that those points were removed by the administrative suspension. The Supreme Court vacated the judgment, holding that the removal of points required by 61-11-211 applied only to revocations and not to administrative suspensions. No contrary legislative intent is indicated by the statutes. Suspension of a license under 61-5-206 is a civil proceeding and not a criminal prosecution. The deprivation of the driving privilege under 61-5-206 is intended to protect the public and is not done for the punishment of the individual. The Supreme Court held that the same traffic offense may be used first to suspend a license under 61-5-206, and then to be cumulated with additional points to allow revocation as a habitual offender. State ex rel. Griffith v. Brustkern, 202 M 438, 658 P2d 410, 40 St. Rep. 194 (1983).

2011 Amendment: Chapter 19 reoutlined section to remove point schedule used to determine habitual traffic offenders from definition of habitual traffic offender and relocate it in (2); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 155 in (6) near end of first sentence after "safety" deleted "size, weight, and load restrictions". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 428 in definition of conviction substituted "has the meaning provided in 61-5-213" for "means a finding of guilt by duly constituted judicial authority, a plea of guilty or nolo contendere, or a forfeiture of bail, bond, or other security deposited to secure appearance by a person charged with having committed any offense relating to the use or operation of a motor vehicle that is prohibited by law, ordinance, or administrative order"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Chapter 542 in (2)(f) near end substituted "described" for "defined"; in (5) at end after "highway" deleted "as the term is defined in 61-1-201"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 329 in definition of habitual traffic offender in (d) substituted "0.08" for "0.10". Amendment effective April 15, 2003.

Chapter 556 deleted definition of driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement that read: "'Driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement" means a person who within a 2-year period accumulates 18 or more conviction points according to the schedule specified in subsection (3)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 218 inserted definition of driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 43 in (2)(l) after "speeding" inserted "except as provided in 61-8-725(2)". Amendment effective May 28, 1999.

Chapter 309 inserted definition of moving violation; and inserted (6) regarding what constitutes traffic regulation. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Chapter 395 in definition of conviction inserted "or nolo contendere"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Severability: Section 8, Ch. 43, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 25, Ch. 309, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] applies to license applications, renewals, and reexaminations submitted after September 30, 1999."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 393 in definition of habitual traffic offender, in (j) at beginning, substituted "any of the" for "a" and after "protection" substituted "offenses under 61-6-301 and 61-6-302" for "offense under 61-6-304"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 365 in definition of habitual traffic offender inserted (j) allocating 5 points for a mandatory motor vehicle liability protection offense under 61-6-304; and in (2)(k) substituted "subsection (k)" for "subsection (j)".

1989 Amendment: In definition of habitual traffic offender, at end of (b), inserted "or negligent vehicular assault"; and made minor changes in phraseology.

1987 Amendment: Inserted "(3)" before "There shall . . ."; and redesignated former (3) as (4).

1983 Amendment: In (2)(d), after "drugs of any kind" inserted "or operation of a motor vehicle by a person with alcohol concentration of 0.10 or more".

Case Notes

Conviction Held to Not Be Within Three-Year Period: Anderson challenged the Department of Justice's declaration that he was a habitual traffic offender on the basis that he had had three DUI convictions within a 3-year period. Anderson had been convicted of his first DUI by a City Court in 1991 and had appealed that conviction to District Court. In 1996, the parties stipulated to have the case remanded to the City Court for imposition of the sentence. The Supreme Court held that the conviction was in 1991 and not in 1996 when Anderson stipulated to dismiss his appeal and have the case remanded for sentencing and that therefore the conviction was not within the 3-year period. In re Driver's License of Anderson, 284 M 109, 943 P2d 978, 54 St. Rep. 797 (1997).

License Revocation Proceedings No Challenge to Validity of Convictions — Point System Not Arbitrary or Capricious: Licensing drivers is within the police power of the state, and courts will not substitute their opinion for the Legislature's as to point system. A defendant can be charged habitual offender points for citations of which he claims he is innocent because a defendant is not entitled to attack prior convictions in a revocation hearing. In a revocation hearing, a defendant is entitled to dispute only the accuracy of the records, not the propriety of the convictions. State ex rel. Majerus v. Carter, 214 M 272, 693 P2d 501, 41 St. Rep. 2468 (1984), followed in part and distinguished in part in In re Driver's License of Anderson, 284 M 109, 943 P2d 978, 54 St. Rep. 797 (1997).

Violation in Another State Included in Habitual Offender Calculation: Defendant was declared a habitual traffic offender. In order to reach the point designation, a speeding violation from the state of Washington was included. Defendant contended that because violations of Montana speed limits mandated by federal fuel conservation conditions may not be included in the calculation, the Washington violation should not be included. The court found that the Washington violation would not be a mere conservation violation in Montana but a violation of the interstate nighttime speed limit. Under 61-5-401, Montana has adopted a Driver License Compact giving effect to violations committed in other jurisdictions. The Washington violation was correctly treated as a speeding violation in the habitual traffic offender calculation. State ex rel. Landon v. Macek, 208 M 172, 676 P2d 228, 41 St. Rep. 247 (1984).

Habitual Offender — Complaint Invalid for Lack of Substantiation of Prior Charge: The complaint to have defendant declared to be a habitual offender was invalid on its face since one of the offenses claimed against defendant, the point value of which was necessary to meet the 30-point requirement of this section, was a conviction under 61-7-108 for failure to report an accident by the quickest means, but no summons or other information was appended sufficient to substantiate the conviction. With respect to that charge the complaint should have stated the date of the alleged charge, the place it occurred, the arresting officer, but most importantly that there was bodily injury or death involved, or that apparent property damage in the amount of $100 or more was incurred. State ex rel. Sol v. Orcutt, 180 M 15, 588 P2d 996 (1979).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 596 in (2) at end of first sentence substituted "record of the convictions and bond forfeitures upon which the habitual traffic offender designation was based" for "reproduction of the person's driving record as contained in the computer storage device used by the department for recordkeeping". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 556 deleted former (3) and (4) that read: "(3) If the records maintained by the department show that a person's driving record brings the person within the definition of a driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement, the department shall:

- (a) declare the person a driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement;
 - (b) notify the person that unless the person enrolls in and successfully completes, within 90 days of notification, a certified driver rehabilitation and improvement course, as provided in 61-2-302, the person's driver's license will be suspended for a period not to exceed 6 months or until the person has successfully completed the course, whichever occurs first;
 - (c) provide the person with a list of certified driver rehabilitation and improvement courses and information about how the person may comply with the provisions of this subsection (3) if a driver rehabilitation and improvement program does not exist near the person's residence; and
 - (d) send the notice as provided in subsection (2).
- (4) If the person fails to enroll in a certified driver rehabilitation and improvement program or fails to successfully complete the program or an appropriate substitute within 90 days, the department may suspend the person's driver's license as provided in 61-5-206 for a period not to exceed 6 months or until the person has successfully completed the course, whichever occurs first." Amendment effective May 5, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 218 inserted (3) concerning declaration of and notice to a person who is a driver in need of rehabilitation and improvement; inserted (4) concerning license suspension for failure to enroll in certified driver rehabilitation and improvement program; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 309 in second sentence in (2) substituted “certified reproduction” for “certified copy” and after “record” substituted “as contained in the computer storage device used by the department for recordkeeping” for “and copies of all relevant abstracts of convictions and bond forfeitures”. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Applicability: Section 25, Ch. 309, L. 1999, provided: “[This act] applies to license applications, renewals, and reexaminations submitted after September 30, 1999.”

1995 Amendment: Chapter 338 in (1), after “habitual traffic offender”, deleted “as defined in 61-11-203(2)”; inserted (1)(a) through (1)(c) establishing Department’s duties related to declaration, revocation, and notification relating to habitual traffic offender; in (2) inserted first sentence requiring first-class mail, substituted second sentence relating to certified copy of convictions and bond forfeitures for “forthwith certify two copies of that person’s driving record and two copies of all relevant abstracts of conviction”, and substituted last two sentences relating to notice of right to appeal declaration and revocation for former last two sentences that read: “One copy of the record and abstracts shall be certified to the attorney general and one copy of the record and abstracts shall be certified to the county attorney for the county wherein the person is found. If the person is not licensed by Montana to drive a motor vehicle but is licensed in another state, the department may certify the copy of the records and abstracts to the attorney general and also to the county attorney for the county in which the person is found or, in the alternative, to the county attorney for the county of Lewis and Clark”; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Substituted reference to department of justice for reference to division of motor vehicles in three places.

Case Notes

Notice of Necessity for Driver to Complete Driver Rehabilitation and Improvement Course Not Required Following Repeal of Notice Requirement — Substantive Right Not Affected: Keeney accumulated 30 conviction points in a 3-year period and was notified by the Department of Justice that his driver’s license was revoked for 3 years. Keeney had accumulated 18 conviction points on speeding violations by May 2, 2003, the last points being acquired from a speeding violation in Idaho. Prior to its May 5, 2003, repeal, subsection (3)(b) of this section required that a driver who accumulated 18 or more conviction points be notified of the necessity to complete a driver rehabilitation and improvement course. Keeney asserted that his due process rights were violated when the Department failed to notify him of his status as a habitual offender under the former notice requirement, essentially challenging the perceived retroactive application of the repealed provision. However, the Department was not notified of the Idaho violation until May 28, 2003. Therefore, the Department properly applied the law as it stood on May 5, 2003. The Department did not change the method of calculating points for speeding infractions prior to the repeal and did not punish Keeney for violations that occurred before the repeal, but rather properly considered the previous violations as points against Keeney’s record when he finally accumulated 30 points. Once Keeney reached the 30-point plateau within a 3-year period, he was correctly sent a notice of revocation and afforded the option for judicial review of the revocation. Procedural due process required nothing more because it was not necessary to advise Keeney of his continuing duty to act as a law-abiding citizen. In re Driver’s License of Keeney v. Dept. of Justice, 2006 MT 152, 332 M 446, 139 P3d 814 (2006).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 596 in (2) near middle after "certified" substituted "record of the" for "copy of the abstracts of the records of"; and in (3) in first sentence near middle after "certified" substituted "record" for "abstracts". Amendment effective January 1, 2006.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 338 inserted (1) allowing filing of petition challenging declaration and revocation; inserted (2) requiring Department to give County Attorney certified copies of abstracts of record of convictions and bond forfeitures; in (3) substituted current language relating to hearing requirements for "At the time and place designated in the order, the court shall hold a hearing upon the show cause order. If the court finds that the defendant is not the person named in the verified complaint or that he is not an habitual traffic offender as defined in 61-11-203(2), the proceedings shall be dismissed"; in (4), near beginning of first sentence, substituted "the petitioner is the person declared by the department to be a habitual traffic offender and that the petitioner is a habitual traffic offender" for "the defendant is the same person named in the verified complaint and that the defendant is an habitual traffic offender as defined in 61-11-203(2)" and after "the court shall" substituted "dismiss the petition" for "so find and adjudge the defendant an habitual traffic offender, and by appropriate order direct the person so adjudged to surrender to the court his license to operate a motor vehicle on the streets and highways of this state" and inserted last sentence relating to granting of petition; in (5), near beginning of first sentence after "adverse to the", substituted "petitioner" for "defendant", after "clerk of the court" deleted "wherein the hearing is held", and at end substituted "together with the petitioner's driver's license if the license has not been previously surrendered" for "together with the defendant's license", in second sentence substituted "If the petition is granted" for "If the proceeding is dismissed", after "clerk of the court" deleted "wherein the hearing is held", and after "court's order" substituted "granting the petition" for "dismissing the proceeding, which", in third sentence substituted "grounds upon which the relief was granted" for "grounds upon which the dismissal was based", after "conviction points" inserted "if any", and at end substituted "petitioner" for "defendant", and inserted last sentence requiring correction of petitioner's driving record; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Substituted reference to department of justice for reference to division of motor vehicles in two places.

Case Notes

Driver's License — Property Interest, Not Right — Revocation Not Cruel and Unusual Punishment: Revocation of driver's license under habitual traffic offender's law is civil in nature, and the due process standards are not as strict as in criminal actions. The law's predispositional court hearing satisfies due process rights, and a postdispositional hearing is not necessary. Licensing drivers is within the police power of the state, and the fact that the law gives a judge no discretion to determine who is a habitual traffic offender or the consequences of being one does not constitute cruel or unusual punishment. State ex rel. Majerus v. Carter, 214 M 272, 693 P2d 501, 41 St. Rep. 2468 (1984).

61-11-211. Department to revoke license of habitual offender — removal of points upon revocation.Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 338 at beginning of first sentence substituted "After it declares a person to be a habitual offender" for "Upon receipt of a court order declaring an individual a habitual offender", before "driver's license" inserted "person's", after "driving privilege" deleted "of the individual named in the order", and substituted "date of the declaration" for "date of the order" and at beginning of second sentence deleted "Additionally" and at end, after "remove from", substituted "the person's record the habitual offender points upon which the habitual traffic offender designation was based" for "that individual's record those habitual offender points that were certified to the county attorney in the certification required by 61-11-204".

1991 Amendment: At end of first sentence inserted "subject to the provisions of 61-2-302"; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: Substituted reference to department of justice for reference to division of motor vehicles.

Case Notes

Administrative Suspension Not to Remove Habitual Offender Points: The Highway Patrol petitioned to have defendant formally declared a habitual traffic offender. The District Court refused, contending that the defendant had accumulated only 11 points since his license had been suspended under 61-5-206. At that time he had 27 habitual offender points. The District Court held that those points were removed by the administrative suspension. The Supreme Court vacated the judgment, holding that the removal of points required by 61-11-211 applied only to revocations and not to administrative suspensions. No contrary legislative intent is indicated by the statutes. Suspension of a license under 61-5-206 is a civil proceeding and not a criminal prosecution. The deprivation of the driving privilege under 61-5-206 is intended to protect the public and is not done for the punishment of the individual. The Supreme Court held that the same traffic offense may be used first to suspend a license under 61-5-206, and then to be cumulated with additional points to allow revocation as a habitual offender. *State ex rel. 1991 Amendment: At end of first sentence inserted requirement that Department extend revocation period for an additional 1 year; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Four-Wheeler Driven on Road — Motor Vehicle by Statutory Definition: A four-wheeler driven by the defendant on roads around town was a motor vehicle, as defined in 61-1-101, even if two subsections of the definition applied to it as a motor vehicle. Therefore driving the four-wheeler was covered by the provisions of this section. St. v. Otten, 2011 MT 83, 360 Mont. 144, 253 P.3d 834.

Extreme Emergency — Burden of Proof on Defendant: The extreme emergency provision set forth in this section that would allow a habitual offender to drive is not an element of the offense to be proven by the state. It is a defense, and the burden of proof of that extreme emergency can properly be placed on the defendant. St. v. George, 219 M 377, 711 P2d 1379, 43 St. Rep. 26 (1986).

No Extreme Emergency: The burden of proving extreme emergency is on the defendant. In this case, the defendant has failed to meet that burden as he has not shown by a preponderance of the evidence that it was necessary for him to drive to save life, limb, or property in an extreme emergency. St. v. George, 219 M 377, 711 P2d 1379, 43 St. Rep. 26 (1986).

Witness' Statement Not Referred to in Affidavit — No Ex Post Facto Problem — Admissible as Prior Inconsistent Statement: Defendant was convicted of operating a motor vehicle while designated a habitual traffic offender. Proceeding pro se, the defendant argued on appeal that failure to refer to a witness' statement in the affidavit supporting leave to file information constituted an ex post facto problem. The court held that he simply misunderstood that legal theory. The court further held that the statement, which asserted that defendant drove from Great Falls to Loma, was admissible as a prior inconsistent statement because the witness testified at trial that he, not the defendant, drove that distance. St. v. Grant, 217 M 357, 704 P2d 1064, 42 St. Rep. 1248 (1985).

Section 11, Ch. 468, L. 2005, a coordination section, amended this section in (15) by changing "[section 1]" to "61-1-101".

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

Case Notes

Municipality's Authority to Adopt Ordinance Limiting University Students' Rights to Park on City Streets: A university student association challenged the legality of a city ordinance limiting parking in residential areas near the university to residents of those areas. The Supreme Court held that municipalities have the power to regulate parking and that regulating parking to relieve congestion in certain residential neighborhoods was a reasonable exercise of governmental authority. Assoc. Students v. Missoula, 261 M 231, 862 P2d 380, 50 St. Rep. 1301 (1993).

Escalating Fines for Parking Violations — Unconstitutional: An escalating fine schedule for parking violations where the amount to be paid depends on the length in the delay in paying after being cited is in violation of the basic principle of law that punishment must be for the violation and proportional to the gravity of the offense and hence is violative of Art. II, sec. 28, Mont. Const., which provides that laws for punishment of crime shall be founded on principles of prevention and reformation. Missoula v. Shea, 202 M 286, 661 P2d 410, 40 St. Rep. 91 (1983).

Parking Ordinance — Presumption That Owner Parked Vehicle — Unconstitutional Shifting of Burden: In striking down a parking ordinance, the Supreme Court held that to make the owner of a vehicle prima facie liable upon proof that his vehicle has been parked illegally is equivalent to a presumption that the owner parked the vehicle. The effect of the presumption is to violate constitutional due process requirements by shifting the burden of persuasion to defendant and contradicting the presumption of innocence. Missoula v. Shea, 202 M 286, 661 P2d 410, 40 St. Rep. 91 (1983).

Parking Ordinance — Vicarious Criminal Responsibility: A city may, in the exercise of its police power, enact a parking ordinance that provides that the registered owner of a motor vehicle is vicariously criminally responsible for illegal parking by another unless it is shown that the vehicle was being used without the owner's consent. Such an ordinance does not violate due process restrictions (overruling a contrary holding in St. v. Jetty, 176 M 519, 579 P2d 1228 (1978)), but the ordinance must conform to the absolute liability requirements of 45-2-104. Missoula v. Shea, 202 M 286, 661 P2d 410, 40 St. Rep. 91 (1983).

Intoxication — City Traffic Code Not in Conflict With State Statute: Where the defendant was found to have violated a city traffic code proscribing a certain level of intoxication "within this municipality", the District Court did not err in holding that the traffic code was not in conflict with a state statute proscribing the same conduct "upon the highways of this state". While the city has chosen to use language that does not precisely mirror the language of the corresponding state statute, any conflict between the ordinance and 61-8-401 is resolved when that section is read in pari materia with this section, authorizing the city to regulate persons driving motor vehicles under the influence of alcohol. Billings v. Weatherwax, 193 M 163, 630 P2d 1216, 38 St. Rep. 1034 (1981).

Driving Under Influence: A city ordinance which penalized drunken driving within the city in the same terms as subsections (a) and (d), section 32-2142, R.C.M. 1947 (now 61-8-401(1) and 61-8-714), was valid and enforceable even though the Legislature had acted on the subject. Bozeman v. Ramsey, 139 M 148, 362 P2d 206 (1961).

Conflicting Statute and Ordinance: A former statute provided that motor vehicles shall not pass a standing streetcar at a distance less than 8 feet nor at a speed greater than 6 miles an hour. A city ordinance provided that on business streets automobiles must not be driven faster than 12 miles an hour and must stop when passing a standing streetcar on the side on which passengers are discharged and received. The ordinance was controlling, and under it defendant was not required to stop when driving on the opposite side of a standing streetcar or to clear it by a space of 8 feet. Carey v. Guest, 78 M 415, 258 P 236 (1927).

Attorney General's Opinions

Mandatory Seatbelt Ordinance: Under Montana law and the Montana Constitution, a municipality with self-governing powers may enact a mandatory seatbelt ordinance that provides for a fine or jail sentence for violation of the ordinance as long as the fine or penalty does not exceed $500 and the imprisonment does not exceed 6 months for any one offense, and as long as such an ordinance is not prohibited by the city charter. (See T. 61, ch. 13, part 1, enacted in 1987.) 41 A.G. Op. 47 (1986).

City Council — Lack of Authority to Regulate Crosswalk on Federal-Aid Highway in Manner Inconsistent With State Law: A city council may not enact an ordinance requiring a driver of a motor vehicle on a federal-aid or state highway to stop for a pedestrian within a crosswalk when the pedestrian is not on the half of the roadway on which the vehicle is traveling and when the pedestrian is not close enough to be in danger. 41 A.G. Op. 10 (1985).

Board of County Commissioners — Right to Set Speed Limits: A Board of County Commissioners, constituted in a commission form of government, may alter otherwise statutorily established speed limits by compliance with 61-8-310. It may further adopt traffic ordinances to the extent permitted under 61-12-101(14), and any such ordinances may include penalty provisions. 40 A.G. Op. 51 (1984).

Motor Vehicle Parking Offenses — Civil Penalty: A city with general government powers may not establish a civil penalty and collection system for motor vehicle parking offenses. 40 A.G. Op. 31 (1984).

Case Notes

Lack of Efforts to Notify Vehicle Owner After Vehicle Towed — Not Abandoned or Junk Vehicle — Summary Judgment Proper: Springer owned a van that he parked on a Bozeman street. A parking control officer placed a notice of abandoned vehicle specifying a September 25 tow date on the van. On the tow date, Springer moved the van to the other side of the street. Three days later, the van was towed and subsequently destroyed. Springer was never notified of the towing. Springer brought an action against the officer and the city to recover damages for destruction of the van. The District Court determined that the van was neither an abandoned vehicle under this section nor a junk vehicle under 75-10-501 and that the city did not take reasonable efforts to notify Springer that the van had been towed, as required by 61-12-402. Summary judgment awarding damages to Springer was proper. Springer v. Becker, 284 M 267, 949 P2d 641, 54 St. Rep. 876 (1997).

Case Notes

"Free Men" Not Free to Ignore State Motor Vehicle Laws: Operation of a motor vehicle on public roads is a privilege and is subject to reasonable regulation by the state in the valid exercise of the state's police power. Reasonable regulations include mandatory vehicle registration, insurance, and seatbelt usage. The privilege may be revoked for failure to comply with regulations. No one in the state is exempt from the regulations, including appellant, who claims to be a "free man" who is not a 14th amendment citizen and who therefore does not need to obey state or federal law. St. v. Folda, 267 M 523, 885 P2d 426, 51 St. Rep. 1149 (1994).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 218 at end of second sentence of (1) substituted "61-11-203(3)(m)" for "61-11-203(2)(m)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 365 in second sentence of (1) substituted "61-11-203(2)(m)" for "61-11-203(2)(l)".

61-13-106. Evidence not admissible.Case Notes

Evidence of Use or Nonuse of Seatbelt Admissible in Case for Damages Related to Vehicle's Seatbelt System — Writ of Supervisory Control Granted — District Court's Grant of Motion in Limine Reversed: Decedent's vehicle was struck by another vehicle, causing his car to roll. The personal representative of the decedent's estate, alleging that the decedent was killed because his seatbelt, which he was wearing at the time of the accident, had slackened and caused him to be ejected from the vehicle as it rolled, filed a lawsuit against Ford, the vehicle manufacturer, alleging negligent design and strict liability. The District Court granted Ford's motion in limine to prohibit evidence of the decedent's use of his seatbelt at the time of the accident pursuant to 61-13-106, or for the personal representative to forego his negligence claims if he chose to introduce evidence of the use of the seatbelt. The personal representative filed a petition for a writ of supervisory control, arguing that the District Court was proceeding under a mistake of law. The Supreme Court granted the petition and held that as long as an action for damages is related to injuries arising out of the condition of the vehicle's seatbelt system, 61-13-106 does not prohibit evidence of seatbelt use. Stokes v. 13th Judicial District Court, 2011 MT 182, 361 Mont. 279, 259 P.3d 754.

Seatbelt Rendered Inoperable — Negligence Per Se: Pursuant to 61-9-409, there is a duty to maintain a motor vehicle in a way that seatbelts are available for the driver's and passenger's use in the event they choose to use them. Breach of that duty constitutes negligence per se. Nothing in 61-9-409, in this section, or in Kopischke v. First Cont. Corp., 187 M 471, 610 P2d 668 (1980), precludes evidence that seatbelts were unavailable and thus not in use at the time of an accident. Nor does the fact that the unavailability of a seatbelt was not the cause of the original accident relieve the duty under 61-9-409 to provide seatbelts. Califato v. Gerke, 258 M 68, 852 P2d 121, 50 St. Rep. 428 (1993).

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Economical Management of State-Owned Aircraft, Report to the 53rd Legislature, Mont. Leg. Council (1992).

Part 1

Definitions and Policy

67-1-101. Definitions.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment — Code Commissioner Correction: Chapter 300 in definition of airport near beginning after “land or water” deleted “except a restricted landing area” and after “that is” inserted “intended or”; deleted definition of airport and landing field that read: ““Airport and landing field” means any area of land or water, or both, that is used or is made available for the landing and takeoff of aircraft, owned, leased, controlled, operated, or maintained by the United States, the state of Montana, or any county or municipality or any of the authorized agencies or branches of a county or municipality within the state of Montana”; deleted definition of airport hazard area that read: ““Airport hazard area” means any area of land or water upon which an airport hazard might be established if not prevented as provided in this title”; in definition of building or structure near middle substituted “the airport affected area designated pursuant to 67-7-201” for “the area described in 67-5-201 hereof as safety zones”; deleted definition of established perimeter of an airport or landing field that read: ““Established perimeter of an airport or landing field”, for the purposes of computing all distances and elevations as contemplated by chapter 5, is the metes and bounds and elevations along the respective sides of the airport or landing field as determined by the United States government, the state of Montana, a county, a municipality, or any other public authority owning, leasing, controlling, operating, or maintaining the airport or landing field. The determination and definition must be evidenced by a plat showing the metes and bounds and elevations that must be filed in the records of the public authority for official purposes and subject to inspection and examination at all reasonable times by any interested persons”; in definition of governing body near beginning inserted exception clause; in definition of height of buildings and structures substituted reference to Title 67, chapter 7, for “chapter 5”; in definition of municipality after “Municipality” deleted “or “political subdivision””; inserted definition of NPIAS airport; inserted definition of political subdivision; inserted definition of YDNL; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

In definition of height of buildings and structures the code commissioner deleted a reference to landing field to reflect deletion of definition of airport and landing field.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 279 substituted “Aircrew” for “Airman” as defined term; in definition of governing body substituted “a city commission, town council, or county commission and the boards, departments, and divisions of those entities, by whatever name they are known, that have charge of finances and management of a municipality or a county” for “bodies and boards by whatever names they are known having charge of finances and management of a municipality”; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In definition of Board changed reference to 2-15-1812 to 2-15-2506, pursuant to the authority of sec. 62, Ch. 16, L. 1991, which allows the Code Commissioner to correct erroneous references; and in definition of Department changed “department of commerce provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 18” to “department of transportation provided for in Title 2, chapter 15, part 25”. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1981 Amendment: In definition of department substituted “department of commerce” for “department of community affairs”; changed internal references to the department; in definition of board changed internal reference.

Definitions Not Codified: Section 1-706, R.C.M. 1947 (first part) (en. sec. 6, Ch. 12, L. 1939); section 1-710(1), R.C.M. 1947 (en. sec. 1, Ch. 287, L. 1947); section 1-808, R.C.M. 1947 (en. sec.

1, Ch. 288, L. 1947, amd. sec. 40, Ch. 348, L. 1974); and section 1-901(1), R.C.M. 1947 (en. sec. 1, Ch. 433, L. 1971), were not codified but have not been repealed and are still valid law.

Short Title Not Codified: Section 1-101, R.C.M. 1947 (en. sec. 1, Ch. 152, L. 1945), was not codified but has not been repealed and is still valid law.

Case Notes

Negligence Not Imputed: The Supreme Court held that neither the plain meaning of "operation of aircraft" nor the Legislature's intent in enacting it is to impute a pilot's negligence to the owner or lessor. Haker v. SW. Ry. Co., 176 M 364, 578 P2d 724 (1978).

67-1-102. Policy.

Case Notes

Purchase of Aircraft: The powers of the State Aeronautics Commission include the power to purchase and maintain aircraft. Holtz v. Babcock, 143 M 341, 389 P2d 869 (1963).

67-1-103. Board of aeronautics.

Attorney General's Opinions

Preemption by Federal Law: Title 49, U.S.C. § 1305, preempts the state Board of Aeronautics' authority to regulate the intrastate rates, routes, and services of air carriers that are either specifically exempted or certified by the federal Civil Aeronautics Board. 39 A.G. Op. 41 (1981).

67-1-104. Governmental nature of aeronautical functions.

Case Notes

Immunity From Suit — Airport Manager as Agent of Municipality: Under the 1889 Montana Constitution, when city and county leased hangar facilities and designated one of two lessees as airport manager, and the lessees were obligated to maintain only the portion of the airport leased to them, the city and county having retained control over the unleased portions, the airport manager was the agent of the city and county and was not liable for an accident occurring on unleased portion. A municipality was immune from suit for injuries resulting from the maintenance or operation of an airport. Barovich v. Miles City, 135 M 394, 340 P2d 819 (1959); Holland v. W. Airlines, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 457 (D.C. Mont. 1957).

Liability Insurance: Under the 1889 Montana Constitution, the fact that the city had obtained a policy of liability insurance did not in itself result in any waiver of sovereign immunity from liability for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff when she slipped and fell on floor of municipal airport owned by the city and leased to defendant airline. Holland v. W. Airlines, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 457 (D.C. Mont. 1957).

Part 2

Uniform Principles

Part Compiler's Comments

Uniform State Law: Sections 67-1-202 through 67-1-204, 67-1-206, and 67-1-201 are similar to sec. 2 through 4, 11, and 12, respectively, of the Uniform Aeronautics Act approved by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in 1922 and adopted in the states of Arizona, Delaware, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, and Wisconsin.

This Act was withdrawn from the active list of acts recommended for adoption by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in August, 1943. See Handbook of the National Conference, 1943, p. 66.

67-1-202. State sovereignty in space.

Case Notes

Federal Regulatory Power Over Air Space: Federal regulatory power over air space is as complete and as valid as federal regulatory power over navigable waters, to the extent that the latter power rests upon the commerce clause. U.S. v. Helsley, 615 F2d 784 (1979), reversing U.S. v. Helsley, 463 F. Supp. 1111 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Applicability: Section 14, Ch. 206, L. 1995, provided: "[This act] applies to tax years beginning after December 31, 1995."

1987 Amendment: In (1), at end, changed "department of commerce" to "department of transportation"; inserted (7) prohibiting operation of aircraft while under influence of alcohol or drugs; and inserted (8) requiring reporting of information regarding flying under the influence violations.

Montana Changes: Section 1, Ch. 542, L. 1987, inserted (7) and (8), which are not provisions of the Uniform Aeronautics Act.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) referring to landings and takeoffs from public waters; inserted (3) referring to landings and takeoffs from public roads; in (4) inserted "on the water"; and in (6) in the first sentence, inserted "private" before "lands".

Case Notes

Nature of Liability: Section 67-1-204, which provides that no person shall operate an aircraft in a careless or reckless manner so as to endanger the life or property of others, does not create a civil cause of action against a person who violates this section; but rather, it establishes duties the violation of which result in imposition of criminal penalties. *Haker v. Amendment effective May 18, 2000.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 585 in (4)(a) increased tax from 3 cents a gallon to 4 cents a gallon; in (4)(a)(i) increased per gallon tax from 1 cent to 2 cents; inserted (4)(a)(iii)(B) requiring deposit in special revenue fund of 25% of amount collected from scheduled passenger air carriers certified under 14 CFR, part 121 or 135; inserted (6) requiring deposit of 25% of aviation fuel tax collected from passenger air carriers into separate account for pavement preservation at airports served by carriers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 642 in (4)(a), near beginning, substituted "3-cent" for "1-cent" and substituted reference to the tax imposed on aviation fuel for reference to the gasoline license tax; inserted (4)(a)(ii) and (4)(a)(iii) providing for deposit of the proceeds of 1 cent of the aviation fuel tax in the aeronautical loan account for loans to local governments and state agencies and providing for deposit of the proceeds of 1 cent of the aviation fuel tax in the state special revenue fund for the Department to use for grants to municipalities for airports; inserted (4)(b) and (4)(c) stating what the money deposited in the accounts may be used for; in (5), at beginning, inserted exception clause and near middle substituted "aviation fuel" for "gasoline"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993, and on the first day of the month 60 days after the balance in the aeronautical loan account, after deposits and less refunds, reaches $1 million, the 3-cent figure in subsection (4)(a) becomes 2 cents and the provisions relating to loans to local governments terminate.

Effective Date — Contingent Termination: Section 17, Ch. 642, L. 1993, provided that this section is effective July 1, 1993, and terminates on the first day of the month 60 days after the balance in the aeronautical loan account, after deposits and less refunds, reaches $1 million. The balance in the aeronautical loan account reached $1 million in December 2000, and the amendments to this section terminated on the first day of the month 60 days after that occurrence.

1987 Amendment: At end of (3)(a) deleted "in amounts not to exceed the required sponsor's share of projects authorized by the United States government for funding from the federal Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982"; and inserted (4) specifying treatment of bond proceeds on termination of airport loan program.

Termination Date: Section 2, Ch. 41, L. 1987, amended sec. 4, Ch. 676, L. 1985, to read: "This act is effective on passage and approval. This act terminates June 30, 1989, except that a loan made prior to June 30, 1989, is subject to the provisions of this act notwithstanding the duration of the loan."

1985 Amendment: Inserted (3) creating airport loan program.

1985 Session Law Reference: The reference to sec. 1, Ch. 676, L. 1985, in (3)(a)(i) was left in its original form because the section was an appropriation that was not codified. It appropriated $1.7 million from the long-range building program for airport improvement upon sale of bonds for that purpose.

1985 Effective and Termination Dates: Section 4, Ch. 676, L. 1985, provided: "This act is effective on passage and approval. [Approved May 6, 1985] This act terminates June 30, 1987, except that a loan made prior to June 30, 1987, is subject to the provisions of this act notwithstanding the duration of the loan."

1983 Amendments: Chapter 277 substituted references to state special revenue fund for references to earmarked revenue fund.

Chapter 654 inserted former (3), which was temporary and deleted by the compiler. But see "1983 Effective and Termination Dates" compiler's comment below as to continuing application to loans. Former (3) read: "(3) (a) There shall be deposited in the state special revenue fund to the credit of the department of administration, to be used, upon recommendation of the department of commerce, to provide loans to local and state government agencies for airport improvement projects in amounts not to exceed the required sponsor's share of projects authorized by the United States government for funding from the federal Airport and Airway Improvement Act of 1982:

(i) a portion, as provided in House Bill 900, Laws of 1983, [Section 5 of HB 900 appropriated $1.3 million from the bond proceeds and insurance clearance account for statewide airport improvement.] of the proceeds received from the sale of long-range building program bonds upon the authorization and sale of the bonds by the state and notwithstanding the provisions of Title 17, chapter 7, part 2; and

(ii) all repayments of loans, including interest, made pursuant to subsections (3)(a) and (3)(b).

(b) All loans must:

(i) bear an interest rate that fully retires the long-range building bonds issued under the authorization provided by the 48th legislature;

(ii) mature not later than such bonds; and

(iii) include reimbursement of administrative costs as required by subsection (3)(c).

(c) An amount equal to 1% of the loans provided under subsection (3)(a) may be allocated from the state special revenue fund for administrative purposes."

1983 Effective and Termination Dates: Section 2, Ch. 654, L. 1983, provided: "This act is effective on passage and approval. This act terminates on June 30, 1985, except that a loan made prior to June 30, 1985, is subject to the provisions of this act notwithstanding the duration of such loan."

Case Notes

Purchase of Aircraft: The Commission is empowered to purchase aircraft, the expense of which is to be paid out of the aviation fund as an expense of administration. Holtz v. Babcock, 143 M 341, 389 P2d 869 (1963).

Appropriation: The appropriation made by p. 761, L. 1947, from the gasoline drawback fund was an appropriation of the 1 cent gasoline tax for payment of the expenses of the Commission. State ex rel. St. Aeronautics Comm'n v. Bd. of Examiners, 121 M 402, 194 P2d 633 (1948).

Nature of Gasoline Tax: The practical operation of the aeronautics laws was to levy a 1 cent per gallon tax on the user of gasoline for aviation purposes. The tax was used to regulate the aviation operators. Therefore, it was not a revenue measure and was not subject to Art. XII, sec. 10, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VIII, sec. 14, 1972 Mont. Const.). It was not necessary that the proceeds of the 1 cent gasoline tax be paid into the treasury as part of the general fund, but it was competent for the Legislature to provide that it be kept as a separate fund. State ex rel. St. Aeronautics Comm'n v. Bd. of Examiners, 121 M 402, 194 P2d 633 (1948).

Attorney General's Opinions

General Fund Responsible for Payment of Airport Loan Program Shortfall: Proceeds from bonds issued under the long-range building program were appropriated for use by the airport improvement program. As bond retirement occurred, a deficit shortfall was created between the bond payments and the repayment of the loans. Although the Legislature in 1993 established a different loan program with imposition of a 1-cent tax on aviation fuel pursuant to this section, there was no suggestion that proceeds from that tax were to be used for payment of bond proceeds under the previous loan program. Despite the fact that a legislative audit recommended that payment of the shortfall on the bonds should be paid from either of two special revenue accounts of the Aeronautics Division, the Attorney General held that both the bond instrument and the appropriation of bond proceeds clearly showed that the general fund was the proper source for payment on the bond shortfall. 47 A.G. Op. 7 (1997).

CHAPTER 2 DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION AERONAUTICAL POWERS AND DUTIES

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Transfer of Functions: Sections 6 and 12 through 14, Ch. 512, L. 1991, provided: "Section 6. Transportation functions of department of commerce transferred. (1) The following functions of the department of commerce are transferred to the department of transportation:

- (a) developing, encouraging, regulating, and licensing aeronautics in Title 67;
- (b) allocating funds for public transportation under 7-14-102;
- (c) transloading facilities under 7-14-120;
- (d) rail planning activities in Title 60, chapter 11; and
- (e) state representation activities under 60-21-101.

(2) Unless inconsistent with [sections 1 through 14], any reference to the department of commerce in 7-14-102, 7-14-120; Title 60, chapters 11 and 21; and Title 67 is changed to department of transportation.

Section 12. Transfer of rulemaking authority. Any existing authority of the department of highways, the department of commerce, or the department of revenue to make rules on the various functions transferred by the provisions of [sections 1 through 14] is extended to the provisions of [sections 1 through 14].

Section 13. Application of transfer provisions. The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 govern:

(1) the merger into the department of transportation [of] the functions of the department of highways and those functions of the departments of commerce and revenue specified in [sections 1 through 14]; and

(2) the transfer of the various functions contained in [sections 1 through 14].

Section 14. Governor to implement. The governor shall implement the provisions of [sections 1 through 14] by executive order."

The Legislature intends that rules be made that provide a reasonable definition of origination of a flight. The purpose here is not to cover the flight that originates out of state and takes a short stop in Montana to pick up fuel with the intent of continuing directly on the journey. The Legislature also recognizes that rules may be required to conform enforcement to the manner in which the Federal Aviation Administration administers the flight plans filed with it. Part Case Notes

Independent Exercise of Eminent Domain Power by Joint Airport Board Member: Plaintiffs argued that 67-10-205(2)(c) mandates that a proceeding for eminent domain may not be brought by a single municipal member of a joint airport board but rather only as a joint action with the other signatories. The Supreme Court found this to be an overly narrow interpretation in light of other statutory authority in Title 67, ch. 10, parts 1 and 2, which empowers municipalities to act either jointly or independently, and under the broad grant of power to cities under Art. XI, sec. 4, Mont. Const. By its terms, 67-10-205(2)(c) requires joint action when an eminent domain proceeding is brought pursuant to the authority of the joint airport board; however, it does not preclude action separate and apart from the board. *Lake v. Case Notes Damages Recoverable for Diminution in Value of Land Caused by Change in Access: In an action to condemn 20.45 acres of land for the purpose of expanding a municipal airport, landowners appealed the commissioners' assessment to the District Court. Prior to trial, the District Court granted the airport board's motion in limine and excluded evidence on diminution of value of landowners' remaining land due to the abandonment of a county road contained in the condemned parcel, ruling that landowners had no legal interest in the continuance of a county road unless discontinuance of that road deprived them of access to their remaining property. The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that although condemnees cannot recover damages for a reduction in traffic flow caused by discontinuance of a county road, they can recover damages if the change in access has caused a substantial change in value in the condemnees' land and landowners should have been permitted to introduce evidence on this issue. McCone County v. James, 198 M 430, 646 P2d 1209, 39 St. Rep. 1107 (1982).

Necessity of Eminent Domain — Balancing Test: When a flight path easement to insure safe flight would adequately serve public need, it was not necessary for the county to acquire a fee simple title. Silver Bow County v. Hafer, 166 M 330, 532 P2d 691 (1975).

Subterfuge to Circumvent Debt Limitation: When Airport Commission, which was agent of city and county, borrowed funds from the State Aeronautics Commission, the language whereby county's obligation to repay was seemingly limited was a subterfuge to circumvent the debt limitation imposed by law and to avoid the requirement of approval by a majority of the electors of the county because the Airport Commission was itself obligated to pay interest on the loan. Burlington N., Inc. v. Richland County, 162 M 364, 512 P2d 707 (1973).

Immunity From Suit: Under the 1889 Montana Constitution, a municipality was immune from suit for injuries resulting from the maintenance or operation of an airport. Barovich v. Miles City, 135 M 394, 340 P2d 819 (1959); Holland v. W. Airlines, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 457 (D.C. Mont. 1957).

Liability Insurance: Under the 1889 Montana Constitution, the fact that the city had obtained a policy of liability insurance did not in itself result in any waiver of sovereign immunity from liability for personal injuries sustained by plaintiff when she slipped and fell on floor of municipal airport owned by the city and leased to defendant airline. Holland v. W. Airlines, Inc., 154 F. Supp. 457 (D.C. Mont. 1957).

Part 2General Powers of Municipality Relating to Airports*Part Case Notes

Independent Exercise of Eminent Domain Power by Joint Airport Board Member: Plaintiffs argued that 67-10-205(2)(c) mandates that a proceeding for eminent domain may not be brought by a single municipal member of a joint airport board but rather only as a joint action with the other signatories. The Supreme Court found this to be an overly narrow interpretation in light of other statutory authority in Title 67, ch. 10, parts 1 and 2, which empowers municipalities to act either jointly or independently, and under the broad grant of power to cities under Art. XI, sec. 4, Mont. Const. By its terms, 67-10-205(2)(c) requires joint action when an eminent domain proceeding is brought pursuant to the authority of the joint airport board; however, it does not preclude action separate and apart from the board. *Lake v. Case Notes

Question Whether Sufficient Airport Access Provided — Summary Judgment Precluded: Plaintiff filed an action against the city of Kalispell asserting that the city had constructed a fence between plaintiff's aircraft fueling and maintenance business and the airport that unreasonably interfered with plaintiff's use of the public easement and plaintiff's business prospects. The city had installed a 48-foot gate to plaintiff's business, but plaintiff contended that the gate was too small. The District Court noted that the city had authority to fence the airport and granted summary judgment for the city. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that a genuine issue of material fact existed regarding whether the fence and gate provided by the city tortiously restricted or interfered with plaintiff's business and implied easement and whether the city's actions intentionally inflicted severe emotional distress. Summary judgment was therefore inappropriate, and the case was remanded for trial. Talmage v. Kalispell, 2009 MT 434, 354 M 125, 223 P3d 328 (2009).

Attorney General's Opinions

Cause Required for Removal of Member of Airport Authority Commission: Under common law, in the absence of statutory provisions relating to removal, a public officer may be removed from office only for cause and only after notice and an opportunity to be heard. Cause does not include a discretionary exercise of statutory authority, and the mere exercise of the powers of an office does not constitute cause for removal. There are no specific statutes governing the removal of an airport authority commissioner. Thus, an airport authority commissioner may be removed only for cause during the commissioner's term of office, which implies some type of misconduct or neglect of duty. As long as commissioners are exercising powers authorized by law, they are not subject to removal during their terms of office. 49 A.G. Op. 8 (2001).

Case Notes

Debt Limit: Board of County Commissioners, which overtaxed taxpayers in one year in order to provide a fund for expenses for capital improvements and remodeling of airport, which expenses exceeded $21,000, clearly violated Art. XIII, sec. 5, 1889 Mont. Const., by incurring a liability for over $10,000 without the approval of a majority of the electors of the county; county was not able to argue that "no indebtedness or liability" had been created because the money was already on hand. Extraordinarily high levy created a "reserve fund" to be used for capital improvements which is not allowable due to restriction in this section of reserve funds to improvement of surfaces of runways or ramps. Burlington N., Inc. v. Flathead County, 162 M 371, 512 P2d 710 (1973).

Attorney General's Opinions

Calculation and Expenditure of "Carryforward" Mills Under 2001 Revision to Local Government Property Tax Levy and Budget Provisions: The 2001 revisions to local government property tax levy and budget laws instituted a general approach of deleting numeric limits on the number of mills that a local government could levy for any specific purpose and placed a cap on the number of mills that a local government is allowed to levy through property taxation. The combined effect was to free a local government to dedicate as much of its annual mill levy as it chooses for any lawful governmental purpose, as long as the total millage covered by the cap does not exceed the cap measured by the prior year's property tax assessments. Likewise, the "carryforward" provision in 15-10-420 does not depend on how many mills, if any, that a city chooses to devote to a particular purpose in any year. Instead, the provision allows a city, if it finds itself able to fund its operations without levying the full number of mills allowed, to hold in reserve for future years the authority to levy the difference between the number of mills allowed and the number actually levied. That authority is not calculated on the basis of the amount budgeted or the number of mills needed to fund a particular government function, but rather is calculated with reference to the whole amount raised by property taxes, subject to the statutory exceptions, without reference to how the money might have been spent in the prior year. However, the "carryforward" authority is prospective only and may not be applied to calculations for the 2001 budget year because the authority did not exist prior to July 1, 2001. Thus, "carryforward" mills may be levied in any future year after budget year 2001 and expended by a local government for any lawful purposes that the local government chooses. 49 A.G. Op. 5 (2001).

67-11-232. Airport property — disposal.Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 279 near middle of second sentence substituted "the adopted rules of the authority, which rules must be approved by the local governing body, for the disposal of county property" for "the laws of this state governing the disposition of other public property"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 279, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 6] [67-11-232] allows an airport authority to adopt rules for the purpose of disposing of airport property. At a minimum, the rules should address:

- (1) appraisal requirements for property to be sold;
- (2) terms for sale or lease agreements;
- (3) requirements for public auctions;
- (4) the procedure to be followed if the property is not sold; and
- (5) disposition of sale or lease proceeds."

67-11-241. No limitation on airport hazard zoning.Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 300 at end after "hazards by zoning" inserted reference to establishing airport affected area regulations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 19, 2005.

67-11-303. Bonds and obligations.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 574 in (6) near end of first sentence and near middle of second sentence before "levy" inserted "subject to 15-10-420" and near middle of second sentence after "taxes are" deleted "not subject to any limitation of rate or amount applicable to other municipal taxes but are"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 387 in (6) inserted sixth sentence that read: "The special election must be held in conjunction with a regular or primary election"; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: At end of first sentence of (3) substituted "as provided in 17-5-102" for "at a rate not exceeding the limitation of 17-5-102".

1983 Amendment: Made 1981 amendment permanent. (Amendment was to terminate July 1, 1983—sec. 21, Ch. 500, L. 1981.)

1981 Amendments: Chapter 500 substituted "the limitation of 17-5-102" for "10% a year" after "not exceeding" in the first sentence of (3).

Chapter 575 substituted "as provided for municipal general obligation bonds in chapter 7, part 42" for "by [7-7-4227 through 7-7-4234]" and "as provided for county general obligation bonds in chapter 7, part 22" for "[7-7-2229 through 7-7-2236]" near the end of (6).

67-11-304. Reserve fund.

Compiler's Comments

Public Service Commission

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Transition From Pre-1974 Public Service Commission to Commission Established in 1974: Boedecker was elected in 1972 to serve a 6-year term on the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.). In 1974 (Ch. 339, L. 1974), the Legislature abolished the existing three-member P.S.C. and replaced it with a five-member P.S.C., which commenced its duties in January 1975. The Legislature provided that any member whose term had not expired was to continue in office to the end of his term. Boedecker died during the time between the 1974 primary and general elections. The statute under which Boedecker was elected and Ch. 339, L. 1974, both provided for filling of vacancies by Governor appointment. The appointee then holds office until the next general election and until his successor is elected and qualified. Therefore, the office of Public Service Commissioner that became vacant upon Boedecker's death must be placed on the 1974 general election ballot. The successor to the Governor's appointee will take office when elected and qualified and will serve out the unexpired term of Boedecker. 35 A.G. Op. 95 (1974).

69-1-102. Creation of public service commission.

Compiler's Comments

Reestablishment: Section 1, Ch. 588, L. 1983, provided: "The public service commission, department of public service regulation, created by 69-1-102, is reestablished for 6 years pursuant to 2-8-122, with existing statutory authority and rules."

Case Notes

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — No Authority in Negligence Action: An electric service customer filed an action in District Court alleging property damage based on a power company's negligence and negligence per se in terminating the customer's electric service. The District Court dismissed the action, reasoning that the customer did not exhaust administrative remedies before the Public Service Commission (PSC). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the grounds that the PSC is not vested with judicial powers and does not have the authority to adjudicate a negligence action seeking damages. Schuster v. NW. Energy Co., 2013 MT 364, 373 Mont. 54, 314 P.3d 650.

Dismissal for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Proper Upon Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Absent Showing of Futility: Plaintiff filed for declaratory judgment and injunctive relief against state agencies and a subdivision water development company regarding plaintiff's provision of water to subdivisions developed by the company. The District Court dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, and plaintiff appealed. Generally, before a party can seek declaratory relief in District Court, the party must exhaust its administrative remedies, although courts generally will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when recourse to an administrative remedy would be futile. However, the mere possibility of an adverse decision does not mean that resort to an administrative agency is futile, nor does the possibility that agencies might render decisions that could in some degree conflict justify bypassing the administrative process. Plaintiff in this case could not demonstrate futility, and seeking to skip the administrative process constituted an unwarranted intrusion into the agencies' regulatory authority. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction when plaintiff did not first exhaust its administrative remedies before seeking judicial review. Mtn. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2002 MT 327, 313 M 197, 60 P3d 958 (2002).

Limiting Phone Company Liability — Directory Listing Errors: Regulation of Montana Public Service Commission limiting the liability of a telephone company arising from errors in or omissions of directory listings to the amount of charges for such of the subscriber's service as is affected during the period covered by the directory in which the error or omission occurs is reasonable and binding on the subscriber. State ex rel. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. District Court, 160 M 443, 503 P2d 526 (1972).

Jurisdiction of Commissioner: District Court's Writ of Prohibition was vacated when it barred Board of Railroad Commissioners, ex officio the Public Service Commission, from performing its duties concerning water company's application to increase rates and charges. State ex rel. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. District Court, 158 M 139, 488 P2d 903 (1968).

Powers of Commission:

An order of the Public Service Commission directing an electric power company furnishing electricity to a small town to install a telephone service for the convenience of its 225 customers was not unlawful or unreasonable. Tobacco River Power Co. v. P.S.C., 109 M 521, 98 P2d 886 (1940).

The Public Service Commission, under its power to regulate a public utility, is clothed with authority not only to fix maximum but also minimum or precise rates. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

The Legislature in enacting the public service commission law intended not only to empower the Commission to regulate charges or fix rates, but also to see to it that reasonable service is rendered by the utility and that its equipment is reasonably adequate. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

The Public Service Commission is a creature of and clothed with only such powers as are clearly conferred upon it by the statute to which it owes its being. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

In the enactment of this law, the Legislature intended to provide a comprehensive and uniform system of regulation and control of public utilities by a specially created tribunal through which the state itself exercises its sovereign power. State ex rel. Billings v. Billings Gas Co., 55 M 102, 173 P 799 (1918).

Franchise Ordinance: An ordinance granting a public utility franchise after the enactment of the public service commission law is not invalid merely for the reason that such act vests exclusive jurisdiction in the Public Service Commission, but is valid until the Commission sees fit to act. Until then, the rate of compensation payable by the company is valid and binding. Baker v. Mont. Petroleum Co., 99 M 465, 44 P2d 735 (1935).

Public Utilities Defined:

When one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in that use and must submit to control by the public for the common good to the extent of the interest he has thus created. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

An irrigation company organized for the purpose of supplying water for the irrigation of agricultural lands is not a "public utility" within the meaning of the public service commission law, and is therefore not subject to supervision and regulation by the Public Service Commission. State ex rel. Thatcher v. Boyle, 62 M 97, 204 P 378 (1921).

Constitutionality:

Inasmuch as a franchise contract made in 1912 between a city and a gas company must be presumed to have been entered into with knowledge that the state could thereafter enact legislation toward exercising the power of rate regulation reposed in it and thus change the rates fixed by the contract, the public service commission law is not open to attack on the ground that it impairs the obligation of the contract made the year before. State ex rel. Billings v. Billings Gas Co., 55 M 102, 173 P 799 (1918), distinguished in Baker v. Mont. Petroleum Co., 99 M 465, 44

P2d 735 (1935). See also Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930), for discussion of constitutionality of the public service commission law.

The act conferring authority upon the Public Service Commission must be construed in harmony with the theory of self-government in cities and the retention of police power by the state. P.S.C. v. Helena, 52 M 527, 159 P 24 (1916).

Regulations made by the Public Service Commission must be reasonable in order to be valid, and any regulation that imposes upon a city an obligation which is invalid is not reasonable. P.S.C. v. Helena, 52 M 527, 159 P 24 (1916).

This part, creating a Public Service Commission and defining its powers, is constitutional. P.S.C. v. Helena, 52 M 527, 159 P 24 (1916).

Term Limits Applicable to Public Service Commission: By the enactment of the 1995 amendments to this section, the Legislature intended to apply the term limit provisions of Art. IV, sec. 8, Mont. Attorney General's Opinions

Acceptance of Severance Pay by Public Service Commissioner Not Breach of Ethics: Severance pay negotiated as part of a negotiated union contract agreement and supported by consideration, such as surrender of accrued seniority and entitlement to reemployment, does not constitute a gift within the meaning of 2-2-104 nor does the termination of employment and acceptance of severance pay constitute a substantial financial transaction for private business purposes within the meaning of 2-2-121. Therefore, a Public Service Commissioner did not violate the code of ethics for public officials and employees by temporarily reactivating and then terminating his employment with a railroad company in order to become eligible to receive severance pay negotiated between the railroad and the collective bargaining unit to which the Commissioner belonged. Notice to the other Commissioners was adequate to meet the terms of 2-2-121(2)(f). The action did not constitute the kind of private relationship contemplated by the code of ethics that would threaten the integrity of the position because the situation presented no opportunity to use the influence of the official position to further personal gain. 45 A.G. Retroactive Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 508, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to revenue generated by regulated activity beginning after April 1, 1993."

1987 Amendment: At end of (2)(a) inserted "separately stating gross revenues from sales to other regulated companies for resale".

1983 Amendment: Substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to earmarked revenue fund.

Case Notes

Funding of Public Service Commission and Consumer Counsel — Definition of "Regulated Companies" — Payment of Fees by Municipal Utility: The operations of the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) and the Montana Consumer Counsel (MCC) are not funded through the general fund as are most state government agencies but instead are funded by fees imposed on regulated companies, based on a percentage of the gross operating revenue of the company. Regulated companies are defined as all organizations, corporations, associations, or other public or private entities that are or may become subject to regulation by the P.S.C. or its successor agency. Under 69-7-101 and 69-7-102 (now repealed), the utilities are allowed to raise rates as long as they are not raised to yield more than a 12% increase in total annual revenue. If a rate increase exceeds 12%, the utility must apply to the P.S.C. for the increase. (See 1995 amendment to 69-7-101.) The utility's argument that both P.S.C. and MCC fees are user fees and that regulated companies do not have to pay the fees unless they use P.S.C. or MCC services during a given year would make it possible for a municipal utility to control and avoid imposition of fees except under extraordinary circumstances, which is outside the context of legislative intent. Thus, as a regulated company, the municipal utility of the city of Billings is subject to regulation by the P.S.C. Billings v. Dept. of Revenue, 270 M 307, 891 P2d 1149, 52 St. Rep. 196 (1995).

Attorney General's Opinions

Budget Amendment Not "Other Source": The Department of Revenue failed to apply a carryover balance in the earmarked revenue account (now state special revenue fund, Ch. 277, L. 1983) to the succeeding year. A budget amendment making the balance available to the office of the Consumer Counsel for expenditures is not an "other source" for additional money contemplated by this section. 39 A.G. 1993 Amendment: Chapter 508 in (1), at beginning, substituted "On or before August 31 of each year" for "Within 30 days following enactment of the legislative appropriation for the office of the consumer counsel"; in (1)(b) substituted "subsection (2)" for "subsection (3)", before "appropriation" substituted "current" for "base", and after "counsel" deleted "for the first year of the appropriation"; inserted (1)(c) relating to adjustment of the percentage multiplier; in (1)(d), after "percentage", deleted "determined in subsections (1)(a) and (b)" and after "paid" deleted "in the first year of the appropriation"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) On or before May 30 of the first year of the biennium, the department of revenue shall repeat the steps required by subsection (1) and compute the percentage multiplier for the second year, giving notice to the regulated companies"; in (2), after "multiplier", deleted "quarterly"; inserted (2)(d) providing that change in percentage multiplier is effective at beginning of next calendar quarter; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 24, 1993.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 508, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to revenue generated by regulated activity beginning after April 1, 1993."

1987 Amendment: Near beginning of (3)(a) substituted "shall" for "may"; and in last sentence of (4), after "Money", deleted "in the account".

Attorney General's Opinions

Failure to Deduct Carryover Balance — Not Subject to Appropriation: In determining the amount of the fee, the Department of Revenue failed to deduct the carryover balance from the previous year. This unappropriated balance was not available to the office of Consumer Counsel for expenditure under a budget amendment. Rather, the balance inures to the benefit of the regulated companies in the form of a corresponding lower fee for the succeeding year. 39 A.G. Op. 59 (1982).

69-1-225. Computation and collection of fee in absence of statement — penalty and interest.Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendments: Chapter 676 deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The department may add to the amount of the fee computed under subsection (1), in addition to any other penalty provided by law, a penalty of 10% thereof plus interest at the rate of 1% per month or fraction of month computed on the total amount of fee and penalty. Interest is computed from the date the fee is due to the date of payment"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) The department of revenue shall mail to the regulated company a letter setting forth the amount of the fee, penalty, and interest and notifying the company that payment of the full amount of the fee, penalty, and interest must be remitted within 15 days of the regulated company's receipt of the letter; otherwise a lien may be filed"; and inserted (2) providing for notice, date of payment, interest, and a penalty for delinquency. Amendment effective April 27, 1991.

Chapter 811 in (3), near beginning of first sentence, substituted "notice, pursuant to 15-1-211" for "letter" and at end, after "interest", deleted "and notifying the company that payment of the full amount of the fee, penalty, and interest must be remitted within 15 days of the regulated company's receipt of the letter, otherwise a lien may be filed" (amendments rendered void by Ch. 676) and inserted (3)(c) relating to review under 15-1-211.

Coordination: Section 19, Ch. 676, L. 1991, was a coordination section that provided that if Senate Bill No. 445 was passed and approved and if it included a section adopting a uniform tax appeal procedure, the bracketed language that constituted subsection (2) of this section was void. Senate Bill No. 445 was passed and approved as Ch. 811, L. 1991.

Applicability: Section 20, Ch. 676, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to all returns or statements due on or after July 1, 1991."

Section 31, Ch. 811, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to requests for refunds received by and the notices of additional tax issued by the department of revenue pursuant to [section 1] [15-1-211] after December 31, 1991."

69-1-226. Failure to pay fee — penalty and interest — collection of fee.Compiler's Comments

1991 Amendments: Chapter 676 in (1), at end of first sentence, deleted "and penalty"; and in (2) reduced time of remittance from 15 days to 10 days (rendered void by Ch. 811). Amendment effective April 27, 1991.

Chapter 811 in (2), near beginning of first sentence, substituted "notice, pursuant to 15-1-211" for "letter" and at end, after "interest", deleted "and notifying the company that payment of the full amount of the fee, penalty, and interest must be remitted within 15 days of the regulated company's receipt of the letter, otherwise a warrant for distraint may be filed" and inserted last sentence relating to review under 15-1-211.

Applicability: Section 20, Ch. 676, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to all returns or statements due on or after July 1, 1991."

Section 31, Ch. 811, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to requests for refunds received by and the notices of additional tax issued by the department of revenue pursuant to [section 1] [15-1-211] after December 31, 1991."

1981 Amendment: Substituted "otherwise a warrant for distraint may be filed" for "otherwise a lien may be filed" at the end of (2).

69-1-227. Warrant for distraint.Compiler's Comments

1981 Amendment: Substituted the first sentence allowing warrant for distraint if fee is not paid when due for a procedure whereby the department has a lien on the real property of the regulated company when the department files a copy of the amount due with the county clerk of court; and deleted a provision at the end of the section providing that the lien may be enforced in the same manner as judgment liens are enforced.

69-1-228. Credit for overpayment — interest on overpayment.Compiler's Comments

Applicability: Section 20, Ch. 676, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to all returns or statements due on or after July 1, 1991."

Effective Date: Section 21, Ch. 676, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 27, 1991.

69-1-230. Statute of limitations.Compiler's Comments

Applicability: Section 20, Ch. 676, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to all returns or statements due on or after July 1, 1991."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 224 in (1) in first sentence near middle after "section" inserted "and any other fees, except as provided in 69-1-114(3)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 224, L. 2005, was a saving clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 508 in (1), at end of first sentence, substituted "an account in the state special revenue fund to the credit of the department" for "the general fund" and deleted former second sentence that read: "All appropriations to the department must be paid from the general fund"; in (2) reduced time period from "90 days" to "30 days"; and in (3), in first sentence after "increased", inserted exception clause. Amendment effective April 24, 1993.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 508, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to revenue generated by regulated activity beginning after April 1, 1993."

1987 Amendment: In (1) substituted first two sentences regarding general fund deposits and appropriations for former sentence that read: "There is an account in the state special revenue fund to which all fees collected under this section must be deposited and from which all appropriations to the department must be paid."

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 647, L. 1987, deleted the provision of sec. 7, Ch. 32, Sp. L. June 1986, that terminated 69-1-402 on July 1, 1987.

Case Notes

Funding of Public Service Commission and Consumer Counsel — Definition of "Regulated Companies" — Payment of Fees by Municipal Utility: The operations of the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) and the Montana Consumer Counsel (MCC) are not funded through the general fund as are most state government agencies but instead are funded by fees imposed on regulated companies, based on a percentage of the gross operating revenue of the company. Regulated companies are defined as all organizations, corporations, associations, or other public or private entities that are or may become subject to regulation by the P.S.C. or its successor agency. Under 69-7-101 and 69-7-102 (now repealed), the utilities are allowed to raise rates as long as they are not raised to yield more than a 12% increase in total annual revenue. If a rate increase exceeds 12%, the utility must apply to the P.S.C. for the increase. (See 1995 amendment to 69-7-101.) The utility's argument that both P.S.C. and MCC fees are user fees and that regulated companies do not have to pay the fees unless they use P.S.C. or MCC services during a given year would make it possible for a municipal utility to control and avoid imposition of fees except under extraordinary circumstances, which is outside the context of legislative intent. Thus, as a regulated company, the municipal utility of the city of Billings is subject to regulation by the P.S.C. Billings v. Dept. of Revenue, 270 M 307, 891 P2d 1149, 52 St. Rep. 196 (1995).

69-1-403. Determination and collection of fee.Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 508 in (2), at end after "resale", deleted "to determine the amount of the fee to be paid in the first year of the appropriation"; in (4), in second sentence after "69-1-224(1)", deleted "and (2)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 24, 1993.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 508, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to revenue generated by regulated activity beginning after April 1, 1993."

1987 Amendment: At end of (1) inserted "except that gross revenues from sales to other regulated companies for resale, as calculated by the public service commission, must be excluded from the determination of the total gross operating revenue pursuant to 69-1-224"; and inserted (2) requiring notice of fee by mail to regulated companies.

CHAPTER 3 REGULATION OF UTILITIES

Chapter Case Notes

Judicial Power of Public Service Commission: The Public Service Commission is a creature of statute. It has no inherent common-law powers. Its powers are to be ascertained by reference to the statute creating it, and any reasonable doubt as to the existence of the grant of a particular power will be resolved against the existence of the power. While statutes give the P.S.C. full power of supervision, regulation, and control of utilities, the Legislature has provided that its powers do not include judicial powers. Statutes do not confer upon the P.S.C. the power to restrain or enjoin the creation of a utility holding company during a P.S.C. investigation. Adequate remedies are provided in the court system. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 206 M 359, 671 P2d 604, 40 St. Rep. 1712 (1983).

Public Service Commission — Power to Issue Summary Injunction-Type Order: The Public Service Commission issued an order prohibiting Montana Power from proceeding with a proposed corporate reorganization until the P.S.C. could investigate the reorganization. The order was issued without notice or hearing. Section 69-3-110 shows the clear legislative intent that the Commission use the court system to seek enforcement by injunction, as distinguished from issuing the injunction-type order on its own part. Summary issuance of an injunction-type order without notice or hearing should be limited to situations where the public risk to be avoided outweighs the limitations placed on the constitutional rights of the parties. In this case the Commission has advanced no justification for its disregard of the due process rights of Montana Power. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 206 M 359, 671 P2d 604, 40 St. Rep. 1712 (1983).

Interference by Public Service Commission With Contract Between a Public Utility and Its Customer: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has authority to modify or supersede a contract between a public utility and its customer if the contract poses an immediate threat to the utility's ability to serve or if the contract adversely affects the utility's rate structure. Otherwise the P.S.C. does not have the authority to exercise the judicial functions of interpreting or enforcing such a contract. *Billings v. 2011 Amendment: Chapter 214 in (1)(e) after "towns" deleted "and villages"; inserted (2)(c) regarding municipal systems; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

Severability: Section 14, Ch. 214, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

1985 Amendments: Chapter 195 inserted (2)(c) expanding exemption from definition of public utility to include person exempt under 69-3-111.

Chapter 546 in (1)(f) substituted "regulated telecommunications" for "telegraph or telephone".

1983 Amendment: Inserted (2) describing services not included in the definition of public utility; made section permanent.

Regulation of Rates by County Water and Sewer Districts — Coordinate Legislation: Section 1, Ch. 374, L. 1983, provided: "Regulation of rates by county water and county sewer districts. (1) A county water district or a county sewer district formed under the provisions of Title 7, chapter 13, part 22 or 23, may impose, as it considers proper, rates, charges, and classifications for utility services to the residents of the district and other persons served by its utility system.

(2) In exercising its regulatory authority a county water or a county sewer district is granted the same authority and is bound by the same procedures and limitations as a municipality regulating a utility under the provisions of this chapter."

Section 4, Ch. 374, L. 1983, provided: "Coordination instruction. If Senate bill 436, introduced in the 48th Legislature, is passed and approved containing, as amendatory language in section 5 or any other section amending 69-3-101, an exclusion of county or consolidated city and county water or sewer districts as established under Title 7, chapter 13, parts 22 and 23, from the definition of public utility, then this act is void."

Senate Bill 436 was passed and approved and became Ch. 588, L. 1983. Chapter 374, L. 1983, is therefore void.

1981 Amendment: Inserted "except as provided in chapter 7" at the beginning of water and sewage exemption.

Case Notes

City as Public Utility: A city acting in its proprietary capacity as an operator of water, sewer, and lighting facilities is a public utility. St. v. Helena, 193 M 441, 632 P2d 332, 38 St. Rep. 1283 (1981).

Jurisdiction Over Municipal Sewage Rates: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has jurisdiction over municipal sewage rates and, accordingly, the issue of fairness of sewage rates is determined by the P.S.C. Gwynn v. Eureka, 178 M 191, 582 P2d 1262 (1978).

Limited Membership Association Not Public Utility: Defendant association was not public utility where only members were allowed to use water system furnished by association and members used system on nonprofit cost-sharing basis and were bound by its rules and regulations. Lockwood Water Users Ass'n v. Anderson, 168 M 303, 542 P2d 1217 (1975).

Water for Business Fire Protection: Water for business fire protection was a "business use" within this section, so a city supplying water for that purpose was a public utility as defined by this section. Polson v. P.S.C., 155 M 464, 473 P2d 508 (1970).

Water — Clothed With Public Interest: In an action to enjoin the inhabitants of a town from further use of a ditch that they had tapped for domestic uses over a period of years, considerable argument was made that plaintiffs were a public utility under this section and therefore subject to jurisdiction of Public Service Commission. However, the Commission was not a party to the action, and the court did not pass on the point but did hold that property (including water) may be clothed with a public interest, depending upon the extent and character of the use, making it a public consequence and affecting the community at large. Sherlock v. Greaves, 106 M 206, 76 P2d 87 (1938).

Property Devoted to Use in Public Interest: When one devotes his property to a use in which the public has an interest, he in effect grants to the public an interest in that use and must submit to control by the public for the common good to the extent of the interest he has thus created. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

Foreign Corporation Piping Gas Into State: A foreign corporation that was licensed to do business in Montana and that conveyed natural gas by pipeline from a neighboring state into this state and furnished it to a domestic corporation whose entire capital stock it owned (with the exception of 5 of 2,500 shares), for distribution of gas to domestic corporation's customers, was a public utility within the meaning of this section. As such it was subject to the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission of Montana and therefore required to furnish the Commission annual reports of its operations. Gallatin Natural Gas Co. v. P.S.C., 79 M 269, 256 P 373 (1927).

Irrigation Company: An irrigation company organized for the purpose of supplying water for the irrigation of agricultural lands is not a "public utility" within the meaning of this act and is therefore not subject to supervision and regulation by the Public Service Commission. State ex rel. Thatcher v. Boyle, 62 M 97, 204 P 378 (1921).

City Water Business: A city engaging in the water business is a public utility. P.S.C. v. Helena, 52 M 527, 159 P 54 (1916).

P.S.C. Jurisdiction Limited as Against City: It was the intention of the Legislature to go no further than to provide that, within the limited sphere of its jurisdiction, the Public Service Commission may make reasonable regulations that the city must heed, and to that extent only is the authority of the city superseded. It was not intended to take from the city the active management of its water plant, or the authority to appoint the proper officers and employees to operate it, or to interfere with such officers in the proper discharge of their duties. P.S.C. v. Helena, 52 M 527, 159 P 54 (1916).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority for Creation of Public Benefit Nonprofit Corporation to Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utility Business: The Montana Nonprofit Corporation Act, Title 35, ch. 2, allows the creation of a public benefit nonprofit corporation and an interlocal agreement creating a corporation as the nonprofit corporation's sole member to operate an electric and natural gas utility. The authority created by interlocal agreement between self-governing municipalities may exercise only those powers that any of the municipalities might exercise. 51 A.G. Op. 5 (2005). Case Notes

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — No Authority in Negligence Action: An electric service customer filed an action in District Court alleging property damage based on a power company's negligence and negligence per se in terminating the customer's electric service. The District Court dismissed the action, reasoning that the customer did not exhaust administrative remedies before the Public Service Commission (PSC). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the grounds that the PSC is not vested with judicial powers and does not have the authority to adjudicate a negligence action seeking damages. Schuster v. NW. Energy Co., 2013 MT 364, 373 Mont. 54, 314 P.3d 650.

Judicial Power of Public Service Commission: The Public Service Commission is a creature of statute. It has no inherent common-law powers. Its powers are to be ascertained by reference to the statute creating it, and any reasonable doubt as to the existence of the grant of a particular power will be resolved against the existence of the power. While statutes give the P.S.C. full power of supervision, regulation, and control of utilities, the Legislature has provided that its powers do not include judicial powers. Statutes do not confer upon the P.S.C. the power to restrain or enjoin the creation of a utility holding company during a P.S.C. investigation. Adequate remedies are provided in the court system. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 206 M 359, 671 P2d 604, 40 St. Rep. 1712 (1983).

Commission's Authority to Declare Telephone Service Inadequate: The Public Service Commission had authority under this section and 69-3-201 to issue an order, after a hearing, that telephone service provided by telephone company was not reasonably adequate. Intermountain Tel. & Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 201 M 74, 651 P2d 1015, 39 St. Rep. 1962 (1982).

Trade Secrets — When to Be Disclosed and to Whom — Protectable Property: A telephone utility was required to disclose trade secrets to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to aid in a decision on its rate increase request. The utility was entitled to a protective order preventing access to the secrets by the general public, but the Montana Consumer Counsel and any citizen whose interest related to the ratemaking function of the P.S.C. could have access to the information. Use or disclosure of the trade secrets except for purposes of the ratemaking proceeding was prohibited. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 277, 634 P2d 181, 38 St. Rep. 1479 (1981). Mtn. States and its progeny were overruled to the extent that those decisions relied on the constitutional balancing test of the right to individual privacy against the public's right to examine documents or observe governmental deliberations as a basis of protecting trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information of nonhuman entities in Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Rate Increases by Public Service Commission — Private Contract Not Invalidated: A 1963 contract between the city of Billings and the County Water District of Billings Heights is valid and binding on the parties despite the increase in size of the service area of the County Water District and despite the city's contention that rate increases previously granted by the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) had the effect of nullifying the contract. When the P.S.C. exercises its jurisdiction over rates charged by a utility, the rate provisions are superseded but the remainder of the contract provisions remain in effect. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

No Authority to Require Independent Audit: The enforcement authority of the Public Service Commission under 69-3-106, 69-3-109, 69-3-202, and 69-3-203 does not include the power to order a private utility to employ an independent accounting firm to audit utility's costs. In re Mont. Power Co., 180 M 385, 590 P2d 1140 (1979).

Jurisdiction Over Municipal Sewage Rates: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has jurisdiction over municipal sewage rates and, accordingly, the issue of fairness of sewage rates is determined by the P.S.C. Gwynn v. Eureka, 178 M 191, 582 P2d 1262 (1978).

Statutory Expansion of Jurisdiction: When statutes are enacted by the Legislature that expand previously enacted statutes by broadening the jurisdiction of an administrative agency, the statutes are to be construed in relation to one another and, for construction purposes, should be considered as forming one consistent body of law. Gwynn v. Eureka, 178 M 191, 582 P2d 1262 (1978).

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — No Authority in Negligence Action: An electric service customer filed an action in District Court alleging property damage based on a power company's negligence and negligence per se in terminating the customer's electric service. The District Court dismissed the action, reasoning that the customer did not exhaust administrative remedies before the Public Service Commission (PSC). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the grounds that the PSC is not vested with judicial powers and does not have the authority to adjudicate a negligence action seeking damages. Schuster v. NW. Energy Co., 2013 MT 364, 373 Mont. 54, 314 P.3d 650.

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — Standing Under Statute Alone: In considering whether taxpayers had standing to file a complaint against NorthWestern Energy, the Supreme Court noted that the Public Service Commission is an administrative agency and is not vested with judicial powers. Therefore, its standing requirements are governed by statute and not by traditional case-or-controversy requirements. Williamson v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2012 MT 32, 364 Mont. 128, 272 P.3d 71.

Access to Public Service Records — Media Required to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Prior to Court Action — Review of Confidentiality Rules Ordered: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. The Commission denied the request on confidentiality grounds, but rather than challenging the confidentiality claims through the Commission's administrative procedures, the organizations filed an action in District Court. The court proceeded to make factual and legal determinations to determine whether the requested documents constituted constitutionally protected trade secrets or proprietary information without the benefit of the Commission developing a record or making threshold determinations on the complex issues. The Supreme Court held that it was improper to bypass the administrative agency and take the issue to District Court without exhausting the Commission's administrative procedures, so the District Court was reversed with orders to remand the case to the Commission for further consideration. However, the Supreme Court also required the Commission to review its administrative rules related to confidentiality challenges because the rules primarily addressed requests for information from competitor utilities and did not necessarily apply to media challenges. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Public Service Commission Rules Creating Impermissible Presumption of Confidentiality in Trade Secrets: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. Applying its administrative rules, the Commission evaluated the power company's claims of confidentiality against basic trade secret law, found that the company had met the initial burden of establishing trade secrets, and concluded that because the media had presented no evidence or argument to the contrary, the company information was entitled to constitutional protection as a matter of law. The Supreme Court disagreed. To the extent that the Commission's rules relied on mere company representations that the information contained trade secrets, the Commission unconstitutionally shifted the initial burden of proof to the public to challenge the confidentiality claims, creating a presumption of confidentiality that directly conflicted with the public's right to view public records and the Commission's duty to make its records available to the public. The court held that a nonhuman entity seeking protective measures for alleged confidential materials filed with a governmental regulating agency must support its claim with a supporting affidavit making a prima facie showing that the materials constitute property rights that are protected by due process. Further, the showing must be more than conclusory and specific enough for the Commission, any objecting parties, and reviewing authorities to clearly understand the nature and basis of the confidentiality claim. The agency then must review the materials at the time of filing, in accordance with 30-14-402(4)(b) and supporting case law, and make an independent determination whether the materials are in fact property rights entitled to due process protection. To the extent that Commission rules required less, the court directed revision of Commission rules to comport with this holding. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Finding of Perpetual Contractual Obligation Invalid: A contract between the city of Billings and an adjoining county water district does not, as the District Court found, bind the parties to a perpetual obligation until the consent of both parties to terminate the contract is obtained. The Supreme Court found that the life of the contract is indefinite, not perpetual, and may be terminated by the Public Service Commission if the Commission finds such action necessary and within its jurisdiction over rates and service. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

Interference by Public Service Commission With Contract Between a Public Utility and Its Customer: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has authority to modify or supersede a contract between a public utility and its customer if the contract poses an immediate threat to the utility's ability to serve or if the contract adversely affects the utility's rate structure. Otherwise the P.S.C. does not have the authority to exercise the judicial functions of interpreting or enforcing such a contract. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

No Immediate Threat to Ability to Serve Found: City's claim that its ability to serve as a utility was immediately threatened was not supported by its argument and testimony that its customer's service area expansion would cause the city to face a severe water shortage. This is so given the fact that the city was engaged in an extensive building program to improve its water service capabilities. Moreover, the city failed to prove by substantial evidence the existence of an immediate threat to its service ability when it argued that a contract provision between the city and its customer imposed an unreasonable burden on the city to maintain at its own expense all water mains and pumping facilities sufficient to meet the demands of the customer. This failure of proof is due primarily to the fact that no figures of actual increase in customer usage were provided. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

Rate Increases by Public Service Commission — Private Contract Not Invalidated: A 1963 contract between the city of Billings and the County Water District of Billings Heights is valid and binding on the parties despite the increase in size of the service area of the County Water District and despite the city's contention that rate increases previously granted by the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) had the effect of nullifying the contract. When the P.S.C. exercises its jurisdiction over rates charged by a utility, the rate provisions are superseded but the remainder of the contract provisions remain in effect. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

No Authority to Require Independent Audit: The enforcement authority of the Public Service Commission under 69-3-106, 69-3-109, 69-3-202, and 69-3-203 does not include the power to order a private utility to employ an independent accounting firm to audit utility's costs. In re Mont. Power Co., 180 M 385, 590 P2d 1140 (1979).

Statutory Expansion of Jurisdiction: When statutes are enacted by the Legislature that expand previously enacted statutes by broadening the jurisdiction of an administrative agency, the statutes are to be construed in relation to one another and, for construction purposes, and should be considered as forming one consistent body of law. Gwynn v. Eureka, 178 M 191, 582 P2d 1262 (1978).

Automatic Rate Increase Hearings: The Public Service Commission authorization of automatic adjustment of electric company rates for increases or decreases in price of fuel was a fair and equitable exercise of the supervisory and regulatory powers of the Commission. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Rate Increase Hearings: When an electric company applied for an increase in utility rates to offset the increase in price of fuel in 1974, the Public Service Commission was correct in refusing to expand its hearing into a full-scale examination of the general rate structure and rate of return because the Commission had held full-scale hearings in 1972. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

"Minihearings" Limited to Specific Proper Considerations: The Public Service Commission is not required to hold a full-scale hearing and examination of all revenue and expense accounts of a company to determine whether proposed rates and charges are just and reasonable where company only seeks to "pass through" to its customers increases in cost of purchased gas and royalty expense, as the Commission is not required to exercise more of its powers than it determines appropriate. Mont. Consumer Counsel, Brazier v. P.S.C. & Mont. Power Co., 168 M 177, 541 P2d 769 (1975).

Informal Hearing: Fundamentals of a fair hearing, required by Art. III, sec. 27, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const.), were denied parties opposing rate increase when a hearing was held by the Public Service Commission without the presence of the opponents and when the testimony of that hearing was not spread on the record. Cascade County Consumers Ass'n v. P.S.C., 144 M 169, 394 P2d 856 (1964).

Posthearing Audit: When an audit had been requested in a utility rate increase case by opponents of the increase, both sides were given ample time to present evidence and cross-examine witnesses, opponents were permitted to go into utility books with expert witnesses, and the Public Service Commission hired independent rate experts, opponents were not denied a full and fair hearing because of a posthearing audit made by Commission employees. Cascade County Consumers Ass'n v. P.S.C., 144 M 169, 394 P2d 856 (1964).

Commission Not to Adjudicate Water Rights: The District Court issued a Writ of Prohibition restraining the Public Service Commission from entertaining a complaint of farmers that a hydroelectric company, by storing water for use in its operations incident to generating electricity for public use, was depriving them of water for irrigation purposes. The Supreme Court held, on application for Writ of Supervisory Control to annul the Writ, that the farmers were asking in effect for an adjudication of water rights, a judicial function belonging to the court, which under this section the Commission is precluded from exercising. State ex rel. P.S.C. v. District Court, 107 M 240, 84 P2d 335 (1938).

Legislature Not to Exercise Judicial Function Through Commission: Under Art. IV, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const.), prohibiting any one of the three departments of the state government from exercising any of the powers properly belonging to either of the others, the Legislature cannot, through the medium of the Public Service Commission, exercise judicial powers. State ex rel. P.S.C. v. District Court, 107 M 240, 84 P2d 335 (1938).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 144 in (1) after "public" substituted "during regular business hours, as defined in 2-16-117" for "at reasonable times, subject to the exception that when the commission considers it necessary, in the interest of the public, it may withhold from the public any facts or information in its possession for a period of not more than 90 days after the acquisition of the facts or information"; and in (2) after "30-14-402" inserted "or other information that must be protected under law, as". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1987 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; and inserted (2) authorizing Commission to issue protective order when necessary to preserve trade secrets.

No Constitutional Right to Privacy for Nonhuman Entities — Protection of Trade Secrets Under Other Constitutional and Statutory Schemes: Montana's constitutional individual privacy exception to the public's right to know is limited to natural human individuals only and does not apply to nonhuman entities such as corporations. However, nothing in Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., requires disclosure of trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information when that data is protected from disclosure elsewhere in the state or federal constitution or by statute. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003), overruling Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 277, 634 P2d 181 (1981), and its progeny to the extent that those decisions relied on the constitutional balancing test of the right to individual privacy against the public's right to examine documents or observe governmental deliberations as a basis of protecting trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information of nonhuman entities.

Trade Secrets — When to Be Disclosed and to Whom — Protectable Property: A telephone utility was required to disclose trade secrets to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to aid in a decision on its rate increase request. Public Service Commission Authorized to Obtain Information From Utilities in Any Manner Necessary to Perform Agency Duties: The statutory duty of the Public Service Commission to investigate utilities may not be hindered by limiting the Commission's ability to obtain information in a specific manner. *Qwest Corp. v. City's Managerial Authority Not Hampered by Reporting Requirements: The requirement that the city of Billings establish an account to show activity regarding funds granted for recurring annual capital improvements does not run contrary to the provisions of the city's bond ordinance or the provisions of the Municipal Revenue Bond Act of 1939. The maintenance of such an account is a legitimate means by which the Public Service Commission can stay abreast of activities over which it has supervisory and regulatory authority. *Helena v. Case Notes

Standing of Attorney General to Appeal P.S.C. Order — P.S.C. Appeal Untimely: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied completely M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C. as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court. Further, in his official capacity, the Attorney General could not appeal a decision that was within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. The appeal of the P.S.C. was untimely, although within 7 days of the notice of appeal filed by the Attorney General. Since the latter appeal was invalid, the P.S.C. appeal would have to fall within the 60-day rule. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Siting Act Not Implied Repeal of "Used and Useful" for Ratemaking: In 1973, Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) filed an application for a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need for Colstrip Units 3 and 4 under the Montana Major Facility Siting Act. In granting the certificate, the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Department of Environmental Quality) found that there was a need for the energy which would be produced and that the units would serve the public interest, convenience, and necessity. After Unit 3 was completed, M.P.C. filed an application with the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to increase electric rates to reflect Unit 3 in its rate base. At the rate hearing, the P.S.C. took evidence regarding whether Unit 3 was "used and useful". M.P.C. moved to strike this testimony, contending the P.S.C. was precluded from considering this by the certificate of need issued under the Siting Act. M.P.C. filed an application for original jurisdiction and declaratory judgment or other appropriate relief with the Supreme Court. The P.S.C. later concluded Unit 3 was not used and useful and could not be included in the rate base. The Supreme Court found that while the Siting Act includes factors which can be associated with the used and useful concept of utility regulation, the primary purposes of the Siting Act are to ensure minimal environmental, natural resource, and social impacts. The need determination is related primarily to environmental protection rather than rate base treatment for the facility. Once the facility is constructed, the P.S.C. has jurisdiction to determine whether the facility is actually used and useful and whether the facility's output is required by the ratepayers. The Siting Act and the utility regulation statutes are reconcilable. The Siting Act did not impliedly repeal the P.S.C.'s authority to determine whether a facility is used and useful for ratemaking. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 214 M 82, 692 P2d 432, 41 St. Rep. 2332 (1984).

Siting Act Decision Not Estoppel for P.S.C. Ratemaking Decision: In 1973, Montana Power Co. (M.P.C.) filed an application for a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need for Colstrip Units 3 and 4 under the Montana Major Facility Siting Act. In granting the certificate, the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Department of Environmental Quality) found that there was a need for the energy which would be produced and that the units would serve the public interest, convenience, and necessity. After Unit 3 was completed, M.P.C. filed an application with the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to increase electric rates to reflect Unit 3 in its rate base. At the rate hearing, the P.S.C. took evidence regarding whether Unit 3 was "used and useful". M.P.C. moved to strike this testimony, contending the P.S.C. was precluded from considering this by the certificate of need issued under the Siting Act. M.P.C. filed an application for original jurisdiction and declaratory judgment or other appropriate relief with the Supreme Court. The P.S.C. later concluded Unit 3 was not used and useful and could not be included in the rate base. M.P.C. argued that the P.S.C. was collaterally estopped from considering whether Unit 3 was "used and useful". The court held that the need issue determined in the siting process was not identical to the used and useful issue, therefore collateral estoppel was not applicable. The M.P.C. also argued that because of the certificate of need, the state was promissory estopped from excluding Unit 3 from the rate base. M.P.C. contended that issuance of a certificate of need under the Siting Act established a contractual relationship between the state and M.P.C. The court held that issuance of a certificate by a governmental authority to engage in conduct that would be improper without a certificate does not create a contractual relationship between the state and the licensee. Neither the Siting Act nor the certificate of need contemplates a promise that a facility will be included in a utility's rate base. Promissory estoppel was also inapplicable. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 214 M 82, 692 P2d 432, 41 St. Rep. 2332 (1984).

No Authority to Require Independent Audit: The enforcement authority of the Public Service Commission under 69-3-106, 69-3-109, 69-3-202, and 69-3-203 does not include the power to order a private utility to employ an independent accounting firm to audit the utility's costs. In re Mont. Power Co., 180 M 385, 590 P2d 1140 (1979).

Rate Base Determination: Under this section the Public Service Commission is obligated to eliminate from the rate base all utility costs in excess of original cost. In its use of the term "revaluation", the Legislature clearly contemplated the possibility that later Public Service Commissions, under appropriate circumstances, might modify or alter the property valuations made by earlier Commissions. In re Mont. Power Co., 180 M 385, 590 P2d 1140 (1979).

Constitutionality of "Pass Through" Cost: Commission disallowance of "pass through" costs to extent confiscatory is a violation of the constitutional prohibition against taking property without due process of law. State ex rel. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 169 M 99, 548 P2d 136 (1975).

Leaseholds: The value of gas leases was properly included in the rate base for a power company seeking an increased natural gas rate when there was ample testimony about the leaseholds being used, and the evidence was useful to support the Public Service Commission. Cascade County Consumers Ass'n v. P.S.C., 144 M 169, 394 P2d 856 (1964).

Fair Value: Although the statute does not establish a formula for arriving at fair value, it does require such value to be found and used as a base in fixing rates. The reasonableness and justness of the rates must be related to this finding of fair value. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 131 M 272, 309 P2d 1035 (1957).

Investigation by Commission: The provision of this section authorizing the Public Service Commission to make an investigation is permissive only, and it is not mandatory that the Commission make a separate investigation. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 131 M 104, 308 P2d 633 (1957).

Method of Ascertaining Value — Reproduction Cost: The Public Service Commission did not err in fixing the value of the plant when they considered the reproduction cost new less depreciation, the original cost less depreciation, and the assessed value of taxable property. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 131 M 104, 308 P2d 633 (1957).

Commission Not to Fix Rates So Low as to Take Property: The Public Service Commission, in regulating rates, should under this section ascertain the present fair value of the utility. Rates, as well as the return on the utility's investment for services rendered, must be reasonable. The Commission cannot under the law fix rates so low as to result in a taking of property without just compensation to the owner. No particular method is required but it must be done under proper legal procedure and restrictions. Tobacco River Power Co. v. P.S.C., 109 M 521, 98 P2d 886 (1940).

Value of Property at Time of Trial — Proper: In arriving at the value of the utility's property, the cost of reproduction less depreciation is usually regarded as one of the most important factors, if not the dominant factor. In an action to enjoin the Public Service Commission from enforcing an order reducing rates, the court properly admitted evidence of that character and determined the question of value as of the date of trial rather than upon that of the order made 2 years earlier because a number of changes had taken place in the interval. Tobacco River Power Co. v. P.S.C., 109 M 521, 98 P2d 886 (1940).

Case Notes

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — No Authority in Negligence Action: An electric service customer filed an action in District Court alleging property damage based on a power company's negligence and negligence per se in terminating the customer's electric service. The District Court dismissed the action, reasoning that the customer did not exhaust administrative remedies before the Public Service Commission (PSC). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the grounds that the PSC is not vested with judicial powers and does not have the authority to adjudicate a negligence action seeking damages. Schuster v. NW. Energy Co., 2013 MT 364, 373 Mont. 54, 314 P.3d 650.

Standing of Attorney General to Appeal P.S.C. Order — P.S.C. Appeal Untimely: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied completely M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C. as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court. Further, in his official capacity, the Attorney General could not appeal a decision that was within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. The appeal of the P.S.C. was untimely, although within 7 days of the notice of appeal filed by the Attorney General. Since the latter appeal was invalid, the P.S.C. appeal would have to fall within the 60-day rule. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Public Service Commission — Power to Issue Summary Injunction-Type Order: The Public Service Commission issued an order prohibiting Montana Power from proceeding with a proposed corporate reorganization until the P.S.C. could investigate the reorganization. The order was issued without notice or hearing. Section 69-3-110 shows the clear legislative intent that the Commission use the court system to seek enforcement by injunction, as distinguished from issuing the injunction-type order on its own part. Summary issuance of an injunction-type order without notice or hearing should be limited to situations where the public risk to be avoided outweighs the limitations placed on the constitutional rights of the parties. In this case the Commission has advanced no justification for its disregard of the due process rights of Montana Power. Mont. Power Co. v. P.S.C., 206 M 359, 671 P2d 604, 40 St. Rep. 1712 (1983).

Operation and Effect: In view of the provisions of this section and 69-3-401, that the rates fixed by the Public Service Commission for a public utility shall remain in full force and effect pending final determination by the court of a proceeding calling them in question, and the provision of this section specifically authorizing mandamus proceedings to control obedience to the orders issued, the fact that a proceeding questioning the legality of the rates is pending in court does not bar the Commission from applying for a Writ of Mandate to compel obedience to its order pendente lite. State ex rel. P.S.C. v. Great N. Util. Co., 86 M 442, 284 P 772 (1930).

Power to Fix Minimum or Precise Rates: The Public Service Commission, under its power to regulate a public utility, is clothed with authority not only to fix maximum but also minimum or precise rates. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

Reasonable Service and Equipment: The Legislature in enacting the public service commission law intended not only to empower the Commission to regulate charges or fix rates, but also to see to it that reasonable service is rendered by the utility and that its equipment is reasonably adequate. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

Orders Prima Facie Lawful:

The orders of the Public Service Commission are by this section made prima facie lawful until changed or modified. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930).

Rates fixed by the Public Service Commission for a public utility furnishing hot-water heat in a city are prima facie lawful, can be attacked in court on the sole ground that they are unlawful or unreasonable, and must be deemed reasonable and just until final determination by the courts, the burden of proof resting upon the party attacking the order of the Commission. Billings Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 62 M 21, 203 P 366 (1921).

Power Over Rates Existing Prior to Enactment: The law creating the Public Service Commission confers upon the Commission the power, within the lawful exercise of its authority, to change the rates, tolls, and charges in public utility contracts, even though they existed prior to the passage of the law. Billings v. P.S.C., 67 M 29, 214 P 608 (1923).

Power of State:

A municipality and a party to whom it grants a franchise to construct and operate a public heating plant enter into the contract with the knowledge that while a municipality may contract respecting rates, the state may at any time thereafter in furtherance of the public welfare exercise its inherent power of rate regulation and control. Billings v. P.S.C., 67 M 29, 214 P 608 (1923), distinguished in Baker v. Mont. Petroleum Co., 99 M 465, 44 P2d 735 (1935).

The establishment of a rate is a legislative and not a judicial act, and the power of the courts is circumscribed and restrained so far as interference with determinations reached within the scope of legislative authority is concerned. Billings Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 62 M 21, 203 P 366 (1921).

Case Notes

Public Service Investigation Not Subject to Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court held that the PSC orders unlawfully imposed a rate case filing requirement on plaintiff that violated state law and the PSC's own administrative rules. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC investigation was subject to judicial review. Plaintiff's justification for seeking intermediate review under 2-4-701 was that if plaintiff did not challenge the lawfulness of the PSC orders, then plaintiff would eventually suffer harm. However, judicial review under 2-4-701 is not justified when the only allegation of harm is speculation that further agency action may take place and, if it takes place, that it may have legal consequences. Courts may intervene in an agency process only when a specific final agency action has an actual or immediately threatened effect. Here, there was no final PSC action, only an investigation, and when an agency has not adjudicated the issues raised on appeal, there is no final agency action upon which a District Court can assume jurisdiction. Thus, the PSC investigation was not subject to judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007), following Marble v. St., 2000 MT 240, 301 M 373, 9 P3d 617 (2000). See also *Lujan v. When Agency Decision Ripe for Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court determined that the issues were ripe for judicial review. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC's actions were in fact ripe for judicial review. To determine ripeness, the court applied the criteria in Ohio Forestry Ass'n v. Sierra Club, 523 US 726 (1998), noting that a reviewing court must consider whether: (1) delayed review would cause hardship to the plaintiffs;

(2) judicial intervention would inappropriately interfere with further administrative action; and (3) the courts would benefit from further factual development of the issues presented. In this case, the court decided that the PSC decision was not ripe for judicial review. First, judicial review of a preliminary step that has no binding legal consequences is not available even when the initiation of proceedings is serious and may have severe consequences, and because there were no irremediable adverse consequences that flowed from the PSC investigation, delayed judicial review would not cause a hardship for plaintiff. Second, judicial intervention would have inappropriately interfered with further PSC administrative action and frustrated the PSC's ability to review the information and decide the best course of action. Third, because the PSC had only initiated an investigation, the District Court reviewed issues upon which the PSC had not yet taken action, and because there was no specific factual record, further factual development of the issues would have benefited the courts. The District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007).

Erroneous Conclusion Regarding Accord and Agreement to Pay Contested Utility Bill — Judgment Improper: The Missoula Electric Cooperative, Inc. (Co-op), agreed to reconnect St. John's electric service if she entered a written agreement to pay a disputed balance in monthly installments. After the agreement was signed, the Co-op altered the document by adding the words "Accord and Satisfaction". The District Court found that although St. John had agreed to make payments solely to restore electric service to her house, she had nevertheless agreed to "settle" the dispute, and having only partially complied with the settlement agreement, the court entered judgment against St. John for the remaining amount. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that St. John had a basis for disputing the Co-op billing and that agreeing to make payments to restore power to her residence did not amount to an agreement to settle the dispute. As the record and findings of fact indicated, there was no settlement agreement and the trial court's judgment in favor of the Co-op was in error. The case was remanded to address the merits of St. John's billing dispute and her claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress. St. John v. Missoula Elec. Co-op, Inc., 282 M 315, 938 P2d 586, 54 St. Rep. 361 (1997).

Failure to Provide Electricity to Farmer With Three Years of Unpaid Bills: Farmer's contract with electric company for irrigation pump electricity provided that no electricity would be provided if past due balances were unpaid. During a severe 1985 drought, company refused electricity because of unpaid balances totaling $3,737.50 for 1982 through 1984. Farmer's crops failed for lack of water, and farmer sued company for damages. Summary judgment for company on the claim was affirmed. Company had no duty to provide water in view of the unpaid balances. The contractual instrument between farmer and company was modified by a "member service policy" that provided that company may allow installment payment in special circumstances. The court held that the member service policy applied only to residential electricity contracts and that it was not unreasonable to refuse the electricity for the irrigation pumps, particularly because farmer, at times, had the money to pay his balances but chose not to and instead gambled that he would not need to irrigate in 1985. Farmer's allegation that he had $1,914.90 in capital credits was not considered because there was no evidence that farmer offered the credits as part payment or that farmer and company discussed the credits. Ballenger v. N. Lights, Inc., 249 M 327, 815 P2d 1156, 48 St. Rep. 767 (1991).

Commission's Authority to Declare Telephone Service Inadequate: The Public Service Commission had authority under this section and 69-3-102 to issue an order, after a hearing, that telephone service provided by telephone company was not reasonably adequate. Intermountain Tel. & Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 201 M 74, 651 P2d 1015, 39 St. Rep. 1962 (1982).

Insufficient Evidentiary Basis for Determining Reasonableness of Utility Expense: On an appeal from an order of the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), the Supreme Court held that the P.S.C. improperly applied a rate of return method, as opposed to a free marketplace comparison, in ascertaining the reasonableness of a utility's expense in purchasing coal from a wholly owned subsidiary. The Supreme Court stated the P.S.C. must have sufficient evidence before it to determine if a particular rate of return is fair and just for the subsidiary as compared to other coal companies and, further, if the rate of return of the utility may also be applied to the subsidiary coal company. While the P.S.C. does have the right to choose the method followed, the Supreme Court did not find a factual reason for the summary rejection of the marketplace cost of coal approach. Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Bollinger, 193 M 508, 632 P2d 1086, 38 St. Rep. 1221 (1981).

Jurisdiction of Public Service Commission Over Water Service Area of a Utility: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has no authority to determine water service area boundaries of an incorporated city, nor may the P.S.C. assume jurisdiction over the expansion of an adjoining county water district. Under 7-13-2341 control over the size of the county water district is expressly vested in the board of directors and the electors. The statute does not mention a requirement of P.S.C. approval before land may be added to a county water district. As an administrative agency, the P.S.C. may not assume jurisdiction over the expansion of the district boundaries without express delegation of authority by the Legislature. It should be noted, however, that the P.S.C. has authority under 69-3-201 to determine on a case-by-case basis whether adequate service is provided at reasonable rates to customers who are within the service area. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

Definition of "Public Utility" — Denial of Service: Voluntary nonprofit corporation organized for purpose of supplying water to members, when service is rendered only to members who share operation costs, was not a "public utility", and services can be denied a member who breaches conditions of agreement to provide water. Lockwood Water Users Ass'n v. Anderson, 168 M 303, 542 P2d 121 (1975).

Exempt Association Not Required to Furnish Service: A voluntary nonprofit corporation organized for the purpose of supplying water to its members is not a public utility and can enjoin a trailer court member from placing additional trailers in the court in violation of an agreement. The agreement specified that no more than 60 mobile home sites were to be serviced, as the association confined its services to members of its own group and does not serve or hold itself out as willing to serve the public and therefore is not considered a public utility. Because the association is not a public utility, it is not subject to the jurisdiction or regulation of the Public Service Commission, and its contracts with its members are enforceable. Lockwood Water Users Ass'n v. Anderson, 168 M 303, 542 P2d 121 (1975).

Denial of Service: A public utility is not permitted under this section to deny service on grounds that its facilities are in poor condition. Polson v. P.S.C., 155 M 464, 473 P2d 508 (1970).

Charge for Tapping Water Mains: A flat-rate charge by the city for the "service" of tapping water mains located entirely within the public right-of-way, based on an average cost experience over a period of years yielding no overall profit to the city, is reasonable and valid under this section. Leischner v. Knight, 135 M 109, 337 P2d 359 (1959).

Sierra Club*, 523 US 726 (1998), noting that a reviewing court must consider whether: (1) delayed review would cause hardship to the plaintiffs; (2) judicial intervention would inappropriately interfere with further administrative action; and (3) the courts would benefit from further factual development of the issues presented. In this case, the court decided that the PSC decision was not ripe for judicial review. First, judicial review of a preliminary step that has no binding legal consequences is not available even when the initiation of proceedings is serious and may have severe consequences, and because there were no irreparable adverse consequences that flowed from the PSC investigation, delayed judicial review would not cause a hardship for plaintiff. Second, judicial intervention would have inappropriately interfered with further PSC administrative action and frustrated the PSC's ability to review the information and decide the best course of action. Third, because the PSC had only initiated an investigation, the District Court reviewed issues upon which the PSC had not yet taken action, and because there was no specific factual record, further factual development of the issues would have benefited the courts. The District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007).

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — No Authority in Negligence Action: An electric service customer filed an action in District Court alleging property damage based on a power company's negligence and negligence per se in terminating the customer's electric service. The District Court dismissed the action, reasoning that the customer did not exhaust administrative remedies before the Public Service Commission (PSC). On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the grounds that the PSC is not vested with judicial powers and does not have the authority to adjudicate a negligence action seeking damages. *Schuster v. Allocation of Cost of Service Benefits to Resident Taxpayers: In allocating cost of service benefits between the city of Billings and an adjoining water district, the Public Service Commission's (P.S.C.) order, which requires the city and district to effect the passing on of the cost of service benefit to city residents receiving water from the district, is valid. While the city contends that the determinative factor in deciding who receives the cost of service benefit is not whether the party is a city taxpayer but whether the party is a city water customer, the Supreme Court disagrees. It does not matter that the municipal utility is paid for completely by generated revenue and not through tax dollars; all city residents who are taxpayers are entitled to a cost of service benefit. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Extra Capacity Factor in Allocating Cost of Service: The Public Service Commission's (P.S.C.) decision to reject the city's proposed extra capacity factor, which was based upon a contract provision between the city and an adjoining water district in allocating cost of services to the water district, was upheld by the Supreme Court. The P.S.C. had substantial evidence before it in determining the extra capacity factor to be assigned to the district, and the decision, which was based on actual water use and comparisons from large water consumers similar in extent of demand to the water district, was not clearly erroneous. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Normalization of Test-Year Data in Rate Determination: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) has no statutory duty to normalize test-year data; it is within the P.S.C.'s discretion to determine when normalization is necessary, and the Supreme Court will not substitute its judgment for that of the P.S.C. on appeal. The P.S.C. had sufficient evidence upon which to reach a determination. The P.S.C. did not act unreasonably, nor did it establish a rate that was so low as to be confiscatory. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Past Loss Rule Applied to Public Utilities: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) is not required to consider the past losses suffered by a municipally owned utility as part of the rate base for establishing a new rate. This is so despite respondent's contention that as a municipal utility it has no profit margin to fall back on and therefore its losses should be amortized by a future rate increase. The "no loss rule" is not restricted to private investment utilities. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Public Service Commission Not Subject to City Bond Ordinance Mandate: There is no directive either statutory or judicial that requires the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), to strictly comply with city bond ordinance mandates. Such ordinances are not binding upon the P.S.C., and the P.S.C. in no way acts as an insurer for municipal bond issuances. Therefore, the P.S.C. properly acted within its realm of discretion in determining the city's necessary bond debt service requirements and in setting rates accordingly. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Public Service Commission Jurisdiction Over Municipally Owned Utility: The ratesetting authority of a municipality under the Municipal Revenue Bond Act of 1939 does not preclude Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) jurisdiction over municipally owned utilities. Municipalities do establish rates for their services as required by 7-7-4404 and 7-7-4424 when municipalities comply with the P.S.C. reporting requirements set forth in 69-3-301 and 69-3-302. The regulatory authority of the P.S.C. does not diminish a municipality's ability to establish an initial rate schedule, and nothing in the Municipal Revenue Bond Act precludes a review of such rate determinations. The Legislature intended such a review process by the very creation of such a regulatory and supervisory body. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Rate Determination Based on Average Year Rate Base and Test-Year Calculation: Use by the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) of test-year calculation and average year rate base in reviewing and determining utilities rates is a correct and proper method of valuation. Thus, the contention by the city of Billings that the P.S.C. erred in its rate determination by refusing to accept projections of future operating and maintenance expenses cannot stand. It was acceptable that the P.S.C. used known financial data supplied by the city of Billings and then either added or subtracted known normalized changes and adjustments in arriving at a test-year calculation. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Equity Investment of Parent Corporation Properly Considered — "Double Leverage" Adjustment Upheld: When the plaintiff petitioned for an annual rate increase of $11.83 million but was granted an increase of only $3,097,000 by the defendants, based upon the defendants' application of a "double leverage" adjustment used to determine the plaintiff subsidiary's cost of capital, the District Court did not err in affirming the rate increase granted by the defendants, as the defendants' order was based upon substantial evidence and was not inconsistent with itself. The District Court found that the double leverage adjustment simply established the true cost of that portion of the plaintiff subsidiary's equity attributable to financing by its parent corporation. The holding was properly applied to all of the retained earnings of the parent corporation in the plaintiff for, given the pattern of ownership of the plaintiff by the parent corporation, those earnings are part of the equity investment by the parent corporation. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 191 M 331, 624 P2d 481, 38 St. Rep. 165 (1981).

Trade Secrets — When to Be Disclosed and to Whom — Protectable Property: A telephone utility was required to disclose trade secrets to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to aid in a decision on its rate increase request. The utility was entitled to a protective order preventing access to the secrets by the general public, but the Montana Consumer Counsel and any citizen whose interest related to the ratemaking function of the P.S.C. could have access to the information. Use or disclosure of the trade secrets except for purposes of the ratemaking proceeding was prohibited. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 277, 634 P2d 181, 38 St. Rep. 1479 (1981). Mtn. States and its progeny were overruled to the extent that those decisions relied on the constitutional balancing test of the right to individual privacy against the public's right to examine documents or observe governmental deliberations as a basis of protecting trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information of nonhuman entities in Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Temporary Rate Increase — Determination of Amount: When the Public Service Commission allowed a temporary gas rate increase equivalent to 6/11ths of the amount requested, based on the Commission's calculations that such an amount would be adequate to meet increased costs if the petitioner breached certain "take or pay" contracts, it acted in excess of its authority because the effect of the order was to force the petitioner to break its contracts, incur legal liability on that account, diminish its earnings, and deprive consumers of supply. State ex rel. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, P.S.C., 169 M 99, 548 P2d 136 (1975).

Automatic Rate Increase: The Public Service Commission authorization of automatic adjustment of electric company rates for increases or decreases in price of fuel was a fair and equitable exercise of supervisory and regulatory powers of Commission. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Scope of Rate Increase Hearings Not to Be Expanded: When an electric company applied for increase in utility rates to offset increase in price of fuel in 1974, the Public Service Commission was correct in refusing to expand the hearing into a full-scale examination of general rate structure and rate of return because the Commission had held full-scale hearings in 1972. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Judicial Review of Minimum Rates:

Order fixing utility's minimum rate so high as to repel patronage and destroy utility's investment may be judicially annulled. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 52 F2d 802 (9th Cir. 1931).

Public Service Commission order fixing minimum gas rates was held unreasonable when utility sought to lower rates for purpose of self-preservation on account of joint occupancy with rival utility of a field which could support only one. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 52 F2d 802 (9th Cir. 1931).

Commission Empowered to Fix Not Only Maximum but Also Minimum or Precise Rates: The Public Service Commission, under its power to regulate a public utility, is clothed with authority not only to fix maximum but also minimum or precise rates. Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 88 M 180, 293 P 294 (1930). See also Great N. Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 52 F2d 802 (9th Cir. 1931).

Public Utility Not to Change Schedule of Rates Without Concurrence of Commission: Under the rule that when one must secure leave from someone to entitle him to exercise a right, the irresistible implication is that a discretion is lodged in the other to refuse to grant it if in his judgment it is improper or unwise to give the required consent. The contention of a company engaged in furnishing gas to the inhabitants of a city, that after the filing of the initial schedule of rates with the Public Service Commission the company may change the schedule by the mere filing of a new one and giving the notice required and that the new schedule becomes effective without the act of concurrence on the part of the Commission, may not be sustained. *Great N. 1983 Amendment: In (1), inserted second sentence authorizing utility to waive time period if 9 months expires before Commission approves schedule; in (2), at end of first sentence inserted "unless the utility waives the 9-month time period", in second sentence after "plus interest at" changed "the rate of 10% per year" to "a per-annum rate determined by the commission", and inserted last sentence prohibiting Commission from setting interest rate of investor-owned utility in excess of the cost of last equity capital; and inserted (3) authorizing Commission to prescribe rules necessary to administer rate schedule changes.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 305 (Ch. 367, L. 1983) read: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it gives the Public Service Commission rulemaking authority. Section 1 [amending 69-3-302] provides for elimination of the statutorily prescribed 10% annual interest rate, and grants the Commission discretion to determine an annual interest rate to be assessed on a utility's revenues that are subject to rebate. In adopting rules relating to the determination of the interest rate, the Commission might, for example, consider such factors as the size of the utility involved, the number of consumers served by the utility, the utility's cost of capital, the amount of the revenues subject to rebate and the length of the time period in which revenues were overcollected. Rules drawn should reflect the manner in which the Commission would consider the factors to arrive at an appropriate rate of interest under the circumstances.

The rules may also address a procedure for waiving the nine month automatic schedule effective date, and a procedure for rebating amounts to consumers where necessary."

Judicial Review — Treatment of Gain and Cost of Equity Capital: After receiving a $7,917,936 rate increase from the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), Montana-Dakota Utilities Company (M.D.U.) requested reconsideration of the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of capital and its order that the gain on reacquired debt be amortized over the remaining life of the indebtedness, the amortized amount to reduce interest expense to M.D.U. The P.S.C. denied reconsideration. On appeal, the District Court held that the P.S.C. correctly authorized the 13.35% rate return on equity capital but that its treatment of gain constituted a confiscation without due process. After appeal by both the P.S.C. and M.D.U., the Supreme Court held that the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of equity capital was not arbitrary or capricious. However, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court, ruling that the P.S.C.'s order to amortize the gain on reacquired debt over the remaining life of the indebtedness was not confiscatory to either M.D.U. or its shareholders. *Mont.-Dak. Temporary Increase Pending Hearing — Constitutionality: A temporary increase pending a hearing is constitutional as interests of consumers are protected by allowing each increase subject to rebate if evidence shows that a public utility is obtaining more than authorized. State ex rel. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 169 M 99, 548 P2d 136 (1975).

Due Process: When the Public Service Commission gave notice of hearing on an electric company's application for increased prices to offset increases in its cost, by sending news releases to radio, television, and newspapers, and when the Consumer Counsel participated in all proceedings throughout, the public was afforded reasonable opportunity to participate prior to final decision of Commission. No person was deprived of the right to examine documents or observe deliberations, and no person was deprived of property without due process of law. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Scope of Rate Increase Hearings Not to Be Expanded: When an electric company applied for an increase in utility rates to offset an increase in the price of fuel in 1974, the Public Service Commission was correct in refusing to expand the hearing into a full-scale examination of general rate structure and rate of return because the Commission had held full-scale hearings in 1972. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

"Minihearings" Limited to Specific Proper Considerations: The Public Service Commission is not required to hold a full-scale hearing and examination of all revenue and expense accounts of a company to determine whether proposed rates and charges are just and reasonable when a company only seeks to "pass through" to its customers increases in cost of purchased gas and royalty expense, because the Commission is not required to exercise more of its powers than it determines appropriate. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 177, 541 P2d 769 (1975).

Jurisdiction: The Department of Public Service Regulation may hold hearings concerning rate increases for utilities even though no increase could be made at the time because of federal wage and price freeze. Request for Temporary Rate Reduction Properly Denied by District Court: The Public Service Commission (PSC) dismissed the petitioners' complaint and on appeal the Supreme Court sent the case back to the District Court, directing that court to remand the matter to the PSC for further consideration. The District Court stated that if the PSC, in its discretion, allowed the petitioners to amend their complaint, then the petitioners could take up their request for an immediate rate reduction with the PSC. Williamson v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2012 MT 299, 367 Mont. 379, 291 P.3d 1116.

Temporary Increase Pending Hearing — Constitutionality: A temporary increase pending a hearing is constitutional as interests of consumers are protected by allowing each increase subject to rebate if evidence shows that a public utility is obtaining more than authorized. *State ex rel. 2007 Amendment: Chapter 103 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; in (5)(a) in second sentence after "services" deleted "other than basic local exchange access" and deleted last three sentences that read: "Promotional offerings for basic local exchange access to end users and packaged services that include basic local exchange access to end users require advance approval of the commission. The commission shall approve, deny, or upon a showing of good cause set for hearing an application for a promotional discount within 30 days of the filing of the application. If the commission has not acted on the application within the permitted time period, the application is considered granted"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 30, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 349 in (5)(a), in first sentence near middle after "time", substituted "rebates, price reductions, or waivers of charges" for "either rebates or reductions or waivers of installation charges", in second sentence, near beginning after "pricing", substituted "for services other than local exchange access to end users does not" for "of services that remain fully tariffed", deleted former third sentence that read: "A promotional offering may not combine monopoly services with competitive services unless authorized by the Commission", and inserted third through sixth sentences providing a procedure for approval of promotional offerings by the Commission; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 1997.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 207 near middle of (4) inserted "unless authorized by the commission"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 29, 1993.

Chapter 535 inserted (5)(b) authorizing certain public utilities to provide grants and loans; in (5)(c), in first sentence after "trials", inserted "and grants and subsidized loans", in second sentence, after "activity", inserted "or grant or subsidized loan program", and in third sentence, after "activities", inserted "and grant and subsidized loan programs"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (4) allowing profitsharing, rebates, and promotional pricing and offerings and granting the Commission discretion in determining whether particular sales activities are unfairly discriminatory or not cost-effective; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 27, 1991.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 210, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Telecommunications Act, which recognizes and encourages competition in the telecommunications industry to the extent consistent with maintaining universal telephone service, was intended to serve as a bridge between a regulated telecommunications industry and a fully competitive market environment; and

WHEREAS, rapid technological and market changes within the telecommunications industry have prompted regulators nationwide to reexamine traditional regulation and adopt alternative regulatory systems; and

WHEREAS, although the intent of the Montana Telecommunications Act was to allow substantial flexibility to the Public Service Commission, the extent of the Commission's authority to implement alternative forms of regulation is uncertain and enactment of this legislation will clarify the Public Service Commission's authority."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 210, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because [section 8] [69-3-310] grants the public service commission general rulemaking authority and [section 6] [69-3-305] grants the commission authority to adopt rules relating to the appropriate scope of promotions, rebates, and market trials. The legislature intends that if rules are adopted by the commission, the rules should permit reasonable flexibility to providers of regulated telecommunications services in the marketing of their services."

Severability: Section 9, Ch. 210, L. 1991, was a severability clause.

1983 Amendment: In (1)(a) after "for any" inserted "utility"; inserted (3) authorizing Commission to order public utilities to pay rate, toll, or charge violation refunds, including interest; rewrote the first sentence of (4) (without changing the meaning), which read: "Any violation of the provisions of this section shall subject the violator to the penalty prescribed in 69-3-206."

Case Notes

Existing Contracts:

The last sentence in this section refers to the preceding sentence and means that until changed by the Public Service Commission the rates, tolls, and charges were to remain as fixed in existing contracts even though such contracts granted rebates, concessions, and special privileges and that, pending change by the Commission, the public utility was protected from prosecution. Overruling decision in Helena Light & Ry. v. N. Pac. Ry., 57 M 93, 186 P2d 702 (1920), insofar as it conflicts with the above holding. Billings v. P.S.C., 67 M 29, 214 P 608 (1923).

Because this section exempts from the operation of the law all "existing contracts" and does not exclude from the provisions of the exempting clause renewals or extensions of such contracts, the renewal or extension of the contract involved in this case was not unlawful. Helena Light & Ry. v. N. Pac. Ry., 57 M 93, 186 P 702 (1920), overruled on another point in Billings v. P.S.C., 67 M 29, 214 P 608 (1923).

Subsection (4) of this section refers to subsection (1), forbidding rebates, concessions, etc., and was not intended to except from the operation of the act rate contracts made between cities and public utilities prior to its passage. State ex rel. Billings v. Billings Gas Co., 55 M 102, 173 P 799 (1918).

Case Notes

Parties Not Members of Special Lighting District — Not Directly Affected by Use of Non-LED Lights — No Standing to File Complaint with Public Service Commission: Four Montana taxpayers filed a complaint with the Public Service Commission (PSC) against NorthWestern Energy over ownership overcharges and its refusal to use LED streetlights. NorthWestern filed a motion to dismiss, claiming that the taxpayers lacked standing because they were not "directly affected" pursuant to 69-3-321 since none were members of a special lighting district. The PSC dismissed the complaint and the taxpayers appealed to District Court. After the District Court affirmed the decision, the taxpayers appealed to the Supreme Court, which agreed that the taxpayers were not directly affected by NorthWestern's actions. Moreover, the Supreme Court rejected the taxpayers' theories that they had standing based on either the constitutional right to a "clean and healthy environment" or on their status as general taxpayers. Williamson v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2012 MT 32, 364 Mont. 128, 272 P.3d 71.

Public Service Commission Not Vested With Judicial Powers — Standing Under Statute Alone: In considering whether taxpayers had standing to file a complaint against NorthWestern Energy, the Supreme Court noted that the Public Service Commission is an administrative agency and is not vested with judicial powers. Therefore, its standing requirements are governed by statute and not by traditional case-or-controversy requirements. Williamson v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2012 MT 32, 364 Mont. 128, 272 P.3d 71.

"Minihearings" Limited to Specific Proper Considerations: The Public Service Commission is not required to hold a full-scale hearing and examination of all revenue and expense accounts of a company to determine whether proposed rates and charges are just and reasonable when a company only seeks to “pass through” to its customers increases in cost of purchased gas and royalty expense, because the Commission is not required to exercise more of its powers than it determines appropriate. Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C., 168 M 177, 541 P2d 769 (1975).

Case Notes

Due Process: When the Public Service Commission gave notice of hearing on an electric company's application for increased prices to offset increases in its cost, by sending news releases to radio, television, and newspapers, and when the Consumer Counsel participated in all proceedings throughout, the public was afforded reasonable opportunity to participate prior to final decision of Commission. No person was deprived of right to examine documents or observe deliberations, and no person was deprived of property without due process of law. *Mont. Consumer Counsel v. Case Notes

Repricing Amount of Expense Recoverable by Utility for Purchase of Firm Power: It was proper for the Public Service Commission to reprice, for ratemaking purposes, the amount of expense a utility could recover from its Montana ratepayers for the purchase of firm power. The Commission found that 77% of the more expensive firm power could have been generated at existing facilities, as evidenced by the utility's own records showing that subsequent to the purchase, the utility backed down production at its existing plants, decreased its use of less expensive purchased power, and increased its unregulated off-system sales to other utilities. Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 243 M 492, 795 P2d 473, 47 St. Rep. 1351 (1990).

"Rate of Return" Analysis Method of Determining Coal Expense: The Public Service Commission (PSC) adopted the "rate of return on equity" method in determining the amount of a utility's coal expense that could be passed through to Montana ratepayers by reducing coal expenses used by the utility in setting rates for electric service. Although imperfect, the method was supported by substantial credible evidence and conformed to the PSC's power to adopt any nonarbitrary method it chooses. Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 231 M 118, 752 P2d 155, 45 St. Rep. 477 (1988).

Methodology of Determination Substantiated by Record — Failure to Object in Administrative Proceeding: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) did not commit error in the application of the "rate of return" methodology, rather than the "market value" methodology, in determining the reasonableness of contract cost for the purchase of coal by the Montana Power Company (MPC) from a wholly-owned subsidiary. While the Supreme Court stated a preference for the "market value" methodology in Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Bollinger, 193 M 508, 632 P2d 1086 (1981), the court did not prohibit the P.S.C. from using a different methodology if the evidence warrants its use. In this case, the evidence introduced by the P.S.C. was not challenged by MPC. Rather, MPC seeks to do so for the first time on appeal. Limited review of the administrative record is appropriate, and that record supports the findings of the Commission. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 204 M 224, 665 P2d 1121, 40 St. Rep. 805 (1983).

Jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission Over County Water Districts: County water districts are not subject exclusively to the control and ratemaking power of their own boards of directors, and therefore the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) does have jurisdiction and authority to order the Billings Heights Water District to enter into a stipulation with the city of Billings. Nothing in 7-13-2201 through 7-13-2348 expressly precludes the review and regulatory process of the P.S.C. pursuant to Title 69. Here, the board of directors was only intended to displace the County Commissioners' authority with regard to water and sewer functions. The board of directors is empowered to establish rates; however, such rates are subject to review and alteration by the P.S.C. if unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory. "Surely the Legislature had in mind the provisions of Title 69 . . . when it enacted legislation giving rise to county water districts." Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Jurisdiction of City and Public Service Commission Overlapping: Although under the Municipal Revenue Bond Act, the petitioner (city of Billings) has the power to prescribe fees for the services, facilities, and commodities furnished by a project financed pursuant to the Act, this authority is not exclusive. The rates which the city sets are subject to modification by the Public Service Commission when such rates are unjust or unreasonable. Billings v. P.S.C., 193 M 358, 631 P2d 1295, 38 St. Rep. 1162 (1981).

Authority of Commission: The Public Service Commission may exercise its powers under this section against city serving as public utility, even though interfering thereby with city's control of its water department. Polson v. P.S.C., 155 M 464, 473 P2d 508 (1970).

Part 4

Review of Commission Actions

Part Case Notes

Scope of Review of Public Service Commission Order: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) adopted a marginal cost method rate structure in determining how the increased rates were to be allocated to residential, business, irrigation, and industrial users. That order was reviewed by the District Court, which reversed the orders of the P.S.C. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and reinstated the P.S.C. rate structure. The District Court substituted its own judgment for that of the P.S.C. While the District Court may disagree with the opinion of the experts the P.S.C. chose to follow, it is beyond the scope of review to reverse the P.S.C. on this ground. State ex rel. Dept. of Public Service Regulation v. Mont. Irrigators, Inc., 209 M 375, 680 P2d 963, 41 St. Rep. 768 (1984).

Extra Capacity Factor in Allocating Cost of Service: The Public Service Commission's (P.S.C.) decision to reject the city's proposed extra capacity factor, which was based upon a contract provision between the city and an adjoining water district in allocating cost of services to the water district, was upheld by the Supreme Court. The P.S.C. had substantial evidence before it in determining the extra capacity factor to be assigned to the district, and the decision, which was based on actual water use and comparisons from large water consumers similar in extent of demand to the water district, was not clearly erroneous. Helena v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 173, 634 P2d 192, 38 St. Rep. 1560 (1981).

Standing: When a member of the Public Service Commission dissented on a decision to increase the cost to customers of an electric company as fuel costs increased and sued to vacate and set aside Commission's rate order, he had no standing to bring suit because he was not "party in interest", which means a party outside decisionmaking process. McTaggart v. P.S.C. & Mont. Power Co., 168 M 155, 541 P2d 778 (1975).

Civil Rules: The Montana Rules of Civil Procedure were not applicable to proceeding under this part, being excepted by Rule 81. P.S.C. v. District Court, 162 M 225, 511 P2d 334 (1973).

Jurisdiction: When neither the parties nor the facts are the same in two cases to set aside orders of Public Service Commission, and no effort to consolidate the two cases was ever made, the court in one case was not deprived of jurisdiction to enter judgment on theory that the other court had first obtained jurisdiction of the appeal. Cascade County Consumers Ass'n v. P.S.C., 144 M 169, 394 P2d 856 (1964).

Burden of Proof:

In order to overcome the statutory presumption that all rates established by the Public Service Commission are prima facie lawful, the attacking party must present clear and convincing proof showing manifest error. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. P.S.C., 135 M 170, 338 P2d 1044 (1959).

When the company's proof showed only a conflict of fact between the company and the Commission on the rate base and rate of return and did not otherwise show wherein the rates were confiscatory, it failed to carry the burden of proof and an injunction was properly denied. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. P.S.C., 135 M 170, 338 P2d 1044 (1959).

Grounds for Injunction: Bare assertions that the Public Service Commission's findings are unreasonable, unlawful, and confiscatory will not, without more, be sufficient to invoke the court's jurisdiction for an injunction. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. P.S.C., 135 M 170, 338 P2d 1044 (1959).

Scope of Review — Findings Supported by Evidence: On review, if the Public Service Commission's order and findings therein are supported by evidence and credible proof, the courts will sustain it. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 131 M 272, 309 P2d 1035 (1957).

Demurrer: Section 69-3-402 requires the Public Service Commission and other parties defendant to file their answer to the complaint within 20 days but does not preclude the filing of a demurrer (demurrer abolished by former Rule 7(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and 25-31-503 (25-31-503 now repealed)). There is no reason why the Commission may not properly demur upon grounds which raise only questions of law that are preliminary to a consideration of the case on the merits. As to the contention that this results in the delay of the trial, it is sufficient to say that it is proper for the court to extend the time for answering for a reasonable time after disposition of the demurrer. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 129 M 106, 283 P2d 594 (1955).

Transmission of Evidence From Court to Commission: Under this part, in an action to enjoin the Commission from enforcing an order reducing electric power rates, when the court admits evidence of changes in the utility's property since the date of the Commission's order and time of trial, it must, before rendering judgment, furnish the Commission with the transcript of the evidence, and it is thereupon the duty of the Commission to consider such evidence. Tobacco River Power Co. v. P.S.C., 109 M 521, 98 P2d 886 (1940).

69-3-402. Action to challenge commission order.

Case Notes

Access to Public Service Records — Media Required to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Prior to Court Action — Review of Confidentiality Rules Ordered: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. The Commission denied the request on confidentiality grounds, but rather than challenging the confidentiality claims through the Commission's administrative procedures, the organizations filed an action in District Court. The court proceeded to make factual and legal determinations to determine whether the requested documents constituted constitutionally protected trade secrets or proprietary information without the benefit of the Commission developing a record or making threshold determinations on the complex issues. The Supreme Court held that it was improper to bypass the administrative agency and take the issue to District Court without exhausting the Commission's administrative procedures, so the District Court was reversed with orders to remand the case to the Commission for further consideration. However, the Supreme Court also required the Commission to review its administrative rules related to confidentiality challenges because the rules primarily addressed requests for information from competitor utilities and did not necessarily apply to media challenges. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Public Service Commission Rules Creating Impermissible Presumption of Confidentiality in Trade Secrets: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. Applying its administrative rules, the Commission evaluated the power company's claims of confidentiality against basic trade secret law, found that the company had met the initial burden of establishing trade secrets, and concluded that because the media had presented no evidence or argument to the contrary, the company information was entitled to constitutional protection as a matter of law. The Supreme Court disagreed. To the extent that the Commission's rules relied on mere company representations that the information contained trade secrets, the Commission unconstitutionally shifted the initial burden of proof to the public to challenge the confidentiality claims, creating a presumption of confidentiality that directly conflicted with the public's right to view public records and the Commission's duty to make its records available to the public. The court held that a nonhuman entity seeking protective measures for alleged confidential materials filed with a governmental regulating agency must support its claim with a supporting affidavit making a prima facie showing that the materials constitute property rights that are protected by due process. Further, the showing must be more than conclusory and specific enough for the Commission, any objecting parties, and reviewing authorities to clearly understand the nature and basis of the confidentiality claim. The agency then must review the materials at the time of filing, in accordance with 30-14-402(4)(b) and supporting case law, and make an independent determination whether the materials are in fact property rights entitled to due process protection. To the extent that Commission rules required less, the court directed revision of Commission rules to comport with this holding. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Judicial Review — Treatment of Gain and Cost of Equity Capital: After receiving a $7,917,936 rate increase from the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), Montana-Dakota Utilities Company (M.D.U.) requested reconsideration of the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of capital and its order that the gain on reacquired debt be amortized over the remaining life of the indebtedness, the amortized amount to reduce interest expense to M.D.U. The P.S.C. denied reconsideration. On appeal, the District Court held that the P.S.C. correctly authorized the 13.35% rate return on equity capital but that its treatment of gain constituted a confiscation without due process. After appeal by both the P.S.C. and M.D.U., the Supreme Court held that the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of equity capital was not arbitrary or capricious. However, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court, ruling that the P.S.C.'s order to amortize the gain on reacquired debt over the remaining life of the indebtedness was not confiscatory to either M.D.U. or its shareholders. Mont.-Dak. Util. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 223 M 191, 725 P2d 548, 43 St. Rep. 1648 (1986).

Determining Venue in Action on Public Service Commission Order: In an action on an order entered by the Public Service Commission, it is not the mere making of the order but the place where it is put into operation that determines where the cause of action arises. St. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 181 M 225, 593 P2d 34, 36 St. Rep. 646 (1979); see also Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. P.S.C., 111 M 78, 107 P2d 533 (1940).

Commission Lacking Standing to Sue: Court held that a "party in interest being dissatisfied with an order of the commission" means a party outside the decisionmaking process and does not include a Commissioner who exercised legislative and quasi-judicial powers in arriving at the decision itself. A Commissioner's personal interest in seeing his view upheld is insufficient to give him standing to sue merely because he wears a "second hat" as a natural gas consumer because chaos would result if any dissenting member of a state board or agency had standing to appeal from any board or agency decision contrary to his own view. McTaggart v. P.S.C. & Mont. Power Co., 168 M 155, 541 P2d 778 (1975).

Case Notes

Failure of Public Service Commission to Factor Avoided Costs in Setting Reasonable Rate for Utility Purchase of Qualified Facility-Generated Electricity — Augmentation of Record Proper: The District Court reviewed plaintiff's utility rate case and concluded that the rate set by the Public Service Commission (PSC) was unreasonable and ordered that the case be remanded to the PSC to set a new rate that took avoided cost data into consideration. The court also ordered that plaintiff be allowed to augment the record to include updated avoided cost data. The PSC appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The PSC based the avoided cost tariff on outdated data, in violation of its own administrative rules, resulting in a rate that was unlawful and unreasonable. Therefore, remand of the case to the PSC for rate recalculation was proper, and allowing plaintiff to augment the record to include current data was justified. Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907.

Judicial Review — Treatment of Gain and Cost of Equity Capital: After receiving a $7,917,936 rate increase from the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), Montana-Dakota Utilities Company (M.D.U.) requested reconsideration of the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of capital and its order that the gain on reacquired debt be amortized over the remaining life of the indebtedness, the amortized amount to reduce interest expense to M.D.U. The P.S.C. denied reconsideration. On appeal, the District Court held that the P.S.C. correctly authorized the 13.35% rate return on equity capital but that its treatment of gain constituted a confiscation without due process. After appeal by both the P.S.C. and M.D.U., the Supreme Court held that the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of equity capital was not arbitrary or capricious. However, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court, ruling that the P.S.C.'s order to amortize the gain on reacquired debt over the remaining life of the indebtedness was not confiscatory to either M.D.U. or its shareholders. Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 223 M 191, 725 P2d 548, 43 St. Rep. 1648 (1986).

Case Notes

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

Standing of Attorney General to Appeal Public Service Commission Order — Appeal Untimely: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied completely M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C. as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court. Further, in his official capacity, the Attorney General may not appeal a decision that is within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. The appeal of the P.S.C. was untimely, although within 7 days of the notice of appeal filed by the Attorney General. Since the latter appeal was invalid, the P.S.C. appeal would have to fall within the 60-day rule. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Case Notes

No Enforceable Obligation — Utility Not Required to Commit to Purchase Electricity Without Further Development — Substantial Evidence to Support P.S.C.'s Findings: The plaintiff, a small power production company, attempted to negotiate a contract with a public utility for the sale of electricity. After the parties were unable to reach an agreement, the plaintiff petitioned the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to set a long-term avoided cost rate for the future sale of electricity pursuant to Title 69, chapter 3, part 6. After a remand to the P.S.C. on a variety of issues in Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907, the P.S.C. concluded that the plaintiff had not incurred a legally enforceable obligation, which it defined as an absolute, unconditional commitment to deliver energy, capacity, or energy and capacity. On appeal, the District Court reversed the P.S.C. and determined that the utility's refusal to negotiate created a legally enforceable obligation, but the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and reinstated the P.S.C.'s order. In upholding the P.S.C., the Supreme Court applied the standard of review in 2-4-704 and held that there was substantial evidence in the record to support the P.S.C.'s findings, including the fact that the plaintiff had yet to conduct avian studies, obtain permits, and gain site control over the proposed project. In essence, the plaintiff sought to have P.S.C. establish a long-term avoided cost rate in order to determine the financial viability of the project before it incurred an obligation to proceed. *Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Failure of Public Service Commission to Factor Avoided Costs in Setting Reasonable Rate for Utility Purchase of Qualified Facility-Generated Electricity — Augmentation of Record Proper: The District Court reviewed plaintiff's utility rate case and concluded that the rate set by the Public Service Commission (PSC) was unreasonable and ordered that the case be remanded to the PSC to set a new rate that took avoided cost data into consideration. The court also ordered that plaintiff be allowed to augment the record to include updated avoided cost data. The PSC appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. 1993 Amendment: Chapter 157 deleted former definition of avoided costs that read: "'Avoided costs' means the incremental costs, as determined by the commission, to an electric or natural gas utility of energy or capacity, or both, which, but for the purchase of conservation, the utility would generate or supply itself or purchase from another source" and deleted former definition of residential building that read: "'Residential building' means a building used for residential occupancy that:

(a) has a system for heating, cooling, or both, that uses a fuel supplied by the utility; and
 (b) contains at least one but not more than four separately or centrally heated dwelling units or contains more than four separately heated or cooled or both heated and cooled units.”
 Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 157, L. 1993, provided: “A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 4] [69-3-1204] grants the public service commission rulemaking authority to adopt guidelines for an electric or natural gas utility to follow in compiling an integrated least-cost resource plan. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules not apply to rural electric cooperatives. It is also the intent of the legislature that the rules preserve the “used and useful” ratemaking standard. The rules are not intended to allow the commission to preapprove any resource use proposed in a plan. [Section 5] [69-3-1205] does not require coordination between the commission and the department of natural resources and conservation regarding their respective planning requirements. However, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and other state agencies share with the commission their expertise on environmental impacts of a utility’s planned resource acquisitions. [Section 6] [69-3-1206] addresses commission rate treatment. The commission may include costs resulting from an integrated least-cost resource plan in a utility’s rates.”

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 157, L. 1993, provided: “A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 4] [69-3-1204] grants the public service commission rulemaking authority to adopt guidelines for an electric or natural gas utility to follow in compiling an integrated least-cost resource plan. Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 456 (Ch. 610, L. 1983) provided: “A statement of intent is necessary for this bill because it directs the Public Service Commission to adopt rules governing the installation of cost-effective conservation measures and the reflection of those measures in a utility’s rate base. The commission must approve criteria and standards for:

- (1) allowable cost-effective conservation measures;
- (2) on-site energy audits;
- (3) conservation corresponding to end-use of energy that a utility provides;
- (4) inspections;

- (5) inclusion of conservation in a utility's rate base;
- (6) other procedures necessary to implement this act.

In adopting cost effectiveness and engineering criteria, the commission is directed to consult with the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation and with Montana's representatives to the Northwest Power Council.

It is not the intent of the legislature to allow grants from the Bonneville Power Administration for purposes of conservation to be placed in the rate base."

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 577 (Ch. 546, L. 1985) provided: "As stated in the purpose section of this act, it is the intent of the legislature to maintain universal availability of basic telecommunications service at affordable rates. At the same time, the legislature desires to make available to the general public the rapid advances in telecommunications technology brought about by competition. It is the intent of this act to provide the regulatory flexibility necessary to allow a transition to a competitive market environment in the telecommunications industry."

Under prior law there was no mechanism that would allow telecommunications utilities to respond to competitive situations. It is the intent of the legislature that the public service commission now have the authority to permit flexible pricing in those instances where it will promote healthy competition. For example, if two telecommunications utilities are effectively competing to provide long distance service to a market, the commission may allow those companies to change their rates without commission approval in response to competition. Depending upon the circumstances, the commission may detariff rates for the competitive services or allow the telecommunications utilities to operate within permissible price ranges or implement some other form of regulation that is less restrictive than total rate regulation.

The legislature intends that the commission retain the power to protect ratepayer interests by totally regulating the rates for telecommunications services that are provided on a monopoly basis. It is intended that the commission be authorized to examine each service and market to determine when market conditions rather than total rate regulation can be relied upon to assure that adequate service will be provided at reasonable rates.

It is further intended that the commission have authority to take those actions necessary to assure that revenues from regulated telecommunications services are not used to subsidize nonregulated operations.

It is intended that the commission have authority to adopt rules, if needed, to develop standards for evaluating market conditions and criteria for determining that detariffing or rate flexibility is appropriate. The commission may also implement, by rule if necessary, such reporting requirements as are required to permit a proper allocation of common or joint costs and investments."

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill is required because rulemaking authority is granted to the public service commission.

[Section 3] [69-3-833] authorizes the public service commission to adopt procedural rules relating to mediation and arbitration for interconnection proceedings.

Under the interim universal access provisions of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed], the public service commission is to establish surcharge rates as provided in [section 25] [69-3-860, now repealed]. The surcharge rates must take into account different cost structures among telecommunications carriers, particularly the wireless and CATV industry. The retail revenue for these providers should be based on an equitable, per access line, revenue equivalent. The commission shall also set the surcharge rate to produce the amount of revenue necessary to fund the program. The formulation should consider any overlapping federal discounts. The commission should appoint an oversight group, consisting of users and industry participants, to meet quarterly with the commission to review revenue, discounts, and the administration of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed]. The public service commission shall also establish a method for paying discount reimbursements in accordance with [section 25] [69-3-860, now repealed]. The public service commission shall cooperate with the department of revenue in determining rates, administering offsets against any surcharges, and other matters necessary for the administration of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed].

The department of revenue shall administer the collection of the surcharge by rule. Because of the limited duration of the program, it is contemplated that the rules and administration be minimal, flexible, and as unobtrusive as possible while ensuring that there are sufficient administrative powers to enable the implementation of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed].

Under [section 13] [69-3-843], the public service commission shall administer a contract with a third party that will manage the universal service fund for telecommunications services on a daily basis. The third party is responsible for the collection of contributions to the fund. The third party is also responsible for setting the amount of contribution based on total retail revenue of telecommunications carriers operating in Montana. The public service commission shall adopt procedural rules for the collection of the contributions. The public service commission shall also adopt rules allowing the third party to assess late fees and interest on late payments of contributions. The rules must set interest rates and penalties for late payments.

[Section 14] [69-3-844] authorizes the public service commission to adopt procedural rules relating to the collection of contributions to the universal service fund.

[Section 14] [69-3-844] authorizes the public service commission to adopt rules for the assessment of late fees and interest on contributions to the fund.

[Section 15] [69-3-845] requires the public service commission to adopt rules establishing affordability benchmarks for local service.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 430 in (1) at beginning deleted "Subject to the requirements of this section" and substituted "quarterly basis" for "monthly basis"; in (2) substituted reference to 69-3-842(2) for reference to 69-3-842(1); deleted former (3) through (7) that read: "(3) Distributions must be calculated for the designated support areas established by the commission. In the case of an area served by a rural telephone company, the term "designated support area" means the rural telephone company's Montana service area unless the rural telephone company voluntarily adopts a proxy model for the calculation of the rural telephone company's cost of telecommunications services under subsection (6). After adoption of a proxy model, the rural telephone company's designated support area must be an area designated by the commission, which may be smaller than a wire center. The term designated support area for all other telecommunications carriers means a geographic area as established by the commission, which must be smaller than a wire center.

(4) Support for the services listed in 69-3-842(1) must be calculated as the difference between the costs determined in each designated support area and the affordability benchmark in that support area. The commission shall adopt rules to determine affordability benchmarks.

(5) Except as provided in subsection (6), for rural telephone companies and other eligible telecommunications carriers offering services in a designated support area served by a rural telephone company, the average cost for each line must be calculated and submitted, based on the preceding calendar year, to the fiscal agent as follows:

(a) If an additional eligible telecommunications carrier has not been designated pursuant to 69-3-840(3), the rural telephone company's total unseparated loop cost, as defined by federal separation rule methodology in effect on December 31, 1996, must be added to the switching costs, local transport costs, and customer operations costs assigned to the telecommunications services set forth in 69-3-842(1), which must be calculated using the methodology set forth in federal communications commission jurisdictional separation rules in effect as of December 31 of each calendar year. This total cost must be reduced by any federal universal service support, interstate allocation of loop costs, and loop costs recovered through intrastate telecommunications carrier common line charges to long-distance companies.

(b) Upon the designation of an additional eligible telecommunications carrier pursuant to 69-3-840(3) in a designated support area served by a rural telephone company, the additional eligible telecommunications carrier has access to the fund on the same basis as the rural telephone company. Upon the designation of the additional eligible telecommunications carrier, both the carrier and the rural telephone company must receive distributions from the fund based upon the rural telephone company's average cost for each line disaggregated to geographic areas smaller than a wire center. The support for each line for each geographic area must be based upon the rural telephone company's costs, as determined in subsection (5)(a), distributed to each of the geographic areas on the basis of relative distribution factors established by a cost proxy model adopted by the commission.

(6) Except as provided in subsection (5)(b), for companies that are not rural telephone companies and for rural telephone companies voluntarily electing to use a cost proxy model, the average cost for each line in designated support areas must be calculated based on the cost proxy model adopted by the commission. This total per-line cost must be reduced by any federal universal service support, interstate allocation of loop costs, and loop costs recovered through intrastate telecommunications carrier common line charges to long-distance companies.

(7) In determining any proxy mechanism under this section, the commission shall use a model that:

- (a) targets support to a geographic area smaller than a wire center;
- (b) uses acceptable outside plant design and costing principles;
- (c) uses reasonable switch design and costing principles;
- (d) includes a reasonable share of the joint and common costs of the telecommunications carrier;
- (e) meets standards for documenting model logic and the sources of cost data input; and
- (f) meets reasonableness tests to ensure that model outputs are representative of costs that can be reasonably expected in the construction of a network and that the network is capable of providing telecommunications services that meet the telecommunications services quality standards of the commission and federal regulators"; and made minor changes in style. Termination Provision Repealed: Section 5, Ch. 430, L. 2001, repealed sec. 6, Ch. 187, L. 1999, which terminated this section December 31, 2001. Effective April 30, 2001.

Extension of Termination Date: Section 4, Ch. 187, L. 1999, amended sec. 41, Ch. 349, L. 1997, by extending the termination date imposed by Ch. 349 to December 31, 2001. Effective March 26, 1999.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 349, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because rulemaking authority is granted to the public service commission.

[Section 3] [69-3-833] authorizes the public service commission to adopt procedural rules relating to mediation and arbitration for interconnection proceedings.

Under the interim universal access provisions of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed], the public service commission is to establish surcharge rates as provided in [section 25] [69-3-860, now repealed]. The surcharge rates must take into account different cost structures among telecommunications carriers, particularly the wireless and CATV industry. The retail revenue for these providers should be based on an equitable, per access line, revenue equivalent. The commission shall also set the surcharge rate to produce the amount of revenue necessary to fund the program. The formulation should consider any overlapping federal discounts. The commission should appoint an oversight group, consisting of users and industry participants, to meet quarterly with the commission to review revenue, discounts, and the administration of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed]. The public service commission shall also establish a method for paying discount reimbursements in accordance with [section 25] [69-3-860, now repealed]. The public service commission shall cooperate with the department of revenue in determining rates, administering offsets against any surcharges, and other matters necessary for the administration of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed].

The department of revenue shall administer the collection of the surcharge by rule. Because of the limited duration of the program, it is contemplated that the rules and administration be minimal, flexible, and as unobtrusive as possible while ensuring that there are sufficient administrative powers to enable the implementation of [sections 20 through 26] [69-3-856 through 69-3-861, all now repealed].

Under [section 13] [69-3-843], the public service commission shall administer a contract with a third party that will manage the universal service fund for telecommunications services on a daily basis. The third party is responsible for the collection of contributions to the fund. The third party is also responsible for setting the amount of contribution based on total retail revenue of telecommunications carriers operating in Montana. The public service commission shall adopt procedural rules for the collection of the contributions. The public service commission shall also adopt rules allowing the third party to assess late fees and interest on late payments of contributions. The rules must set interest rates and penalties for late payments.

[Section 14] [69-3-844] authorizes the public service commission to adopt procedural rules relating to the collection of contributions to the universal service fund.

[Section 14] [69-3-844] authorizes the public service commission to adopt rules for the assessment of late fees and interest on contributions to the fund.

[Section 15] [69-3-845] requires the public service commission to adopt rules establishing affordability benchmarks for local service."

Part Compiler's Comments

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 157, L. 1993, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [section 4] [69-3-1204] grants the public service commission rulemaking authority to adopt guidelines for an electric or natural gas utility to follow in compiling an integrated least-cost resource plan. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules not apply to rural electric cooperatives. It is also the intent of the legislature that the rules preserve the "used and useful" ratemaking standard. The rules are not intended to allow the commission to preapprove any resource use proposed in a plan. [Section 5] [69-3-1205] does not require coordination between the commission and the department of natural resources and conservation regarding their respective planning requirements. However, it is the intent of the legislature that the department and other state agencies share with the commission their expertise on environmental impacts of a utility's planned resource acquisitions. [Section 6] [69-3-1206] addresses commission rate treatment. The commission may include costs resulting from an integrated least-cost resource plan in a utility's rates."

Amendment effective April 8, 2003.

69-3-1303. Prohibition — exceptions.Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 150 in (1)(a) after "obtained" substituted "the customer's written or electronic signature on a form" for "from the customer a document signed by the customer"; inserted (1)(d) providing that a carrier may not request a change in a customer's primary interexchange carrier or local exchange company unless the change in carrier is the result of a sale or transfer of a subscriber base from one carrier to another and the carrier that has acquired the subscriber base has notified the commission and customers affected by the change; at beginning of (2)(a) after "must" substituted "include the written or electronic signature of the customer" for "be signed by the customer"; in (3)(a) near middle after "obtained" substituted "the customer's written or electronic signature on a form" for "a document signed by the customer" (amendment rendered void by Ch. 249 amendment); in (4)(a) at beginning after "must" substituted "include the written or electronic signature of the customer" for "be signed by the customer"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 26, 2003.

Chapter 249 deleted former (3) through (6) that read: "(3) A telecommunications carrier or other entity may not initiate charges to be placed on a customer's telecommunications bill unless the service or product has been requested by and provided to the customer. A customer request must be made in the following manner:

(a) by written authorization, in which the telecommunications provider or other entity has obtained a document signed by the customer containing a clear and conspicuous disclosure of the customer's authorization or order of the product or service; or

(b) by verbal authorization, in which the telecommunications carrier or other entity has obtained the customer's verbal authorization as verified by an independent third party or by electronic means in accordance with commission rules.

(4) The documentation provided for in subsections (3)(a) and (3)(b):

(a) must be signed by the customer responsible for paying the charges on the telecommunications bill; and

(b) may not be a part of a sweepstakes, contest, or similar promotional program.

(5) A customer is not liable for any charges submitted for billing on the local exchange company's telephone bill by another carrier or entity for products or services that the customer did not authorize or that were not provided to the customer.

(6) The provisions of subsections (3), (4), and (5) do not apply to a transaction between a customer and that customer's selected providers of local exchange or interexchange service." Amendment effective April 8, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 244 in (1) substituted "may not request a change in a customer's primary interexchange carrier" for "may not honor a request by any person other than a customer to change the customer's primary interexchange carriers"; inserted (3) prohibiting initiation of charges on bill without customer request; inserted (4) requiring documentation to be signed by customer and not be part of promotional program; inserted (5) providing customer is not liable for unauthorized or unprovided products or services; and inserted (6) exempting from subsections (3), (4), and (5) transactions between customer and customer's selected providers. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

2013 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 259 in definition of eligible renewable resource inserted (i)(ii) through (i)(iv) regarding multiple-fuel process and moved language regarding compressed air from former (j) to (i)(v); inserted definition of renewable energy fraction; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 2013.

Chapter 328 in definition of eligible renewable resource in (g) at end after “residues” substituted language concerning chemical preservatives for “except that the term does not include wood pieces that have been treated with chemical preservatives such as creosote, pentachlorophenol, or copper-chroma-arsenic”. Amendment effective April 28, 2013.

Chapter 361 in definition of eligible renewable resource after “2005” substituted “or a hydroelectric project expansion referred to in subsection (10)(d)(iii), any of which” for “and that” and inserted (d)(iii) concerning expansion of existing hydroelectric project; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 56 in definition of local owners in (a) at end deleted “or entities composed of Montana residents”, deleted former (b) that read: “(b) Montana small businesses”, inserted (b) concerning general partnerships, and inserted (c) concerning business entities organized under the laws of Montana; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2011.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 56, L. 2011, provided: “[This act] applies to proceedings begun on or after [the effective date of this act].” Effective March 25, 2011.

2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 30 in definition of community renewable energy project near end increased total calculated nameplate capacity from 5 megawatts to 25 megawatts. Amendment effective March 20, 2009.

Chapter 118 in definition of competitive electricity supplier inserted (b) excluding certain governmental entities; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 1, 2009.

Chapter 232 inserted definitions of balancing authority, dispatch ability, electric generating resource, nonspinning reserve, seasonality, and spinning reserve; in definition of ancillary services near end after “protection” inserted “spinning reserves and nonspinning reserves”; in definition of community renewable energy project inserted (b) pertaining to a renewable energy source owned by a public utility; in definition of eligible renewable resource inserted (d)(ii) including in definition certain reservoirs and irrigation systems, and inserted (j) including compressed air forced into an underground storage reservoir; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2009.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 118, L. 2009, provided: “[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to competitive electricity suppliers during the compliance year beginning January 1, 2009, for the renewable energy standard pursuant to 69-3-2004.”

Section 6, Ch. 232, L. 2009, provided: “[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the compliance year beginning January 1, 2009.”

69-3-2004. Renewable resource standard — administrative penalty — waiver.Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 73 in (1), (3)(a), and (4)(a) after reference to public utilities inserted exception clause (amendment in (1) incorporated into amendment by Ch. 197); in (4)(c) before “retail sales” inserted “proportion of the total” and after “electrical energy” inserted “by public utilities”; and inserted (13) exempting a public utility with 50 or fewer retail customers. Amendment effective March 18, 2013.

Chapter 197 in (1) substituted “subsections (11) through (14)” for “subsections (11) and (12)”; in (3)(a) and (4)(a) after “supplier” inserted exception clause; inserted (14) providing an exemption for competitive electricity suppliers with four or fewer customers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 12, 2013.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

Saving Clause: Section 2, Ch. 73, L. 2013, was a saving clause.

Section 2, Ch. 197, L. 2013, was a saving clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 73, L. 2013, provided: “[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the compliance year beginning January 1, 2013.”

Section 4, Ch. 197, L. 2013, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the compliance year beginning January 1, 2013."

2011 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (10) at end substituted "69-8-412(1)(b)" for "69-8-412(1)(a)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 31 in (3)(b) at beginning inserted "Beginning January 1, 2012"; in (3)(c) at end substituted "2011" for "2009"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 246 throughout section after reference to utility inserted reference to competitive electricity supplier; in (1) and (10) at beginning in exception clause inserted reference to subsection (12); inserted (12) concerning retail sales by competitive electricity supplier; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 25, 2007.

Chapter 491 in (7)(c) near middle substituted "69-8-210(2)" for "69-8-210(4)". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 491, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 25 substituted (1)(a) concerning reporting entities for former language that read: "(1)(a) Except as provided in 69-3-2010, a utility as defined in 69-5-102 operating in Montana, a competitive electricity supplier as defined in 69-3-2003, and any owner of an electrical generation facility operating in Montana that buys or sells renewable energy credits shall annually file a renewable energy credit report in accordance with this section"; in (2)(a) after "sold" deleted "by the facility or utility"; in (4) substituted "A public utility, a competitive electricity supplier, a cooperative utility, or an owner of a renewable electrical generation facility" for "A utility or owner of an electrical generation facility"; in (5) near beginning substituted "renewable electrical generation facility" for "electrical generation facility" and at end inserted "that is located in Montana and uses any of the sources of energy listed in 69-3-2003(10)"; in (6)(b) at beginning substituted "public utility" for "utility", after "supplier" inserted "a cooperative utility", and before "electrical" inserted "renewable"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 18, 2013.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 25, L. 2013, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to renewable energy credits bought or sold on or after January 1, 2012."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 115, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, a growing number of states have adopted renewable portfolio standards requiring electricity retailers to acquire a minimum percentage of their power from renewable energy resources, and renewable energy credits are used to meet those acquisition targets; and

WHEREAS, the environmental attributes of a renewable power source reside in an unbundled renewable energy credit and associated electrons are considered generic electricity in power markets and priced accordingly; and

WHEREAS, there are no central clearinghouses and no futures market for renewable energy credits, and contracts for large volumes of renewable energy credits often contain confidentiality clauses that prohibit price disclosure for the term of the contract; and

WHEREAS, unbundled renewable energy credits sent to certain markets could depress the value of the associated electrons that remain in the region, and regional utilities could face higher costs for integrating renewable power constructed to meet certain states' increased demand for renewable energy credits; and 69-4-101. Use of public right-of-way for utility lines and facilities.

Case Notes

Forest Land — Power Transmission Not Within Scope of Highway Right-of-Way — State Law Not Applicable: A subdivision that installed a powerline under a road on national forest property without U.S. Forest Service approval could not rely on a county permit that authorized the installation. The scope of a grant of federal land is a question of federal law, and in some instances it may be determined as a matter of federal law that the United States has impliedly adopted and assented to a state rule of construction as to its conveyances. However, by the time of the 1901 road grant Congress had adopted a federal rule that power transmission is not within the scope of an R.S. 2477, 43 U.S.C. 932, highway right-of-way and had excluded any implied borrowing of state law on this point. U.S. v. Gates of the Mountains Lakeshore Homes, Inc., 732 F2d 1411 (9th Cir. 1984). See also Richter v. Rose, 1998 MT 165, 289 Mont. 379, 962 P.2d 583, regarding the method of acceptance of an easement pursuant to R.S. 2477.

Public Utility Lines Through Reservation: A public utility has a right to maintain its buried telephone cable in the right-of-way of a highway across an Indian reservation land not because of the power of the state but because of the congressional adoption of state law as the measure of the federal grant to build roads across reservation lands and to delineate the usage of such roads. U.S. v. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co., 434 F. Supp. 625, 34 St. Rep. 832 (D.C. Mont. 1977).

Electric Lines: An electric cooperative could not enjoin a competing power company from extending powerlines to residents previously served by the cooperative on the basis that it acquired certain rights to serve customers after having set out on an expensive program of erection and operation of distribution lines to the customers in question. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 150 M 519, 437 P2d 5 (1968) (decided before enactment of the Territorial Integrity Act of 1971).

Operation and Effect:

This section is not subject to construction that it forbids electric powerlines unless they are necessary. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 150 M 519, 437 P2d 5 (1968).

A telephone company is not a trespasser on a highway, nor is it negligent per se in maintaining a guy wire on a portion of it not intended for travel. This section gives such company the right to construct its lines along the highways provided the traveling public is not endangered or inconvenienced thereby. Howard v. Flathead Independent Tel. Co., 49 M 197, 141 P 153 (1914).

Title 38, chapter 5, subchapter 21, ARM Service standards — electric utilities.

Case Notes

Exclusion of Expert Testimony — Insufficient Factual Grounds and Testimony Directed to Question of Law: Plaintiffs contended that they attempted to introduce evidence of the applicability of the National Electrical Code (NEC) and the National Electrical Safety Code (NESC) through testimony of an expert and that it was error for the trial court to deny a jury instruction regarding the NEC and NESC. However, the instruction was properly denied because there were insufficient factual grounds to establish the relevancy of the NEC and NESC and because the expert's testimony was directed to a question of law. Harwood v. Glacier Elec. Co-op, Inc., 285 M 481, 949 P2d 651, 54 St. Rep. 1257 (1997).

Duty of Care Not Established by Statutory Compliance: Bare compliance with a statute, such as this section, does not necessarily establish due care. If the circumstances are such that a danger exists beyond the minimum that this section was designed to meet, the jury may be informed that a defendant is negligent for not doing more. Martel v. Mont. Power Co., 231 M 96, 752 P2d 140, 45 St. Rep. 460 (1988).

Violation of Maintenance and Design Standards — Negligence Per Se: Violations of maintenance and design standards intended to protect the public are negligence per se. Martel v. Mont. Power Co., 231 M 96, 752 P2d 140, 45 St. Rep. 460 (1988).

Jury Instruction — Breadth of Statutory Incorporation by Reference: Section 69-4-201 specifically incorporates only the construction standards of the National Electrical Safety Code rather than the code in its entirety. In the absence of specific statutory incorporation, the provisions of the National Electrical Safety Code can only furnish evidence of a standard of care to be considered in determining negligence. Therefore, the District Court's refusal to instruct the jury that violation of any provision of the National Electrical Safety Code constitutes negligence per se was proper. Barmeyer v. Mont. Power Co., 202 M 185, 657 P2d 594, 40 St. Rep. 23 (1983), overruled in Martel v. Mont. Power Co., 231 M 96, 752 P2d 140, 45 St. Rep. 460 (1988).

Part 4Relocation of Overhead Utility Lines*Part Case Notes

Use of Water — Public Use — Eminent Domain: Title 69, ch. 4, part 4, allows a landowner to cause a utility to relocate an overhead utility line for the purpose of installing an improved irrigation system. The use of water in the irrigation of farmland is a public use for which the right of eminent domain will lie. McTaggart v. Mont. Power Co., 184 M 329, 602 P2d 992, 36 St. Rep. 2079 (1979).

69-4-404. Costs of relocation.Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 141 after "paid" deleted "50% by the utility and 50%" and deleted former second sentence that read: "However, if the person petitioning for the order fails for any reason to install the agricultural improvement within 2 years following the date relocation is completed, he must reimburse the owner of the line the full cost of relocation, and the court has continuing jurisdiction over the parties for the purpose of ordering such reimbursement"; and made minor changes in style.

Case Notes

Unconstitutional: Section 69-4-404 is unconstitutional (see 1993 amendment) because it is a taking without just compensation. The relocation of the powerline comes at the insistence of the landowner, and it is he who must bear the full cost of relocation. McTaggart v. Mont. Power Co., 184 M 329, 602 P2d 992, 36 St. Rep. 2079 (1979).

Part 5
Excavations Near Underground Facilities

Right of Third Party to Use Water and Sewer Lines Under Condominium Property — Indicia of Ownership Determinative: Big Sky Camper Village, Inc., filed a declaration that submitted Tract I-A to the Unit Ownership Act and allowed Big Sky Camper Village, Inc., to expand the number of condominium units in its development within 10 years. Hidden Village, Inc. (HVI), the successor in interest of Big Sky Camper Village, sought to construct improvements on property adjacent to the Big Sky Hidden Village Condominium and to use the existing water and sewer lines for the new improvements. The owners' association, Big Sky Hidden Village Owners Association, brought an action to prevent development without its permission, claiming that the water and sewer lines sought to be used by HVI were the common property of the Association for the exclusive use of the Association and could not be used without permission of the Association. However, the Supreme Court found that the water and sewer lines were constructed and maintained by third parties, a water delivery company and a water and sewer district, and that the Association asserted ownership but provided no evidence of indicia of ownership. For these reasons, the Supreme Court held that the Association could not interfere with or control the hookup and servicing of HVI on the water and sewer lines used by the members of the Association. Big Sky Hidden Village Owners Ass'n, Inc. v. Hidden Village, Inc., 276 M 268, 915 P2d 845, 53 St. Rep. 379 (1996).

Denial of Recovery for Previous Expenditures by Utilities Not Denial of Just Compensation: The Mountain Water Company (MWC) sought an increase in utility rates to cover previous expenditures that it had been compelled to provide for its customers under 69-4-511 (now repealed), seeking recovery through a 2-year amortization. The Public Service Commission (PSC) authorized recovery through rates of annual and prospective expenses, but denied recovery of previous expenditures. On appeal, the District Court held that PSC's refusal to allow recovery of back expenses failed to justly compensate MWC for the taking of its property under 69-4-511 (now repealed). The rule set out in Galveston Elec. Co. v. Galveston, 258 US 388, 66 L Ed 678, 42 S Ct 351 (1922), is that a utility may not set its rates so as to amortize past deficits, and the rule applies to a private as well as to a municipal utility. MWC was aware of the passage of 69-4-511 (now repealed) and could have applied for coverage of the utility costs prospectively, but failed to do so. The District Court erred in concluding that MWC was not justly compensated by PSC's denial of retroactive recovery. Mtn. Water Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 254 M 76, 835 P2d 4, 49 St. Rep. 632 (1992).

Equal Protection Not Violated by Exclusion of Publicly Owned Water Service Providers: Section 69-4-511 (now repealed) does not violate the federal equal protection clause by applying to privately owned and not publicly owned water service providers. The statute's distinction is rationally related to legitimate government purposes. Heightened scrutiny, under the theory that a statute not implicating a suspect class violates equal protection if it serves no legitimate government purpose or if impermissible animus toward an unpopular group prompted the statute's enactment, is not necessary. There is a legitimate government purpose, and the record does not support the claim that the Senator sponsoring the bill, the Legislature, or both had an impermissible animus toward privately owned providers, even though the Senator had had difficulties over whether he or the privately owned provider of water to his home should pay for certain repairs to his waterline. In addition, privately owned water service providers are neither members of a suspect class nor a politically unpopular group. Mtn. Water Co. v. Mont. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 919 F2d 593 (1990).

No Taking of Private Property for Public Use Without Just Compensation: Although the provision in 69-4-511 (now repealed) that a privately owned water service provider must reimburse a customer for certain costs of maintaining that part of the customer's waterline (which the customer owns) that is between the customer's property boundary and the main waterline effects a taking of the provider's property (that is, its funds), the taking does not violate the federal fifth amendment because it is for a public use and with just compensation. Because the Legislature could have rationally conceived it would enhance service line maintenance, 69-4-511 (now repealed) effects a taking for a public use, even if 69-4-511 (now repealed) proves ineffective in achieving that purpose. Moreover, 69-4-511 (now repealed) may serve the additional public purpose of redistributing the cost of service line maintenance among all of the utility's customers from which the utility can recoup the costs. Because the utility can recoup its costs through a general rate increase, it is justly compensated for the taking. Mtn. Water Co. v. Mont. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 919 F2d 593 (1990).

69-4-501. Definitions.Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 544 inserted definitions of incident and incident history; in definition of underground facility inserted (b) excluding certain underground water systems; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 7 in definition of underground facility near end of first sentence substituted "electrical energy" for "electric energy". Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 179 in definition of business day, after "Sunday", substituted "New Year's Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day" for "or a legal local, state, or federal holiday"; substituted definition of emergency excavation for definition of emergency that read: "'Emergency' means:

(a) any condition that constitutes a clear and present danger to life or property; or

(b) a customer outage"; inserted definitions of emergency locate, excavator, and locate; in definition of locatable underground facility, before "field-marked", inserted "field-located and"; in definition of one-call notification center, before "marking", inserted "locating and"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Inserted definitions of business day, emergency, identified but unlocatable underground facility, locatable underground facility, mark, one-call notification center, and reasonably accurate; substituted definition of excavation for former definition that read: "'Excavation' shall mean and include any ditch, trench, cut, hole, or change in grade"; in definition of person, after "partnership", inserted "firm", after "corporation" inserted "association, municipality, governmental unit, department, or agency", and after "includes" substituted "any trustee, receiver, assignee, or a personal representative thereof" for "the employer of an individual"; in definition of underground facility, near beginning, substituted "facility" for "item of personal property" and after "communications" inserted "cablevision, fiber optics"; and made minor changes in style.

69-4-502. Information to be sought before excavation — notification — exceptions.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 179 in (1)(a), near beginning after "subsection (1)(b)", substituted "an excavator" for "a person", after "excavation" deleted "in a public street, alley, right-of-way dedicated to the public use, or utility easement", after "corporation" inserted "underground facility owner", and at end substituted "that is a member of a one-call notification center pursuant to subsection (2)(a)" for "within the public street, alley, right-of-way, or utility easement"; in (1)(b)(iv), after "regarding", substituted "facility" for "utility"; in (1)(b)(v), after "corporation", inserted "underground facility owner" and after "facilities" deleted "within the public street, alley, right-of-way, or utility easement"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) Every public utility, municipal corporation, or other person having the right to bury underground facilities shall file with the county clerk and recorder in each county where the underground facilities are located, the name, address, and telephone number of the person or persons from whom the necessary information may be obtained unless a one-call notification center is available"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 393 at beginning of (1)(a) inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(b) authorizing a registered land surveyor or supervised person to hand dig for shallow survey monuments 12 inches or less below road surface of highway or at public street intersection and providing for liability for damages during survey; and made minor changes in style.

69-4-503. Notification — locating and marking.Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 179 in (1), at beginning, deleted "At least 2 but not more than 10 business days", at end deleted "of the scheduled commencement of the excavation", and deleted second sentence that read: "If a one-call notification center service is not available, notice must be provided individually to the owners of underground facilities within the area of the proposed excavation"; inserted (2) and (3) regarding facility owner obligations upon being notified of a proposed excavation; in (4), in first sentence after "surface", inserted "locating and", in third sentence, at end before "marked", inserted "located and", inserted fourth sentence regarding excavator responsibility for damages, and in fifth sentence, after "facilities are", inserted "located and"; in (5), in first sentence after "days by", inserted "locating and" and after "facility" inserted

"or by notifying the excavator that locating and marking is unnecessary" and in second sentence, after "before the" inserted "locating and" and after "notified that" inserted "locating and"; in (6) substituted first sentence regarding location and marking by an excavator upon request for former sentence that read: "A facility owner may request the excavator to mark the area to be excavated" and in second sentence, after "discovers an", substituted "underground facility that has not been located and marked" for "unmarked underground facility"; inserted (7) regarding liability of a facility owner for accuracy of a locate; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Substituted (1) regarding notification for former (1) that read: "(1) Any person seeking information concerning the location of any underground facility must do so by request in person, in writing, or by telephone"; and substituted (2) through (4) relating to marking and notification for former (2) that read: "(2) The person from whom such information is sought must record the nature and the date of the request and advise the person seeking the information of the location of any underground facility in writing, if so requested, or by marking the location with stakes or paint or by other clearly identifiable markings. The person providing the information must respond no later than the end of the normal business hours of the second full business day following the date of receipt of the request, Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays excluded".

1983 Amendment: In (1), substituted "request in person, in writing, or by telephone" for "request in writing"; and in (2), substituted the language after "information is sought must" and before "no later than the end of the normal business hours" for "acknowledge in writing receipt of such request and must provide such information in writing".

69-4-504. Information to be part of architects' and engineers' plans.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 179 in (1), at end of second sentence, substituted "make available all records showing the locations of underground facilities and shall provide locates, if requested, pursuant to 69-4-503" for "provide substantially the same information as required by 69-4-503"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (1) inserted second sentence requiring provision of information by owners of underground facilities; and made minor change in style.

1983 Amendment: In (1), substituted "engineers designing projects requiring excavation" for "engineers designing or requiring excavating" and after "shall obtain information", substituted "from the owners of" for "as to".

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 544 in (1)(a) in first sentence near beginning and middle, in (3), and in (4) in two places substituted references to excavator for references to person; in (1)(a) inserted last two sentences and (1)(a)(i) through (1)(a)(iii) regarding liability to underground facility owner and damage fees; inserted (1)(b) and (1)(c) regarding levy for damages; inserted (2) regarding payment of costs and fees; in (3) at end inserted "and are not liable for damage fees assessed under subsection (1)"; and made minor changes in style. Part 6 Movement of Structures

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 442, L. 1983, provided: "WHEREAS, Title 69, chapter 4, part 6, MCA, provides for a procedure for moving houses and other structures under and through existing electrical powerlines, telegraph cables, and guy wires, requiring notice to the owner of the lines, cables, or wires; and

WHEREAS, section 69-4-603, MCA, provides that the necessary and reasonable expenses of cutting or raising the lines, cables, or wires are generally to be borne by their owners; and

WHEREAS, the total payment for such services is an unreasonable and unfair burden to place on utilities and utility ratepayers, who cannot participate in decisions to move structures that require interference with lines, cables, and wires; and

WHEREAS, it is in the best interests of all electric, telephone, or cable television ratepayers in Montana that the necessary and reasonable expenses associated with movement of structures requiring wires, cables, or poles to be moved or raised pursuant to sections 69-4-601 through 69-4-604, MCA, be shared equally by the person, firm, or corporation owning the structure and the person, firm, or corporation owning or operating the wires, cables, or poles required to be moved; and

WHEREAS, a public purpose will be served by requiring that the person, firm, or corporation owning a structure under these statutes pay 50% of the necessary and reasonable expenses of raising or cutting wires and cables or moving poles to accomplish such move."

Part Administrative Rules

Title 38, chapter 5, subchapter 24, ARM Utility charges for raising or cutting wires or moving poles to accommodate relocation of structures.

69-4-602. Notice of move — cost estimate.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 359 in (1) near middle substituted "owning or controlling the wires, cables, or poles affected by the movement of a structure, at both the person's, firm's, or corporation's principal office" for "owning or operating the wires or poles, at their principal office"; in (2) in two places inserted references to "cables", near beginning substituted "total cost of all work related to cutting" for "cost of cutting", and near middle inserted "including travel time"; inserted (3) and (4) relating to total cost and development of a cost schedule; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2003.

1983 Amendment: Substituted language concerning notice procedure required for moving structure for former text, which read: "The person, firm, or corporation moving any house, building, derrick, or other structure shall give to the person, firm, or corporation owning or operating such wire or poles, at their nearest office and also at their principal office within the state, not less than 3 days' written notice of the time and place, when and where the removal of said poles or the cutting, raising, moving, or otherwise interfering with said poles or wires will be necessary."

Case Notes

Moving or Raising Utility Wires — Police Power, Not Eminent Domain: Under 69-4-603, a utility was required (prior to the 1983 amendment requiring a sharing of the costs) to move or raise utility wires so that oversized objects could be moved through public streets. The statute was determined to be an exercise of police power rather than sounding in eminent domain. Therefore, due process requirements of the 14th amendment may be met without compensation. Four factors were cited in the determination that the statute exercises police power: (1) public safety is concerned; (2) a public benefit is conferred; (3) a reasonable and necessary public use is allowed; and (4) the public's right to use the highways is recognized under the statute. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op v. Ostermiller, 187 M 8, 608 P2d 491, 37 St. Rep. 536 (1980).

69-4-603. Procedure to accomplish move — payment of cost.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 359 in (1) near beginning after "area in which" substituted "wires, cables, or poles" for "utility poles or wires" and in two places inserted references to cables; deleted former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) The necessary and reasonable expense of raising or cutting the wires or of moving the poles for utilities subject to the jurisdiction of the public service commission must be fixed and determined by the public service commission on the average cost per line or pole for time and materials expended. These costs and expenses must be reviewed biennially. Except as provided in subsections (4) and (5), the necessary and reasonable expense of raising or cutting the wires or of moving the poles must be shared equally by the person, firm, or corporation owning the structure and the person, firm, or corporation owning or operating the wires, cables, or poles required to be moved.

(3) The rates and charges of rural cooperative electric utilities, rural cooperative telephone utilities, and other persons who occupy and use utility or cooperative poles may not exceed the charges established by the public service commission for utilities subject to its jurisdiction. The charges assessed by utilities, other than utilities subject to the jurisdiction of the public service commission, must be apportioned as provided in subsection (2)"; in (2)(a) near beginning substituted "the necessary and actual costs" for "to facilitate the movement of a house, building, derrick, or other structure, the necessary and reasonable costs" and at end substituted "movement of a house, building, derrick, other structure, or prefabricated structure that is intended to be moved from the place of fabrication, storage facility, or dealer's lot, determined in accordance with the schedule filed under 69-4-602, must be paid by the mover" for "movement must be paid by the owner of:

(i) a prefabricated structure that is intended to be moved from the place of fabrication; or

(ii) the sixth and each subsequent structure that exceeds 25 feet in height while being moved and that is to be moved from a single site. When structures are moved in a group or in a continuous caravan formation and when only a single line cut or movement is necessary, the move must count as only a single-structure move for purposes of this subsection (4)(a)(ii). For the purposes of this subsection (4)(a)(ii), a single site includes but is not limited to a development complex, housing complex, military base, or institutional complex. The whole of an incorporated municipality is not a single site as the term is used in this subsection"; in (2)(b) near beginning substituted "actual" for "reasonable" and at end substituted "determined in accordance with the schedule filed under 69-4-602, must be shared equally by the mover and the owner of the wires, cables, or poles if the structure is owned by a person for occupancy or use by that person" for "by a person for occupancy by that person must be shared equally as provided in subsection (2)"; at beginning of (3) substituted "A mover may not raise, cut, or in any way interfere with wires, cables, or poles" for "A person, firm, or corporation who owns or moves a house, building, derrick, or other structure may not raise, cut, or in any way interfere with any poles or wires" and in two places inserted references to cables; deleted former (5)(b) and (5)(c) that read: "(b) When the person who owns or controls the poles or wires refuses to raise or cut the wires or move the poles, the person, firm, or corporation who owns or moves the house, building, derrick, or other structure shall ensure that only competent and experienced workers raise or cut the wires or move the poles.

(c) The following procedure must be followed:

(i) The necessary and reasonable expense incurred by the owner or mover of the house, building, derrick, or other structure as a result of raising or cutting the wires or moving the poles must be paid by the owners of the poles or wires handled.

(ii) The work of raising or cutting the wires or moving the poles must be done in a careful manner.

(iii) The poles and wires must be promptly replaced and any damage to the poles or wires must be promptly repaired"; inserted (4) through (7) relating to prepayment and time for payment; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 551 in (1), at beginning, substituted "In order to accomplish moving a house, building, derrick, or other structure through an area in which utility poles or wires impede the movement, it is" for "It shall then be" and substituted "and who has received the" for "after service of"; in (2), in second sentence after "and expenses", deleted "must be determined at a hearing to be held within 180 days of October 1, 1983, and"; in (3) inserted "other than utilities subject to the jurisdiction of the public service commission"; in (4)(a) substituted "Except as provided in subsection (4)(b), to facilitate the movement of a house, building, derrick, or other structure" for "Owners of prefabricated structures built with the intention of moving shall pay" and after "movement" inserted "must be paid by the owner of"; inserted (4)(a)(i) and (4)(a)(ii) specifying owners of certain structures liable for moving costs; inserted (4)(b) regarding moving costs of a residential structure; in (5)(a) substituted "person, firm, or corporation who owns or controls" for "persons or authorities owning or having control of"; in (5)(b) inserted "When the person who owns or controls the poles or wires refuses to raise or cut the wires or move the poles, the person, firm, or corporation who owns or moves the house, building, derrick, or other structure shall ensure that" and after "experienced" substituted "workers raise or cut the wires or move the poles" for "workmen or linemen shall be employed in such work, and in such case"; inserted (5)(c) containing introductory clause regarding procedure; in (5)(c)(i) inserted "incurred by the owner or mover of the house, building, derrick, or other structure as a result of raising or cutting the wires or moving the poles" and after "owners of the poles" substituted "or" for "and"; in (5)(c)(ii) substituted "of raising or cutting the wires or moving the poles must" for "shall"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: Near end of (1), after "facilitate" substituted "moving" for "removing"; inserted (2) through (4) relating to payment of necessary and reasonable expenses of raising or cutting wires or of moving or removing utility or cooperative poles; near beginning of (5) after "corporation" inserted "owning or"; near end of (5) after "wires handled" deleted "provided, however, that any person, firm, or corporation engaged in moving such structure within the limits of any city or town shall pay all necessary and reasonable expense of raising or cutting such wires or removing such poles".

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 442, L. 1983, provided: "A statement of intent is required for SB 84 because in subsection (2) of section 2 it amends 69-4-603 to give the Public Service Commission the authority to determine the average cost of raising or cutting wires or cables or of moving poles. It is the intention of the legislature that the Public Service Commission hold a hearing within 180 days after the effective date of SB 84 to discover the reasonable and necessary costs of those operations, after which the commission shall establish by rule the average costs, which shall remain in effect until modified by the commission after a subsequent biennial review."

Case Notes

Right to Serve New Consumer — "Line Nearest the Premises" — Nearest Line Having Capacity to Serve Without Upgrades: Each of two utilities asserted it had the right to provide three-phase Wye power to a new seed washing plant. The plaintiff had a distribution line that could service the plant without modification and was located 1.3 miles from the plant. The defendant had a utility line that could provide the required type of power and was located over 6 miles away; however, it had a distribution line located only 300 feet from the plant that, if modified with substantial upgrades, could provide the power needed to run the plant. The District Court concluded that under the Montana Territorial Integrity Act, the plaintiff had priority because it had the line closest to the plant that could provide power to it without upgrades to the line. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, agreeing that even though the defendant had provided some power to the plant during its construction, its actions did not entitle the defendant to priority under the Act. Sheridan Electric v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 2014 MT 332, 377 Mont. 296, 340 P.3d 529.

Priority to Serve New Industrial Customer: The closest supplier as determined under this section is entitled to statutory priority to serve a new industrial customer provided it meets the provisions of 69-5-106. 69-5-106. Electric service facilities to large customers.Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 231 at beginning of first sentence substituted "A regulated utility electric facilities provider" for "An electric utility", after "facilities to" substituted "the premises of a large customer if the regulated utility electric facilities provider" for "any premises if the estimated connected load for full operation at the premises will be 400 kilowatts or larger within 2 years from the date of initial service and if the electric utility", near middle after "extend its" inserted "electric service", after "premises" inserted "of a large customer", and at end after

"cost" substituted "than other electric facilities providers" for "to the electric utility than the electric cooperative cost", in second sentence after "determined by" inserted "mutual" and at end before "customer" inserted "large", and deleted former third sentence that read: "The fact that the actual connected load after 2 years from the date of initial service is less than 400 kilowatts does not affect the right of the electric facilities provider initially providing electric service facilities to continue to provide electric service facilities to the premises"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) An independent consultant engineer agreeable to both electric facilities providers or, in the event of failure of the electric facilities providers to agree on a consultant engineer, an independent consultant engineer selected by the district court having jurisdiction, as provided in 69-5-110, shall determine which electric facilities provider can extend its facilities at the least cost to the utility. The cost of those engineering services must be paid equally by the electric facilities providers involved"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 2007.

Applicability: Section 10, Ch. 231, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] does not apply to any pending litigation filed under the Territorial Integrity Act on or before [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 23, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 505 in (1), in two places, and in (2), in four places, substituted reference to electric facilities providers for reference to electric supplier; in (1), in first sentence near beginning after "furnish electric service", inserted "facilities", after "to any" deleted "industrial or commercial", after "connected load for full" deleted "plant", after "utility can extend its" substituted "facilities" for "lines", and near end, after "electric utility", deleted "or the industrial or commercial customer" and in third sentence substituted "providing electric service facilities to continue to provide electric service facilities" for "providing service to continue service"; in (2), near end of first sentence, substituted "facilities" for "lines to the consumer" and after "at the least cost" inserted "to the utility"; deleted (3) that read: "(3) No premises other than another such commercial or industrial premises shall be served from a line constructed under this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

"Premises" to Be Property Line — Not First Building on Property: ZooMontana is a nonprofit corporation formed to build and operate a zoo west of Billings. ZooMontana requested that Montana Power Company (MPC) supply power for the first building (an education building) built on the property. The District Court found and the Supreme Court affirmed that the premises for this purpose is the property line of the property and not the education building and that because the cost of extension is greater to MPC than to the Yellowstone Valley Electric Cooperative, Inc., the Cooperative is entitled to provide the electric power. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 251 M 91, 822 P2d 102, 48 St. Rep. 1068 (1991).

Priority to Serve New Industrial Customer: The closest supplier as determined under 69-5-105 is entitled to statutory priority to serve a new industrial customer provided it meets the provisions of this section. (See 1997 amendment to 69-5-105.) Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Lower Yellowstone Elec., 178 M 427, 585 P2d 626 (1978).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 505 substituted current text concerning electrical service facilities for customer's own use for "Nothing in 69-5-103 through 69-5-106 shall restrict the right of an electric supplier to furnish electric service to any property owned by the electric supplier." Amendment effective May 2, 1997.

Saving Clause: Section 47, Ch. 505, L. 1997, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 48, Ch. 505, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Meaning of "Any Property": It was reversible error for the District Court to limit the meaning of the term "any property", as used in this section, to commercial or industrial property, for the term's meaning is not ambiguous and is plain and certain. By 1-1-205, the word "property" means real and personal property wherever used in this Code. Therefore, the power company and not the electric cooperative had the right to provide electrical services to a housing subdivision being developed by the power company. (See 1997 amendment.) Tongue River Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 195 M 511, 636 P2d 862, 38 St. Rep. 2032 (1981).

Electric Lines: An electric cooperative could not enjoin a competing power company from extending powerlines to residents previously served by the cooperative on the basis that it acquired certain rights to serve customers after having set out on an expensive program of erection and operation of distribution lines to the customers in question. Yellowstone Valley Elec. Co-op, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 150 M 519, 437 P2d 5 (1968) (decided before enactment of Territorial Integrity Act of 1971).

(1) Every electric supplier has the right to serve all premises being served by it on the date of annexation.

(2) An electric cooperative does not have the right to serve any premises initially requiring service on or after the date of annexation. The restriction stated in this subsection does not apply to incorporated municipalities in which 95% or more of the premises were served by an electric cooperative on February 1, 1971." CHAPTER 7 MUNICIPAL UTILITIES

Chapter Case Notes

No Prohibition Against Utility Regulation by Municipality: Appellants argued that the restriction in 7-1-111(5), which prohibits a local government unit from establishing a rate or price otherwise determined by a state agency, preempted the city of Billings from assessing new utility fees in the form of system development fees for funding the expansion of water and sewer facilities. However, under this chapter, municipal utility rates are not determined by a state agency; rather, unless the rates result in an increase in total revenue of 12% in any 1 year, the exclusive authority to regulate, establish, and change municipal utility rates rests with the city. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in 7-1-113. 48 A.G. Annual revenues must be computed on any consecutive 12-month period for purposes of this chapter”; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: Inserted last sentence requiring annual revenues to be computed on any consecutive 12-month period; and made section permanent.

Case Notes

Grant of Preliminary Injunction — Prima Facie Showing of Violation of Constitutional and Contract Rights: A 1963 contract between the city of Billings and the Billings Heights County Water District fixed water rate charges and limited any subsequent rate increase charged the district unless the same percentage increase was applied to all city water users. Needing to raise additional revenue, in 1993, the city raised average water rates by 9.2% and the district rates by 32%. The district relied on the contract and increased its payments by 9.2%. In 1994, the city initiated an action to recover from the district the difference between the 1993 rate and the rate that the district paid from that time. In 1996, the city raised rates again, resulting in a 123% increase to the district and no such dramatic increase to any other city water customer. The district applied for a preliminary injunction to prevent the city from imposing the 1996 rate until the 1994 action had been addressed, but the application was denied and the district appealed. The Supreme Court found that the district made: (1) a sufficient showing that application of this section, granting the city control over utility rates, substantially impaired the district’s rights under the 1963 contract; and (2) a prima facie case that application of this section violated its rights under contract clauses of the U.S. and Montana Constitutions. Without ruling on the merits of the case, the court held that the district was thus entitled to the temporary injunction. Billings v. County Water District of Billings Heights, 281 M 219, 935 P2d 246, 54 St. Rep. 144 (1997).

Funding of Public Service Commission and Consumer Counsel — Definition of “Regulated Companies” — Payment of Fees by Municipal Utility: The operations of the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) and the Montana Consumer Counsel (MCC) are not funded through the general fund as are most state government agencies but instead are funded by fees imposed on regulated companies, based on a percentage of the gross operating revenue of the company. Regulated companies are defined as all organizations, corporations, associations, or other public or private entities that are or may become subject to regulation by the P.S.C. or its successor agency. Under 69-7-102 (now repealed) and this section, the utilities are allowed to raise rates as long as they are not raised to yield more than a 12% increase in total annual revenue. If a rate increase exceeds 12%, the utility must apply to the P.S.C. for the increase. (See 1995 amendment to this section.) The utility’s argument that both P.S.C. and MCC fees are user fees and that regulated companies do not have to pay the fees unless they use P.S.C. or MCC services during a given year would make it possible for a municipal utility to control and avoid imposition of fees except under extraordinary circumstances, which is outside the context of legislative intent. Thus, as a regulated company, the municipal utility of the city of Billings is subject to regulation by the P.S.C. Billings v. Dept. of Revenue, 270 M 307, 891 P2d 1149, 52 St. Rep. 196 (1995).

Case Notes

City Resolution Allowing Implied Consent to Annexation Upon Continued Use of Utility Services Affirmed: The city of Whitefish adopted a municipal resolution requiring that property owners consent to annexation in order to continue to receive city utility services and allowing the city to imply consent to annexation from property owners that continued to receive the services after they received notice requiring them to disconnect from the utilities. Property owners contended that the resolution was invalid, but the District Court held the resolution valid, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Attorney General held in 46 A.G. Op. 12 (1995), that a municipality may establish a rule requiring consent to annexation as a condition for continued receipt of services, and that opinion is in accord with this section. Further, the utility rule in this case put the burden on the property owner to arrange to disconnect from services if protesting annexation, so once proper notice was given, under 7-2-4710 and 28-2-503 the city's procedure to imply consent was a proper method to determine if a property owner wished to continue to receive city services or to protest annexation. Gregg v. Whitefish City Council, 2004 MT 262, 323 M 109, 99 P3d 151 (2004).

Setting of Municipal Utility Rates Not Subjected to State Control: The setting of rates and charges for municipal utilities has not been affirmatively subjected to state control within the meaning of 7-1-113. The enforcement of standards or requirements and the power to establish administrative rules in the area of municipal ratemaking are not vested in any state agency or officer. Rather, this section requires the municipal utility, with the concurrence of the municipal governing body, to adopt rules for operating the utility. Lechner v. Billings, 244 M 195, 797 P2d 191, 47 St. Rep. 1512 (1990).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of City-County Government to Acquire and Operate Electric and Natural Gas Utilities: A consolidated government with self-government powers, such as the city and county of Butte-Silver Bow, has the authority to acquire and operate electric and natural gas utilities both within and outside the boundaries of the local government unit. The Attorney General determined that Butte-Silver Bow was specifically authorized to do so after considering the local government's charter, constitutional ramifications, and whether the exercise of that authority was prohibited by local government law or other statutes applicable to self-government units and was consistent with state provisions in areas affirmatively subjected to state control, as described in 7-1-113. 48 A.G. Municipality Authorized to Assess Charge for Providing Water Service to Fire Hydrants Owned by Rural Improvement District: When a rural improvement district requests that a municipal water utility provide water service to fire hydrants owned by the district, the municipality is authorized to provide that service and to assess a charge for it. 45 A.G. Op. 4 (1993).

No Lien for Nonpayment of Water Bill: A city or town may not file a lien against a landowner's property due to a tenant's failure to pay for water service contracted for and used by the tenant. Discontinuance of service is the only statutory remedy provided for nonpayment of water charges. When a power is conferred upon a municipality and the mode in which it is to exercise that power is prescribed, such mode must be pursued. 40 A.G. Op. 7 (1983).

Chapter Case Notes

Access to Public Service Records — Media Required to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Prior to Court Action — Review of Confidentiality Rules Ordered: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. The Commission denied the request on confidentiality grounds, but rather than challenging the confidentiality claims through the Commission's administrative procedures, the organizations filed an action in District Court. The court proceeded to make factual and legal determinations to determine whether the requested documents constituted constitutionally protected trade secrets or proprietary information without the benefit of the Commission developing a record or making threshold determinations on the complex issues. The Supreme Court held that it was improper to bypass the administrative agency and take the issue to District Court without exhausting the Commission's administrative procedures, so the District Court was reversed with orders to remand the case to the Commission for further consideration. However, the Supreme Court also required the Commission to review its administrative rules related to confidentiality challenges because the rules primarily addressed requests for information from competitor utilities and did not necessarily apply to media challenges. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

No Constitutional Right to Privacy for Nonhuman Entities — Protection of Trade Secrets Under Other Constitutional and Statutory Schemes: Montana's constitutional individual privacy exception to the public's right to know is limited to natural human individuals only and does not apply to nonhuman entities such as corporations. However, nothing in Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., requires disclosure of trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information when that data is protected from disclosure elsewhere in the state or federal constitution or by statute. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003), overruling Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 277, 634 P2d 181 (1981), and its progeny to the extent that those decisions relied on the constitutional balancing test of the right to individual privacy against the public's right to examine documents or observe governmental deliberations as a basis of protecting trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information of nonhuman entities.

Public Service Commission Rules Creating Impermissible Presumption of Confidentiality in Trade Secrets: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. Applying its administrative rules, the Commission evaluated the power company's claims of confidentiality against basic trade secret law, found that the company had met the initial burden of establishing trade secrets, and concluded that because the media had presented no evidence or argument to the contrary, the company information was entitled to constitutional protection as a matter of law. The Supreme Court disagreed. To the extent that the Commission's rules relied on mere company representations that the information contained trade secrets, the Commission unconstitutionally shifted the initial burden of proof to the public to challenge the confidentiality claims, creating a presumption of confidentiality that directly conflicted with the public's right to view public records and the Commission's duty to make its records available to the public. The court held that a nonhuman entity seeking protective measures for alleged confidential materials filed with a governmental regulating agency must support its claim with a supporting affidavit making a prima facie showing that the materials constitute property rights that are protected by due process. Further, the showing must be more than conclusory and specific enough for the Commission, any objecting parties, and reviewing authorities to clearly understand the nature and basis of the confidentiality claim. The agency then must review the materials at the time of filing, in accordance with 30-14-402(4)(b) and supporting case law, and make an independent determination whether the materials are in fact property rights entitled to due process protection. To the extent that Commission rules required less, the court directed revision of Commission rules to comport with this holding. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Erroneous Determination That Public Service Commission Interpretation of Electric Utility Deregulation Act Unconstitutional Taking — Issue Not Ripe for Adjudication Given Speculation Regarding Utility's Future Loss: As part of the deregulation process, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC). Foreseeing imminent uncertainty in the costs of electricity, MPC proposed that a current estimation of some transition costs be deferred, or tracked, for as long as 25 to 30 years, so that a more accurate figure of those costs could be determined in the future. Thus, with regard to certain assets, MPC in essence offered no estimation of any transition costs, proposing instead that those costs be determined and recovered at a later time. The PSC determined that a tracking system that would adjust transition costs in the future as the costs occurred, rather than reaching a current estimated fixed sum, was not consistent with Title 69, ch. 8, and that in order for the MPC plan to be approved, transition costs must be reduced to a fixed net amount. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover, and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. MPC sought judicial review, arguing that the PSC improperly precluded the use of trackers in its plan, and requested that the District Court reverse the PSC's decision and permanently enjoin the PSC from enforcing its interpretation. The court reasoned that the PSC's interpretation had great potential for unconstitutionally depriving MPC or Montana consumers of property, and ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The PSC appealed. The Supreme Court found that MPC's claim to an unconstitutional taking at the hands of the PSC's ruling on the proposed tracking mechanism was as hypothetical and speculative as the future of electricity costs in Montana. The PSC action had yet to deprive MPC of any property, and the court refused to interpret the law and enjoin state action to preserve a property interest that did not, and might not ever, exist. The very likely potential of an unconstitutional taking was distinguishable from the imminent and very real violations of constitutional rights and remedies at risk in past cases in which the Supreme Court has held that a taking occurred, such as Yurkovich v. Indus. Accident Bd., 132 M 77, 314 P2d 866 (1957), and its progeny, holding that the District Court erred in finding that the PSC's interpretation produced a taking that prejudiced MPC's substantial rights. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District

Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

2001 Amendment Rejected: The amendments made by Ch. 577, L. 2001 (House Bill No. 474), were removed from this section because House Bill No. 474 was rejected by the electorate in a referendum held November 5, 2002.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 7 in two places in definition of aggregator, in two places in definition of broker or marketer, and in introductory clause in definition of net metering system substituted "electrical energy" for "electric energy"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Chapter 584 in definition of transition period substituted "period ending July 1, 2007" for "period beginning on July 1, 1998, and ending on July 1, 2002, unless otherwise extended pursuant to this chapter, during which utilities may phase in customer choice of electricity supplier"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2001.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 323 inserted definitions of customer-generator, net metering, and net metering system; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

Chapter 575 inserted definitions of default supplier and small customer; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 1999.

Chapter 580 in definition of distribution services provider substituted "utility owning" for "person controlling or operating"; inserted definitions of interested person, large customer, and qualifying load; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 575, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, residential and small commercial customers of investor-owned distribution utilities in Montana need access to reliable electricity supply at equitable prices; and

WHEREAS, the aggregation of residential and small commercial customers that do not have access to competitive electricity suppliers at equitable prices provides them with market power to secure electricity at the least cost; and

WHEREAS, allowing one or more default suppliers to aggregate residential and small commercial customers to purchase electricity maximizes economies of scale, increases administrative efficiency, and provides maximum benefits to all small electricity customers; and

WHEREAS, wholesale competition in electricity markets may be facilitated by allowing entities to compete for the opportunity to provide electricity supply to those residential and small commercial customers on an aggregated basis; and

WHEREAS, the formation of nonprofit electricity buying cooperatives enhances the chances of securing for small customers the greatest amount of electricity at the least cost from the federal power system; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana desires that its residents have access to the benefits of competitive retail electricity markets and federal Power Marketing Administration electricity; and

WHEREAS, federal Power Marketing Administration power or benefits should be distributed as widely and equitably as possible among small customers of open-access public utilities in the state of Montana in a manner that promotes efficient development and operation of the competitive retail electricity markets; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana benefits by enacting legislation this session that maximizes the chances of an electricity buying cooperative being able to purchase power for small customers from the Bonneville Power Administration at preferential rates for the subscription period that begins in 2001."

Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 323, L. 1999, provided that this section does not apply to corporations organized under Title 35, chapter 18.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 575, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

Public Utilities69-8-201. Public utility—customer electricity supply service options and requirements—exemption.*Compiler's Comments 2007 Amendment: Chapter 491 deleted former (1), (2), and (3) that read: "(1) Before July 1, 2027, all public utility customers of a public utility that has restructured in accordance with this chapter must have the opportunity to choose an electricity supplier other than the default supplier.

(2) (a) A small customer of a public utility that has restructured in accordance with this chapter:

(i) must receive default supply services from the default supplier as provided in this chapter; and

(ii) may purchase electricity supply services through a commission-approved small customer electricity supply program as provided in this section.

(b) A small customer receiving electricity from a licensed supplier prior to July 1, 2003, may continue to receive electricity supply from a supplier other than the default supplier.

(c) Customers that represent separately metered services with an estimated average monthly demand of less than 50 kilowatts related to the same individual customer referred to in subsection (3) or (4) may be combined with the respective eligible customer load or loads.

(3) (a) Subject to subsection (3)(b), a customer of a public utility that has restructured in accordance with this chapter and that has an individual load with an average monthly demand of less than 5,000 kilowatts but greater than or equal to 50 kilowatts may choose an electricity supplier.

(b) The total average monthly billing demand for all customers that choose an electricity supplier pursuant to subsection (3)(a) in each calendar year may not exceed 20,000 kilowatts.

(c) A customer referred to in subsection (3)(a) receiving electricity from a licensed supplier prior to July 1, 2003, may continue to receive electricity supply from a supplier other than the default supplier"; in (1)(a) near beginning after "subsections" substituted "(1)(b) and (1)(c), a retail customer" for "(4)(b) through (4)(e), a customer of a utility that has restructured in accordance with this chapter and" and at end after "5,000 kilowatts" substituted "and that is not purchasing electricity supply service from a public utility on October 1, 2007, may not purchase electricity supply service from a public utility" for "shall purchase its entire electricity supply from the competitive marketplace"; deleted former (4)(b) that read: "(b) A customer referred to in subsection (4)(a) that is receiving its electricity supply from the competitive marketplace may make a one-time election to enter into a permanent power supply contract with the default supplier for service on or after July 1, 2004. These contracts must include the applicable provisions established by the commission pursuant to subsection (5). This election must be submitted to the commission in writing no later than December 31, 2003"; in (1)(b) substituted text allowing new retail customer to request and requiring public utility to provide electricity supply service for former text that read: "A new customer with an estimated average monthly demand of greater than or equal to 5,000 kilowatts may enter into a power supply contract with the default supplier in order to receive default supply service. The new customer's election of an electricity supplier must be submitted in writing to the commission at least 90 days before delivery of electricity. These contracts must include the applicable provisions established by the commission pursuant to subsection (5)"; deleted former (4)(d) that read: "(d) A customer referred to in subsection (4)(a) that was receiving electricity from the default supplier on July 1, 2003, may continue to receive electricity from the default supplier"; inserted (1)(c) concerning regulation of electricity supply service by commission; deleted former (4)(e) that read: "(e) A customer referred to in subsection (4)(a) that is a public agency, as defined in 18-1-101, may enter into a power supply contract with the default supplier for default supply service for all or part of the public agency's load. These contracts must include the applicable provisions established by the commission pursuant to subsection (5)"; deleted former (5), (6), (7), and (8) that read: "(5) The commission shall adopt rules and establish rates and fees to enable customers to have reasonable opportunities to choose an electricity supplier or to receive default supply service in accordance with subsections (2) through (4), while providing protection for small customers from higher or more unstable default supply service rates than would otherwise result if these choices were not offered.

(6) An electricity supplier licensed by the commission to offer electricity supply service to small customers may petition the commission for the opportunity to provide electricity to small customers. The total average monthly demand for all customers referred to in subsection (2)(a) in each calendar year that receive service from an electricity supplier that is not the default supplier may not exceed 10,000 kilowatts. The commission shall ensure that electricity supply service provided pursuant to this subsection is consistent with the requirements in subsection (5) and the provision of default supply service pursuant to this chapter.

(7) Based on an analysis of the sources of costs of providing default supply service, the commission may:

(a) establish different categories of default supply service customers to assist with the implementation of this section;

(b) allocate default supply costs; and

(c) develop default supply rates.

(8) (a) Except as provided in subsection (8)(b), a customer receiving default supply service may not resell the electricity.

(b) A default supplier may implement demand reduction programs that reward customers for reducing demand under terms established by the commission"; inserted (2) concerning retail customers purchasing or not purchasing electricity from public utility on October 1, 2007; inserted (3) regarding customer's rights and obligations; in (4)(a) inserted reference to subsection (4)(b) and at end after "Columbia River" substituted exemption from requirements of chapter for "may defer compliance with this chapter until a time that the public utility can reasonably implement customer choice in the state of the public utility's primary service territory"; in (4)(b) near middle inserted "before October 1, 2007" and substituted "it is subject to the requirements of this chapter with respect to the service area of" for "it shall assume responsibility only for the applicable transition plan of"; deleted former (10) that read: "(10) Upon a request from a public utility with fewer than 50 customers, the commission shall waive compliance with the requirements of 69-8-104, 69-8-202 through 69-8-204, 69-8-208 through 69-8-211, 69-8-402, and this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 565 substituted (1) through (8) regarding a public utility's transition to provide customer choice, including options, requirements, and waivers, for former (1) and (2) that read: "(1) A public utility shall, except as provided in this section, adhere to the following deadlines:

(a) All customers with individual loads greater than 1,000 kilowatts and for loads of the same customer with individual loads at a meter greater than 300 kilowatts that aggregate to 1,000 kilowatts or greater must have the opportunity to choose an electricity supplier.

(b) Before July 1, 2007, all other public utility customers must have the opportunity to choose an electricity supplier.

(2) The commission shall designate the public utility or one or more default suppliers to provide regulated default service for those small customers of a public utility that are not being served by a competitive electricity supplier"; inserted (9)(b) concerning responsibility of successor in interest; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment Rejected: The amendments made by Ch. 577, L. 2001 (House Bill No. 474), were removed from this section because House Bill No. 474 was rejected by the electorate in a referendum held November 5, 2002.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 175 at beginning of (1)(a) deleted "On or before July 1, 1998"; at end of (4) deleted "except that the public utility shall file a transition plan pursuant to 69-8-202 to provide transition to customer choice on or before July 1, 2002, and must have completed the transition period to customer choice by July 1, 2006"; deleted former (4)(b) that read: "(b) petition the commission to delay the public utility's transition plan filing until July 1, 2004"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 30, 2001.

Chapter 584 in (1)(a) at beginning deleted "On or before July 1, 1998"; in (1)(b) at beginning substituted "Before July 1, 2007" for "Subject to subsection (2), and as soon as is administratively feasible but before July 1, 2002"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) (a) Except as provided for in subsection (4), the commission may determine that additional time is necessary for customers identified in subsection (1)(b); however, the implementation of full customer choice may not be delayed beyond July 1, 2004.

(b) A determination by the commission that additional time is necessary for subsection (1)(b) customers must be made at least 60 days in advance of the scheduled date and must be based on one or more of the following considerations:

(i) implementation would not be administratively feasible;

(ii) implementation would materially affect the reliability of the electric system; or

(iii) Montana customers or electricity suppliers would be disadvantaged due to lack of a competitive electricity supply market"; in (2) deleted former second sentence that read: "The transition advisory committee shall review and address the need for continued default supply service and make recommendation to the 57th legislature"; in (4) after "territory" deleted exception clause that read: "except that the public utility shall file a transition plan pursuant to 69-8-202 to provide transition to customer choice on or before July 1, 2002, and must have completed the transition period to customer choice by July 1, 2006"; deleted former (4)(b) that read: "(b) petition the commission to delay the public utility's transition plan filing until July 1, 2004"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 575 inserted (3) requiring designation of a public utility to provide regulated default service and requiring the transition advisory committee to review the need for continued default supply service and make legislative recommendations; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 575, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, residential and small commercial customers of investor-owned distribution utilities in Montana need access to reliable electricity supply at equitable prices; and

WHEREAS, the aggregation of residential and small commercial customers that do not have access to competitive electricity suppliers at equitable prices provides them with market power to secure electricity at the least cost; and

WHEREAS, allowing one or more default suppliers to aggregate residential and small commercial customers to purchase electricity maximizes economies of scale, increases administrative efficiency, and provides maximum benefits to all small electricity customers; and

WHEREAS, federal Power Marketing Administration power or benefits should be distributed as widely and equitably as possible among small customers of open-access public utilities in the state of Montana in a manner that promotes efficient development and operation of the competitive retail electricity markets; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana benefits by enacting legislation this session that maximizes the chances of an electricity buying cooperative being able to purchase power for small customers from the Bonneville Power Administration at preferential rates for the subscription period that begins in 2001."

Severability: Section 34, Ch. 575, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 575, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

Interpretation of Term "Customer": The term "customer", as used in this section, means an entity or person, rather than an individual meter. Great Falls v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2011 MT 144, 361 Mont. 69, 254 P.3d 595.

Erroneous Determination That Public Service Commission Interpretation of Electric Utility Deregulation Act Unconstitutional Taking — Issue Not Ripe for Adjudication Given Speculation Regarding Utility's Future Loss: As part of the deregulation process, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC). Foreseeing imminent uncertainty in the costs of electricity, MPC proposed that a current estimation of some transition costs be deferred, or tracked, for as long as 25 to 30 years, so that a more accurate figure of those costs could be determined in the future. Thus, with regard to certain assets, MPC in essence offered no estimation of any transition costs, proposing instead that those costs be determined and recovered at a later time. The PSC determined that a tracking system that would adjust transition costs in the future as the costs occurred, rather than reaching a current estimated fixed sum, was not consistent with Title 69, ch. 8, and that in order for the MPC plan to be approved, transition costs must be reduced to a fixed net amount. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover, and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. MPC sought judicial review, arguing that the PSC improperly precluded the use of trackers in its plan, and requested that the District Court reverse the PSC's decision and permanently enjoin the PSC from enforcing its interpretation. The court reasoned that the PSC's interpretation had great potential for unconstitutionally depriving MPC or Montana consumers of property, and ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The PSC appealed. The Supreme Court found that MPC's claim to an unconstitutional taking at the hands of the PSC's ruling on the proposed tracking mechanism was as hypothetical and speculative as the future of electricity costs in Montana. The PSC action had yet to deprive MPC of any property, and the court refused to interpret the law and enjoin state action to preserve a property interest that did not, and might not ever, exist. The very likely potential of an unconstitutional taking was distinguishable from the imminent and very real violations of constitutional rights and remedies at risk in past cases in which the Supreme Court has held that a taking occurred, such as Yurkovich v. Indus. Accident Bd., 132 M 77, 314 P2d 866 (1957), and its progeny, holding that the District Court erred in finding that the PSC's interpretation produced a taking that prejudiced MPC's substantial rights. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 491 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) A public utility's distribution services provider shall provide default supply service"; in (1) in first sentence near middle substituted "public utility" for "default supplier" and at end inserted "and commission rules" and inserted second sentence concerning inclusion of other utility costs; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) The commission may direct a default supplier to offer its customers multiple default supply service options if the commission determines that those options are in the public interest and are consistent with the provisions of 69-8-104 and 69-8-201"; in (2) in first sentence after "may require" substituted "a public utility" for "pursuant to subsection (3), a default supplier"; deleted former (5) and (6) that read: "(5) (a) Subject to subsection (5)(b), the commission shall, in reviewing the procurement of electricity supply by the default supplier, take into account the statewide economic benefits that are associated with the electricity supply procurement for the default supply stakeholders. The default supply stakeholders include the default supplier, customers of the default supplier, and the public.

(b) The consideration of economic benefits is secondary to the consideration of the costs and benefits to the consumer and other criteria established by law.

(6) If a public utility intends to be an electricity supplier through an unregulated division, then the public utility must be licensed as an electricity supplier pursuant to 69-8-404"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 509 substituted language in (1) through (4) regarding commission's responsibilities and authority to provide for service or direct default supply service supplier for former (1) through (3) that read: "(1) On the effective date of a commission order implementing a public utility's transition plan pursuant to 69-8-202, the public utility shall remove its generation assets from the rate base.

(2) During the transition period, the commission may establish cost-based prices for electricity supply service for customers that do not have a choice of electricity supply service or that have not yet chosen an electricity supplier.

(3) If the transition period is extended, then the customers' distribution services provider shall:

(a) extend any cost-based contract with the distribution services provider's affiliate supplier for a term of not more than 3 years; or

(b) purchase electricity from the market; and

(c) use a mechanism that recovers electricity supply costs in rates to ensure that those costs are fully recovered"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 24, 2003.

Chapter 600 in (3) and (3)(a) substituted reference to default supplier for reference to distribution services provider (amendment rendered void by Ch. 509 amendment); inserted

(5) concerning consideration of statewide economic benefits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 9, 2003.

The amendments to this section made by Ch. 565, L. 2003, were rendered void by sec. 7, Ch. 509, L. 2003, a coordination section.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 252, L. 2015, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to universal system benefits activities beginning on or after January 1, 2015."

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 393, L. 2015, provided: “[This act] applies to annual reports filed with the department of revenue and the energy and telecommunications interim committee on or after March 1, 2016.”

2009 Amendment: Chapter 55 in (2) deleted former third sentence that read: “These universal system benefits charge rates must remain in effect through December 31, 2009”; inserted (8)(b) requiring review of the universal system benefits programs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 491 in (2)(c) and (2)(d) near beginning substituted “utility” for “distribution services provider”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 491, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 256 in (2) at end increased the time that the rates are in effect from 2005 to 2009. Amendment effective April 15, 2005.

2003 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 290 in (2) at end of third sentence extended the period that universal system benefits must remain in effect from until July 1, 2003, to through December 31, 2005. Amendment effective April 11, 2003.

Chapter 565 in (1) at end after “assistance” deleted “during the transition period and into the future”; in (2) at beginning of third sentence deleted “Except as provided in subsection (7)” and at end substituted “in effect through December 31, 2005” for “in effect until July 1, 2003”; in (8) at end of first sentence substituted “and the energy and telecommunications interim committee provided for in 5-5-230” for “and the transition advisory committee provided for in 69-8-501” and at end of second and third sentences substituted “and the energy and telecommunications interim committee” for “and the transition advisory committee”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 565, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

2001 Amendment Rejected: The amendments made by Ch. 577, L. 2001 (House Bill No. 474), were removed from this section because House Bill No. 474 was rejected by the electorate in a referendum held November 5, 2002.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 188 in (2)(b) in first sentence near middle after “including those” inserted “amortized or nonamortized”; and in (8)(a)(ii)(B) near beginning after “those” inserted “amortized or nonamortized”. Amendment effective April 3, 2001.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 188, L. 2001, provided: “[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to those amortized or nonamortized portions of a utility’s expenditures claimed in a universal system benefits programs reporting period, for the purchase of power that is for the acquisition or support of internal programs that qualify as universal system benefits programs, made either prior to or after January 1, 1999, for which payments continue beyond January 1, 1999.”

1999 Amendment: Chapter 580 throughout section before “customer’s” inserted “large”; in first sentence in (2) substituted “initial” for “annual”, inserted second sentence requiring commission and cooperative to establish respective rates on annualized basis for 1999, and at beginning of third sentence substituted “Except” for “Unless modified” and after “subsection (7)” substituted “these universal system benefits charge rates must remain” for “this funding level remains”; inserted second sentence in (2)(b) requiring that department review claimed credits of utilities and large customers; in (2)(c) substituted “utility’s distribution services provider” for “utility”; inserted (2)(d) requiring customer’s distribution services provider to collect universal system benefits funds minus allowable credits; in (2)(f) and (5)(b) after “fund” inserted “established in 69-8-412”; in (5)(b) after “universal” inserted “low-income”; in (7)(a) inserted “large” and after “customer” deleted “with loads greater than 1,000 kilowatts”; in (7)(a)(i) after “charge” inserted “with respect to the large customer’s qualifying load”; in (7)(a)(i)(B) inserted “total” and after “credits” inserted “with respect to that qualifying load”; in first sentence in (8) inserted “the department of revenue”, inserted third sentence requiring cooperative utility office to prepare and submit annual summary report, and in fourth sentence inserted “of a public utility or of the statewide cooperative utility office”; inserted (9) requiring utility or large customer filing for credit to develop and maintain documentation to support credit claim; inserted (10) regarding submission of annual summary report, requirement for report, and procedure for credit approval or disallowance; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

69-8-403. Commission rulemaking authority.Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 491 deleted former (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), and (7) that read: "(1) Beginning on the effective date of a commission order regarding a public utility's transition plan, the commission shall regulate the public utility's retail transmission, distribution, and default supply services within the state of Montana, as provided in this chapter.

(2) The commission shall license electricity suppliers and enforce licensing provisions pursuant to 69-8-404.

(3) The commission shall promulgate rules that identify the licensees and ensure that the offered electricity supply is provided as offered and is adequate in terms of quality, safety, and reliability.

(4) The commission shall establish just and reasonable rates through established ratemaking principles for public utility default supply, distribution, and transmission services and shall regulate these services. The commission may approve rates and charges for those services based on alternative forms of ratemaking such as performance-based ratemaking, on a demonstration by the public utility that the alternative method complies with this chapter, and on the public utility's transition plan.

(5) The commission shall certify that a cooperative utility has adopted a transition plan that complies with this chapter. A cooperative utility's transition plan is considered certified 60 days after the cooperative utility files for certification.

(6) The commission shall promulgate rules that protect consumers, distribution services providers, and electricity suppliers from anticompetitive and abusive practices.

(7) (a) After July 1, 2010, the commission shall continuously monitor whether or not workable competition has developed for small customers.

(b) If the commission determines that workable competition has developed for small customers after July 1, 2010, the commission shall provide a report to the legislature that includes recommendations for legislative implementation of customer choice for small customers"; deleted former (9) that read: "(9) This chapter does not give the commission the authority to:

(a) regulate cooperative utilities in any manner other than reviewing certification filings for compliance with this chapter; or

(b) compel any change to a cooperative utility's certification filing made pursuant to this chapter"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Severability: Section 23, Ch. 491, L. 2007, was a severability clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 565 in (1) after "distribution" inserted "and default supply"; and at end after "chapter" deleted "and may not regulate the price of electricity supply except as electricity supply may be procured as provided in this section:

(a) by one or more default suppliers for those customers not being served by a competitive supplier; or

(b) by the distribution function of a public utility for those customers that are not being served by a competitive electricity supplier as provided by commission rules. During the transition period, those procurements may include a cost-based contract from a supply affiliate or an unregulated division"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The commission shall decide if there is workable competition in the electricity supply market by determining whether competition is sufficient to inhibit monopoly pricing or anticompetitive price leadership. In reaching a decision, the commission may not rely solely on market share estimates"; (4) in first sentence after "utility" inserted "default supply" and in second sentence after "charges" substituted "for those services" for "for electricity distribution and transmission services"; inserted (7) requiring commission after July 1, 2010, to monitor whether workable competition has developed for small customers and to provide report to legislature for implementation of customer choice; deleted former (8) through (10) that read: "(8) The commission shall license default suppliers and enforce default licensing provisions pursuant to 69-8-416.

(9) The commission shall promulgate rules for the licensing of default suppliers on or before December 1, 1999.

(10) Until the commission has determined that workable competition has developed for small customers, a default supplier's obligation to serve remains"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment Rejected: The amendments made by Ch. 577, L. 2001 (House Bill No. 474), were removed from this section because House Bill No. 474 was rejected by the electorate in a referendum held November 5, 2002.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 575 in (1) at end of introductory clause after "procured" inserted "as provided in this section"; in (1)(a) at beginning substituted "one or more default suppliers for those customers not being served by a competitive supplier" for "during the transition period"; in (1)(b) at end of first sentence substituted "are not being served by a competitive electricity supplier as provided by commission rules" for "have not chosen an electricity supplier or for those customers that have not yet been assigned an electricity supplier"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) If the transition period is extended for certain customers because the commission finds that workable competition in the electricity supply market does not exist, then the commission shall continue to regulate the provision of electricity supply by distribution services providers in accordance with 69-8-210"; inserted (8) requiring licensure of default suppliers; inserted (9) requiring promulgation of rules; inserted (10) regarding a default supplier's obligation to serve; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 575, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, residential and small commercial customers of investor-owned distribution utilities in Montana need access to reliable electricity supply at equitable prices; and

WHEREAS, the aggregation of residential and small commercial customers that do not have access to competitive electricity suppliers at equitable prices provides them with market power to secure electricity at the least cost; and

WHEREAS, allowing one or more default suppliers to aggregate residential and small commercial customers to purchase electricity maximizes economies of scale, increases administrative efficiency, and provides maximum benefits to all small electricity customers; and

WHEREAS, wholesale competition in electricity markets may be facilitated by allowing entities to compete for the opportunity to provide electricity supply to those residential and small commercial customers on an aggregated basis; and

WHEREAS, the formation of nonprofit electricity buying cooperatives enhances the chances of securing for small customers the greatest amount of electricity at the least cost from the federal power system; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana desires that its residents have access to the benefits of competitive retail electricity markets and federal Power Marketing Administration electricity; and

WHEREAS, federal Power Marketing Administration power or benefits should be distributed as widely and equitably as possible among small customers of open-access public utilities in the state of Montana in a manner that promotes efficient development and operation of the competitive retail electricity markets; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana benefits by enacting legislation this session that maximizes the chances of an electricity buying cooperative being able to purchase power for small customers from the Bonneville Power Administration at preferential rates for the subscription period that begins in 2001."

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 575, L. 1999, was a saving clause.

1997 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 505, L. 1997, provided: "A statement of intent is required because this bill provides the public service commission with rulemaking authority."

Case Notes

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

Case Notes

Apportionment of Loss: When a special contract limits the liability of the carrier by excluding acts of God, and it is found that damage to sheep shipped resulted from a concurrence of rainy weather and the negligent care or inspection of the carrier, there must be a finding of what portion of the loss was attributable to the latter cause because liability cannot be predicated upon the rain. Great N. Ry. v. Melton, 193 F2d 729 (9th Cir. 1951).

Consideration: There need not be special consideration for the special contract. There is consideration when a company agrees for $600 to haul the freight on the terms stated, which include the special contract. Great N. Ry. v. Melton, 193 F2d 729 (9th Cir. 1951).

Degrees of Negligence: Under the law of this state a difference in degrees of negligence is recognized. Liston v. Reynolds, 69 M 480, 223 P 507 (1923).

Oral Negotiations Merged in Contract: Prior oral negotiations and directions about points at which livestock should be stopped for resting and feeding were merged in the contract of shipment when it and the waybills bore notations stating the points at which stops were to be made. Therefore, parol testimony of directions to make other stops was incompetent as an attempt to vary the terms of the written contract. Cook v. N. Pac. Ry., 61 M 573, 203 P 512 (1921).

Construction of Statute: This section gives to the carrier the right, by special contract, to provide against liability in all cases except when it arises from his gross negligence, fraud, or willful wrong. John v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 18, 111 P 632 (1910); Nelson v. Great N. Ry., 28 M 297, 72 P 642 (1903). See also Rose v. N. Pac. Ry., 35 M 70, 88 P 767 (1907).

Loss of Baggage: A contract made by a railway company with a passenger in the sale of a ticket, which among other recitals contained the provision that, in view of the reduced rate at which it was furnished, the carrier's liability for loss of baggage should be limited to $100, was not void as against public policy. Rose v. N. Pac. Ry., 35 M 70, 88 P 767 (1907).

Delay in Transportation: A common carrier cannot by special contract limit its liability for delay in the transportation of property arising from its negligence or from the negligence of its servants. Nelson v. Great N. Ry., 28 M 297, 72 P 642 (1903).

Degrees of Negligence: Under the law of this state a difference in degrees of negligence is recognized. Liston v. Reynolds, 69 M 480, 223 P 507 (1923).

Free Passenger: One riding on a railway pass is not a passenger for reward, but a free passenger. The company is a carrier without reward and is answerable to the passenger for ordinary negligence, without considering any exemption conditions of the pass. John v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 18, 111 P 632 (1910).

Passenger Carried Without Reward: A carrier owed a higher degree of diligence to one carried for a reward than to one carried without a reward and was only bound to exercise ordinary care for the safety of a passenger carried without reward. The injury of such a passenger by the happening of an accident only showed ordinary negligence by the carrier and not gross negligence. John v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 18, 111 P 632 (1910).

Case Notes

Scant Record of Conviction on Driving Charges Sufficient to Establish Negligence: Plaintiff argued that the issuance of citations and defendant's admission that she was found guilty of driving charges related to the collision established a breach of duty imposed by this section and negligence as a matter of law. The Supreme Court found insufficient evidence in the record regarding the citations, actual charges, and subsequent legal proceedings to warrant reversal of the trial court's denial of a motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on this point. Nelson v. Flathead Valley Transit, 251 M 269, 824 P2d 263, 49 St. Rep. 58 (1992).

Common Carrier's Duty of Care to Embarking Passengers: When an airline passenger was injured while boarding defendant airline company's airplane and the airline company in turn sued the defendant city that owned the airport, the airline company, as a common carrier, owed a higher duty of care to the passenger than did the city. Rogers v. W. Airlines, 184 M 170, 602 P2d 171, 36 St. Rep. 1974 (1979).

Application of Statute:

While a carrier is not an insurer of a passenger's safety, its duty toward a passenger is spelled out in this section. Risken v. N. Pac. Ry., 137 M 57, 350 P2d 831 (1960).

Although this statute imposes upon the carrier the duty to exercise "the highest degree of care", it is but declaratory of the common law and does not constitute the carrier an insurer of the passenger's safety. Wilson v. Northland Greyhound Lines, Inc., 166 F. Supp. 667 (D.C. Mont. 1958).

Degree of Negligence:

Under the law of this state a difference in degrees of negligence is recognized. Liston v. Reynolds, 69 M 480, 223 P 507 (1923).

As between the owner or manager of exhibitions and places of amusement and the carrier of a passenger for hire, the same measure of duty is not demanded. Only ordinary care, as in the gratuitous carriage of persons, under 69-11-106, is required of the former, while the utmost care is required of the latter. Phillips v. Butte Jockey Club & Fair Ass'n, 46 M 338, 127 P 1011 (1912).

Ordinary care is the measure of duty which the law imposes upon the owners and managers of exhibitions and places of amusement to prevent injury to patrons who have paid for the privileges accorded to them. Thus, the owner of the grandstand at a racecourse is not answerable for an injury to a patron, caused by the latter's tripping on a nail and falling on a broken board while he was descending the stairway, when the owner did not have notice, either actual or implied, of such defects. Phillips v. Butte Jockey Club & Fair Ass'n, 46 M 338, 127 P 1011 (1912).

Carrier Not Insurer: This section, imposing upon the carrier the duty to exercise toward a passenger for hire the highest degree of care, does not constitute the carrier an insurer of the passenger's safety. Heck v. N. Pac. Ry., 59 M 106, 196 P 521 (1921).

Declaratory of Common Law: This section is declaratory of the common law. Taillon v. Mears, 29 M 161, 74 P 421 (1903).

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Interim Study: HJR 27 and HJR 33 (1981) requested an interim study of transportation in Montana. The Legislative Council designated the Joint Subcommittee on Transportation to conduct the study.

Chapter Case Notes*Constitutionality:*

The trial court erred in granting the defendant's motion to dismiss when his complaint alleged that certain portions of this law violated the Montana and United States Constitutions, because a summary procedure should not be used in cases involving important public issues when any fact is in dispute unless the trial judge is satisfied that the evidence is sufficient to give him the necessary background of knowledge. Garrett Freightlines, Inc. v. Mont. R.R. & P.S.C., 153 M 380, 457 P2d 469 (1969).

The provisions of the motor carrier law are not invalid for failure to specify any method by which gross operating revenue of carrier in state could be determined or for failure to make distinction between large and small vehicles or heavy or light loads or number of miles traveled over state highways. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Aero Mayflower Transit Co., 119 M 118, 172 P2d 452 (1946), affirmed in Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 332 US 495, 92 L Ed 99, 68 S Ct 167 (1947).

The title of an act regulating motor carriers, stating that it provided for enforcement of the act and punishment for violation of the act, sufficiently gave notice of venue provision in the act. The state constitution requirements that a bill's subject be clearly expressed in its title and that local and special laws must not be passed on certain subjects are not violated. Great N. Ry. v. Hatch, 98 M 269, 38 P2d 976 (1934).

The motor carrier law is not violative of the 1889 Montana Constitution, nor is it rendered unconstitutional as special legislation. St. v. Healow, 98 M 177, 38 P2d 285 (1934).

The motor carrier law, regulating the use of state highways by motor carriers for hire, is a valid enactment, contrary to the contentions of a private contract carrier that by requiring him to obtain from the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commission) a certificate of public convenience and necessity, the act is invalid, denying him the right to contract and offending the Equal Protection of the Law and the Due Process of the Law Clauses of the Montana Constitution. Fulmer v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 96 M 22, 28 P2d 849 (1934); Barney v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 93 M 115, 17 P2d 82 (1932).

Application: The motor carrier law was intended to apply to all intrastate and interstate motor carriers operating over state highways. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Aero Mayflower Transit Co., 119 M 118, 172 P2d 452 (1946), affirmed in Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 332 US 495, 92 L Ed 99, 68 S Ct 167 (1947).

Evasion of Regulatory Act: When there is an attempt to evade the regulation of motor transportation and requirement of obtaining certificates of public convenience provided in this chapter through the formation of a corporation or association, courts will go behind the form of subterfuge or scheme to the substance. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Reed, 102 M 382, 58 P2d 271 (1936).

Regulations Held Reasonable: The use of the public highways is special and extraordinary and generally may be regulated by the state, and regulation by means of certificates of public convenience is reasonably devised to protect the public from abusive use of roads and evils incident to unregulated competition. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Reed, 102 M 382, 58 P2d 271 (1936).

Persons Required to Procure Certificate:

The provisions of the motor carrier law relating to the persons who must procure certificates of convenience and necessity before they may operate a motor vehicle for hire are broad enough to include the driver thereof, employed by its owner to operate it (whether such owner be an individual or corporation). Therefore, in a prosecution against an owner and driver, a contention that a penalty for a violation of the act could not be imposed upon the latter may not be sustained. St. v. Healow, 98 M 177, 38 P2d 285 (1934).

As a means of protecting its highways from abusive use and the public from the evils incident to unregulated competition, the state has the power to require both common and private motor carriers for hire to obtain from the Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) certificates of public convenience and necessity as a condition precedent to the right to conduct such business. Barney v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 93 M 115, 17 P2d 82 (1932).

Grounds for Denying Certificate: Under this chapter, making it incumbent upon the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commission) in passing on an application for a certificate to operate motor vehicles for hire to give "reasonable consideration" to existing transportation facilities, including railroads, the general rule is that the certificate should be denied unless the service furnished is inadequate or additional service would benefit the general public, or unless the existing carrier has been afforded an opportunity to furnish such additional service as may be required. Fulmer v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 96 M 22, 28 P2d 849 (1934).

Discretion of Board in Granting Certificate: The requirement of this chapter that one desiring to operate a motor vehicle for hire must secure a certificate of convenience and necessity carried with it a discretion on the part of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commission) to refuse it if in its judgment it is unwise to grant it. The contention that it has no power to deny it to one qualified and capable to furnish adequate service is without merit. Fulmer v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 96 M 22, 28 P2d 849 (1934).

Highways as Belonging to People: The state highways belong to the people for use in the ordinary way. Their use for the purpose of gain is special and extraordinary, which the state may prohibit altogether or permit on such conditions as it may consider proper to impose. Barney v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 93 M 115, 17 P2d 82 (1932).

Purpose of Statute: In the construction of the motor carrier law, the purpose of which is the supervision, regulation, and control of the state highways by motor carriers for hire, a matter of legislative discretion, all existing statutes relating to their use must be taken into consideration. Barney v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 93 M 115, 17 P2d 82 (1932).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 358 inserted definitions of garbage and household goods; in definition of motor carrier, near middle, substituted “passengers, household goods, or garbage” for “persons or property” and deleted second sentence that read: “The term includes any motor carrier serving the public in the business of transportation of ashes, trash, waste, refuse, rubbish, garbage, and organic and inorganic matter”; in definition of recyclable, near middle after “reused”, inserted “in the production of heat or energy or”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 364 deleted definition of log that read: ““Log” means a fallen or felled tree, delimbed and cut to length for transportation to a point for storage or processing.”

Chapter 481 inserted definition of log. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 341, L. 1991, provided: “A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the public service commission in adopting rules. It is the intention of the legislature that a Class D motor carrier have the authority to collect and transport source-separated recyclables and that Class C motor carriers have the authority to transport recyclables.”

Case Notes

Transportation Activities Incidental to Principal Business Not Subject to Motor Carrier Regulation: Grouse Mountain Associates, Ltd. (Grouse Mountain), provides guest transportation between its resort facility and The Big Mountain Ski Resort, the local airport, and the railway station at no cost and, for a nominal fee, to downtown Whitefish. The transportation service is not advertised or offered to the general public. A rival Whitefish business filed a complaint alleging that Grouse Mountain's guest transportation was subject to Public Service Commission motor carrier regulation. The District Court properly determined that Grouse Mountain's transportation services do not meet the definition of motor carrier because the service is accommodative only, is merely incidental to Grouse Mountain's principal business, and thus is not subject to motor carrier regulation. Grouse Mtn. Associates, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 65, 943 P2d 971, 54 St. Rep. 750 (1997).

Definition of Motor Vehicle as Resulting in an Undue Burden on Interstate Commerce: Definition of motor vehicles (prior to 1979 amendment correcting the problem) as including a trailer, semitrailer, or dolly and requirement for a $5 fee on each motor vehicle constituted an undue burden on interstate commerce when Interstate Commerce Commission regulations provided for a maximum registration fee of $5 and the Interstate Commerce Commission definition of a motor vehicle was limited to the mechanical drive unit, not to whatever was being pulled by that power unit, because federal statute and regulations promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission were controlling over contrary provisions of state law. State ex rel. Sammons Trucking, Inc. v. Bollinger, 169 M 88, 544 P2d 1235 (1976).

"Motor Carrier" for Hire: A person who transports merely himself or his own property by means of a motor vehicle is not a "motor carrier" for hire even though he may be compensated directly or indirectly, within the meaning of this chapter, so far as it requires a certificate of public convenience and necessity. One who engages in the transportation of goods for another as an independent calling, under contract and for compensation, is such a carrier. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Gamble-Robinson Co., 111 M 441, 111 P2d 306 (1941).

Meaning of "For Hire": Several city mercantile establishments entered into a contract of purchase of a truck, agreeing to pay the seller $1,000, payable $100 down and $75 per month for 12 months. The truck was to be used for transporting merchandise bought or sold, and the purchasers assumed the expense of upkeep and operation as a certain ratio as between themselves based on the weight of merchandise carried for each per mile. The seller was employed as transportation manager at $6 per day and was to receive a bonus for good service. Neither the purchasers nor the seller, their employee, were carriers for hire and therefore were not required to secure a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) to entitle them to the use of state highways in the transportation of such merchandise. Christie Storage & Transfer Co. v. Hatch, 95 M 601, 28 P2d 470 (1934), distinguished in Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Reed, 102 M 382, 58 P2d 271 (1936).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1)(l) after "group of passengers" deleted "by charter service". Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Saving Clause: Section 28, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 218 inserted (1)(l) regarding transportation of group of passengers by charter service; inserted (1)(m) regarding transportation of group of employees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 18, 2011.

Severability: Section 4, Ch. 218, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 224 in (2) deleted former second sentence that read: "However, commercial tow truck firms shall file policies of insurance showing coverage required by 61-8-906". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 223 in (1)(c) near end after "village" inserted "with a population of less than 500 persons". Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 82 inserted (1)(h)(iii) concerning public transportation systems recognized by department of transportation; in (1)(k) near beginning after "transportation of" deleted "disabled or elderly" and at end after "organizations" inserted clause concerning organizations recognized by department of transportation; deleted definition of disabled that read: ““disabled” means an individual who has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities”; deleted definition of elderly that read: ““elderly” means a person 60 years of age or older”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 283 deleted former (1)(f) that read: “(f) tow trucks and wreckers designed and exclusively used in towing abandoned, wrecked, or disabled vehicles or while these tow trucks and wreckers are rendering assistance to abandoned, wrecked, or disabled vehicles”; in (1)(k) and (1)(k)(i) substituted “disabled” for “handicapped”; inserted (2) excluding certain commercial tow trucks from the provisions of Title 69, chapter 12, and requiring proof of insurance required under 61-8-906; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 29, 1995.

Chapter 358 deleted former (1)(a) that read: “(a) motor vehicles used in carrying property consisting of agricultural commodities (not including manufactured products of agricultural commodities) if the motor vehicles are not used in carrying other property or passengers for compensation”; in (1)(b), in two places after “employees”, deleted “supplies, and materials”; in (1)(c), near beginning, substituted “household goods and garbage” for “property”; deleted former (1)(f) that read: “(f) tow trucks and wreckers designed and exclusively used in towing abandoned, wrecked, or disabled vehicles or while these tow trucks and wreckers are rendering assistance to abandoned, wrecked, or disabled vehicles”; deleted former (1)(i) that read: “(i) the transportation of pit run or processed sand and gravel, concrete mix, aggregate, plant mix asphalt pavement, aggregate mix, dirt, rock, material from demolished buildings and structures, used paving materials, used concrete, broken concrete, riprap, and other forms and types of materials transported solely for the purpose of excavation or fill”; deleted former (1)(k) that read: “(k) the transportation of property by motor carrier as part of a continuous movement if that property, prior or subsequent to part of a continuous movement, has been or will be transported by an air carrier”; in (1)(i), after “used”, deleted “exclusively” and after “transportation of” deleted “coins, currency, silver bullion, gold bullion, and other precious metals, precious stones”; in (1)(j), near beginning after “transportation of”, substituted “household goods or garbage” for “a commodity”; in (1)(k) and (1)(k)(i) substituted “disabled” for “handicapped”; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Coordination Instruction: Section 18, Ch. 283, L. 1995, provided: “If Senate Bill No. 378 [LC 981] is passed and approved and if it includes a section that repeals 69-12-102, then [section 15 of this act], amending 69-12-102, is void.” Senate Bill No. 378 amended rather than repealed 69-12-102; therefore, the amendment to 69-12-102 in sec. 15, Ch. 283, L. 1995, was effective as approved.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 322 inserted (1)(o) exempting the transportation of handicapped or elderly persons provided by private, nonprofit organizations; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 481 in (1)(a), after “commodities”, inserted “other than logs”; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective January 1, 1992.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (1)(n) providing that state law on motor carriers does not affect the transportation of a commodity under an agreement between a motor carrier and federal office or agency.

Code Commissioner Correction: In (1) the Code Commissioner has deleted “Except as provided in 69-12-201(1)(f), (1)(g), and (2)” because subsections were deleted by sec. 1, Ch. 686, L. 1985.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 27 inserted (1)(j) providing that except for safety standards, state motor carrier laws do not affect transportation by motor vehicle of not more than 15 passengers between residences or termini near residences and places of employment in single daily round trip if driver is enroute to or from place of employment.

Chapter 75 inserted (1)(k) providing that except for safety standards, state motor carrier laws do not affect transportation of property by motor carrier as part of continuous movement if property, prior or subsequent to continuous movement, has been or will be air transported.

Chapter 160 inserted (1)(l) providing that except for safety regulations, state motor carrier laws do not affect the operation of urban transportation districts or municipal bus service.

Chapter 584 inserted (1)(m) providing that except for safety regulations, state motor carrier laws do not affect the operation of armored motor vehicles used exclusively for transportation of certain precious metals, stones, paintings, and other items of unusual value requiring special handling and security.

1981 Amendment: Added "Except as provided in 69-12-201(1)(f)" at the beginning of (1).

No Authority to Revoke Compliant Certificate Based on Public Service Commission and Prior Certificate Holder Misconduct — Penalty Statutes Not Self-Executing: The Public Service Commission (PSC) authorized the purchase and transfer of a solid waste transportation certificate that had been purchased and transferred on three prior occasions with PSC approval. Plaintiffs contended that the first three owners had failed to comply with applicable rules and that the PSC failed to enforce the rules and that as a result of these violations, the certificate was invalid when it was transferred to the current owner and should be revoked. The PSC determined that the certificate was valid, the District Court affirmed, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court held that the penalty statutes applicable to revocation of a certificate are not self-executing, in that revocation of a certificate requires PSC action to implement the penalties, so a court may not revoke a compliant certificate holder's certificate based on misconduct. Thus, plaintiffs' complaint presented a nonjusticiable moot issue, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the District Court's decision. Mont. Solid Waste Contractors, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 154, 338 M 1, 161 P3d 837 (2007).

Part 2Role of Commission*69-12-201. Supervision and regulation of motor carriers.*Compiler's Comments

1993 Amendment: Chapter 364 deleted (4) allowing Commission to determine rates for Class E motor carriers operating under contract when rates are required for best interests of public transportation; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Inserted (4) allowing Commission to set rates of operations of Class E motor carriers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

1985 Amendment: In (1)(c) substituted "regulate the properties, facilities, operations, accounts, service, practices, and affairs of all motor carriers" for "regulate the properties, facilities, operations, accounts, service, practices, affairs, and safety of operations of all motor carriers, each of which is considered to consent impliedly to reasonable safety inspections of its motor vehicles utilized in furtherance of its business as a motor carrier"; and deleted former (1)(f), (1)(g), and (2) that read: "(f) provide standards for the safe operation of all motor vehicles used in commerce that exceed 26,000 pounds gross vehicle weight, except farm vehicles; and

(g) provide standards for the safe operation of vehicles of less than 26,000 pounds gross vehicle weight if they are:

(i) being used to transport passengers for hire; or

(ii) being used to transport hazardous materials of a type or quantity that requires the vehicle to be marked or placarded in accordance with rules adopted by the commission.

(2) Such standards of safety shall be the same as prescribed for motor carriers, and the same inspection standards and procedures shall apply. However, standards relating to drivers, other than drivers for motor carriers, do not apply to a vehicle operated exclusively within a 200-mile radius of its work reporting location".

Code Commissioner Changes: The Code Commissioner added "provide standards for the safe operation of" at the beginning of (1)(g) and divided the material inserted by Ch. 227 into three subsections, (1)(f), (1)(g), and (2), for clarification and renumbered former subsections (2) and (3) as (3) and (4).

1981 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to HB 749 (Ch. 227, L. 1981) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the Public Service Commission the authority to provide safety standards for motor vehicles used in commerce.

All interstate motor carriers, interstate private carriers, and carriers hauling unregulated commodities in interstate commerce must now meet equipment safety requirements and inspections as established by the Federal Motor Carrier Safety Regulations of the Department of Transportation. In addition, regulated intrastate motor carriers must also meet the same safety standards.

The Legislature intends to include large over-the-road trucks, in excess of 26,000 pounds GVW, used in commerce operating on Montana's highways to adhere to safety equipment standards. It is the intent of the Legislature to establish by regulation uniform safety standards and a safety inspection program that will focus on mechanical factors most often blamed for accidents involving trucks, passenger carriers, and hazardous material transporters. Included would be detailed inspections of brakes, steering components, tires, and driver logs where required.

It is intended that rules promulgated by PSC incorporate the "Critical Item Truck Inspection" program and that the rules include a procedure for conducting the inspection program as well as providing for a vehicle identification program acknowledging the inspection. The rules shall provide that safety infractions posing no imminent threat to public safety shall not result in an "out of service" order. Such a vehicle shall be allowed to proceed to obtain repairs before final inspection and issuance of inspection acknowledgment. It is recognized that repairing or parking large over-the-road trucks on the roadway is extremely dangerous." (Annotator's Note: Chapter 686, L. 1985, transferred authority for setting motor carrier and motor vehicle safety standards from the Public Service Commission to the Department of Justice.)

1979 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 473 (Ch. 387, L. 1979) provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it creates the necessity for the adoption of additional rules under the rulemaking authority granted by 69-12-201 to carry out the amendments to 69-12-314 and 69-12-407.

It is the intent of the legislature that the Public Service Commission has the authority to make rules defining what activities will be necessary to constitute the transportation of material allowed under a Class D motor carrier certificate "on a regular basis as part of the motor carrier's usual business operation." Thus the Public Service Commission may by rule establish the criteria by which "regular basis" is measured and may make rules describing how "part of the motor carrier's usual business operation" is to be interpreted in implementing the amendment to 69-12-314.

To implement the amendments to 69-12-407 regarding records and reports by Class D motor carriers, the Public Service Commission may amend the present rules governing the reports and records of Class A and Class B motor carriers to include Class D motor carriers. In addition, the Public Service Commission may by rule determine what will be "sufficient information" to show that a motor carrier is entitled to a Class D certificate and how the information is to be provided by the Class D motor certificate holder."

Case Notes

Standard of Review of Public Service Commission Conclusion of Law: The standard of review applicable to a Public Service Commission's conclusion of law is whether the Public Service Commission correctly interpreted the law in reaching the conclusion. Grouse Mtn. Associates, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 65, 943 P2d 971, 54 St. Rep. 750 (1997).

Waiver of Condition of Public Service Commission Approval of Certificate Transfer: Rite-Line Transportation Services, Inc. (Rite-Line), owned Certificate No. 1136 that authorized it to operate certain routes in Montana. Molerway Freight Lines, Inc. (Molerway), sought to obtain the certificate and entered into a buy-sell agreement expressly conditioned on Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) approval of the transfer. After tendering a $30,000 downpayment, Molerway made two monthly installment payments. The P.S.C. approved the lease of the certificate but indicated that portions of the certificate that were duplicative of other routes already covered in Molerway's other certificates would be canceled. Both parties feared that the cancellation of duplicate authorities would jeopardize the buy-sell agreement. Both Rite-Line and Molerway requested that the cancellation of duplicate authorities be delayed until the buy-sell agreement was fulfilled. Although the P.S.C. granted the parties' request, Molerway objected, stopped payment on its monthly installment, and sought to rescind the contract and get back its downpayment, which Rite-Line resisted. In enforcing the contract, the District Court properly concluded that even if the P.S.C.'s cancellation of the duplicate authorities constituted denial of the transfer, Molerway's conduct manifested a voluntary and intentional relinquishment of its right to rely on the condition precedent of P.S.C. approval in order to void the contract. Molerway Freight Lines, Inc. v. Rite-Line Transp. Serv., Inc., 273 M 95, 902 P2d 9, 52 St. Rep. 839 (1995).

Automatic Approval of Tariff Revisions: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), in refusing to approve and give effect to relator's proposed tariff schedules, failed to perform a clear legal duty arising under the motor carrier law. Since the P.S.C. did not hold a hearing within 180 days of suspension of relator's tariff, the tariff revisions were considered approved and effective as filed. State ex rel. Chem. Transp. v. Bollinger, 173 M 535, 568 P2d 172 (1977).

Terms and Conditions on Certificate: Under this section and 69-12-323, the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) is authorized and has a duty to supervise every motor carrier in the state and may, in its discretion upon issuance of any certificate, attach such terms and conditions as in its judgment may be required. *Walter v. The supervisor shall serve at the pleasure of the commission and at an annual salary to be set by the commission.

(2) The supervisor shall direct all enforcement activities on behalf of the commission, including the investigation and prosecution of violations of this chapter or the rules or orders prescribed under this chapter by the commission"; at beginning of section substituted "The commission may employ field inspectors to investigate and enforce the provisions of this chapter. Field inspectors employed by the commission are peace officers" for "The supervisor and whatever field inspectors may be employed by the commission to assist the supervisor are considered peace officers"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 56 made section gender neutral; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

69-12-206. Investigations by commission.

Case Notes

Petition for Rehearing: Montana Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission), granting motor carrier’s application for certificate of convenience and necessity and granting railroad carrier’s application to discontinue rail passenger service, was not shown to be without authority to grant rehearing, notwithstanding change in membership of Board, when petition for rehearing was filed before conditions in Board’s order had been fulfilled. N. Pac. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm’rs, 13 F. Supp. 529 (D.C. Mont. 1935).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 104 in (1) substituted "by the commission in accordance with Title 69, chapter 14, part 1" for "the enforcement of orders of the commission by the provisions of parts 1, 3, 4, and 8 of chapter 14"; in (2) near beginning of second sentence substituted "the provisions of this chapter or commission orders" for "obedience thereto" and near end substituted "require the carrier or its officers, agents, employees, or representatives to obey the requirements of this chapter or the order" for "enjoin upon it or them obedience to the same"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2015.

Severability: Section 13, Ch. 104, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Enjoining Use of Highways: This section must be construed with 69-14-134 (now repealed). The former, being a later enactment, modifies the latter so that the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) could maintain an action to enjoin a motor carrier from operating motor vehicles over state highways until the motor carrier complied with provisions of the motor carrier law. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Aero Mayflower Transit Co., 119 M 118, 172 P2d 452 (1946), affirmed in Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 332 US 495, 92 L Ed 99, 68 S Ct 167 (1947).

Change of Venue: Though, generally speaking, all equitable suits (injunction, inter alia) are properly triable, under 25-2-108 (renumbered 25-2-118 by Code Commissioner, 1985), in the county in which defendants, or any of them, reside, this section specifically provides that a party injured by the illegal operation of a motor vehicle for hire may by Writ of Injunction seek enforcement of the act in any county in which the motor carrier is engaged in business. Hence, when injunctive relief was sought against such a carrier in a county and the defendant was doing business between the county seat of that county and the county seat of his home county, the court erred in granting a change of venue to his home county. Great N. Ry. v. Hatch, 98 M 269, 38 P2d 976 (1934).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1) after "The commission" substituted "may conduct" for "has jurisdiction to conduct"; and in (2) after "motor carrier's certificate" deleted "of operating authority". Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 156, L. 1993, provided: "In determining whether a motor carrier should be granted a certificate of operating authority, a threshold question to be answered by the public service commission is whether the carrier is fit, willing, and able to provide the proposed service, otherwise referred to as an inquiry into carrier fitness. [Section 1] [69-12-415] is intended to clarify the public service commission's authority in this regard by codifying the carrier fitness requirement. Although 69-12-201 and 69-12-203 provide the commission with supervisory, regulatory, and enforcement authority over motor carriers, its authority to investigate and hear complaints concerning violations of Title 69, chapter 12, is not clearly defined. [Section 2] [69-12-210] is intended to clarify this authority."

Effective Date: Section 4, Ch. 156, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved March 24, 1993.

No Authority to Revoke Compliant Certificate Based on Public Service Commission and Prior Certificate Holder Misconduct — Penalty Statutes Not Self-Executing: The Public Service Commission (PSC) authorized the purchase and transfer of a solid waste transportation certificate that had been purchased and transferred on three prior occasions with PSC approval. Plaintiffs contended that the first three owners had failed to comply with applicable rules and that the PSC failed to enforce the rules and that as a result of these violations, the certificate was invalid when it was transferred to the current owner and should be revoked. The PSC determined that the certificate was valid, the District Court affirmed, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court held that the penalty statutes applicable to revocation of a certificate are not self-executing, in that revocation of a certificate requires PSC action to implement the penalties, so a court may not revoke a compliant certificate holder's certificate based on misconduct. Thus, plaintiffs' complaint presented a nonjusticiable moot issue, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the District Court's decision. Mont. Solid Waste Contractors, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 154, 338 M 1, 161 P3d 837 (2007).

Part 3 Classification and Motor Carrier Certificates

Part Case Notes

Denial of Certificate — No Unconstitutional Taking: The Legislature directed the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to issue a certificate of public convenience and necessity (PCN certificate) to any carrier meeting the criteria set forth in 69-12-328 (now repealed). The plaintiff applied for a PCN certificate, but the P.S.C. denied the application because the plaintiff did not satisfy the statutory requirements. Ultimately, the plaintiff appealed the case to the Supreme Court and argued that the denial of the PCN certificate constituted an unconstitutional taking. The Supreme Court disagreed, ruling that since the plaintiff did not already have a PCN certificate, it did not have a compensable property interest that could be taken. Billings Yellow Cab, LLC v. St., 2014 MT 275, 376 Mont. 463, 335 P.3d 1223.

Evasion of Regulatory Act: When there is an attempt to evade the regulation of motor transportation and requirement of obtaining certificates of public convenience provided in this chapter through the formation of a corporation or association, courts will go behind the form of subterfuge or scheme to the substance. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Reed, 102 M 382, 58 P2d 271 (1936).

Regulations Held Reasonable: The use of the public highways is special and extraordinary and generally may be regulated by the state, and regulation by means of certificates of public convenience is reasonably devised to protect the public from abusive use of roads and evils incident to unregulated competition. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. Reed, 102 M 382, 58 P2d 271 (1936).

Discretion of Board in Granting Certificate: The requirement of this chapter that one desiring to operate a motor vehicle for hire must secure a certificate of convenience and necessity carried with it a discretion on the part of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commission) to refuse it if in its judgment it is unwise to grant it. The contention that it has no power to deny it to one qualified and capable to furnish adequate service is without merit. Fulmer v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 96 M 22, 28 P2d 849 (1934).

Grounds for Denying Certificate: Under this chapter, making it incumbent upon the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now Public Service Commission) in passing on an application for a certificate to operate motor vehicles for hire to give "reasonable consideration" to existing transportation facilities, including railroads, the general rule is that the certificate should be denied unless the service furnished is inadequate or additional service would benefit the general public or unless the existing carrier has been afforded an opportunity to furnish such additional service as may be required. Fulmer v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 96 M 22, 28 P2d 849 (1934).

Persons Required to Procure Certificate:

The provisions of the motor carrier law relating to the persons who must procure certificates of convenience and necessity before they may operate a motor vehicle for hire are broad enough to include the driver thereof, employed by its owner to operate it (whether such owner be an individual or corporation). Therefore, in a prosecution against an owner and driver, a contention that a penalty for a violation of the act could not be imposed upon the latter may not be sustained. St. v. Healow, 98 M 177, 38 P2d 285 (1934).

As a means of protecting its highways from abusive use and the public from the evils incident to unregulated competition, the state has the power to require both common and private motor carriers for hire to obtain from the Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) certificates of public convenience and necessity as a condition precedent to the right to conduct such business. Barney v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 93 M 115, 17 P2d 82 (1932).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1) substituted "five classes" for "four classes"; inserted (1)(e) regarding Class E motor carriers; inserted (6) regarding transportation network carriers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 358 in (4), after "motor carriers", deleted "operating motor vehicles for distributing, delivering, or collecting wares, merchandise, or commodities or transporting persons"; and in (5), at end, substituted "garbage" for "(including pickup and disposal) ashes, trash, waste, refuse, rubbish, garbage, organic and inorganic matter, and recyclables". Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 364 near beginning of (1) reduced number of classes from five to four; deleted (1)(e) referring to Class E motor carriers; deleted (6) specifying Class E motor carriers as motor carriers transporting logs for remuneration fixed in and transportation furnished under a written contract or agreement; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 481 in (1) increased number of classes from four to five; inserted (1)(e) providing for Class E motor carriers; inserted (6) to include in Class E all motor carriers operating motor vehicles transporting logs under certain circumstances; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 341, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill in order to provide guidance to the public service commission in adopting rules. It is the intention of the legislature that a Class D motor carrier have the authority to collect and transport source-separated recyclables and that Class C motor carriers have the authority to transport recyclables."

Case Notes

Proper Notice of Violation and Opportunity for Discovery Required by Statute and Due Process — Remand to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Wilsons, who operated a garbage transport business under a certificate granted by the Public Service Commission, were served by the P.S.C. with a complaint and order to show cause why their certificate should not be terminated. The complaint and order did not refer to any particular rule, statute, or previous order of the Commission that was alleged to have been violated. Later, after the Commission denied an opportunity for Wilsons to discover the evidence to be used against them, the District Court granted Wilsons' motion to amend their application for a review of the P.S.C. order to include immediate review under 2-4-701. The Supreme Court held that the notice used by the P.S.C. did not comply with the requirements of 69-12-327, in that the notice did not specify the rule, statute, or order alleged to have been violated, and held that basic procedural due process was not followed by the P.S.C. in their denial of the Wilsons' request for discovery. The Supreme Court also held that judicial review of the final agency decision was not an adequate remedy when the record on which the final decision of the agency will be based contained no evidence of the statute, rule, or order violated; when no discovery was allowed; when there was no evidence that Wilsons had been notified of who would testify against them; and when, cumulatively, it appeared that Wilsons had been denied fundamental fairness. Wilson v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 167, 858 P2d 368, 50 St. Rep. 985 (1993).

Compliance: Where holder of Class C motor carrier certificate, in response to statutory requirement authorizing only Class D carriers to haul garbage and providing for issuance of Class D certificate upon submission of business records showing that carrier had been hauling garbage for period of 1 year, made an inadequate submission of the information required by statute, District Court was not in error by voiding the certificate that had been issued. In re Application of Galt, 196 M 534, 644 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 106 (1982).

Scope of Judicial Review: Where District Court nullified Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) motor carrier certificate and appellant contended under 2-4-702(1)(b) that validity had not been an issue in the administrative hearing and that court was therefore precluded from reviewing question of validity, Supreme Court held that record shows that issue of validity had been raised before the P.S.C. and therefore court did not exceed its scope of judicial review. In re Application of Galt, 196 M 534, 644 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 106 (1982).

Case Notes

Nonreceipt of Certificate as Affecting Pending Contracts: In an action by the plaintiff contractor against the defendant motor carrier for breach of contract caused by the defendant’s refusal to haul fabricated silo sections at a previously agreed price, the trial court did not err in finding that the fact that the defendant did not receive written state approval of the transfer of a motor carrier’s certificate until after the contract was agreed to did not affect the legality of the contract. Under the rules of the Public Service Commission, the transfer of the certificate was effective before the contract was made, and nothing in the law prevented the defendant from contracting pending issuance of the certificate. Also, the hauling was to be done after the date upon which the defendant received his certificate. Consequently, the defendant could have performed the hauling contract. Empire Steel Mfg. Co. v. Carlson, 191 M 189, 622 P2d 1016, 38 St. Rep. 101 (1981).

Case Notes

No Authority to Revoke Compliant Certificate Based on Public Service Commission and Prior Certificate Holder Misconduct — Penalty Statutes Not Self-Executing: The Public Service Commission (PSC) authorized the purchase and transfer of a solid waste transportation certificate that had been purchased and transferred on three prior occasions with PSC approval. Plaintiffs contended that the first three owners had failed to comply with applicable rules and that the PSC failed to enforce the rules and that as a result of these violations, the certificate was invalid when it was transferred to the current owner and should be revoked. The PSC determined that the certificate was valid, the District Court affirmed, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court held that the penalty statutes applicable to revocation of a certificate are not self-executing, in that revocation of a certificate requires PSC action to implement the penalties, so a court may not revoke a compliant certificate holder's certificate based on misconduct. Thus, plaintiffs' complaint presented a nonjusticiable moot issue, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the District Court's decision. Mont. Solid Waste Contractors, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 154, 338 M 1, 161 P3d 837 (2007).

Criteria for Finding of Fitness of Motor Carrier Applicant: The Public Service Commission properly considered the following factors when evaluating whether a motor carrier applicant was fit, willing, and able to provide service: (1) the financial condition of the applicant; (2) the intention of the applicant to perform the service sought; (3) the adequacy of the equipment that the applicant has to perform the service; (4) the applicant's experience in conducting the service sought; and (5) the nature of previous operations, if there are allegations of illegal operations. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Discretion of Public Service Commission to Consider Competition as Factor in Determining Public Convenience and Necessity: The Public Service Commission (PSC) can properly consider competition as one additional factor in assessing public convenience and necessity when rendering a decision on an application for a motor carrier certificate. Inherent in the concept of competition is the notion that the new applicant may take away some business from an existing transport service, but this fact alone does not mandate denial of an application. Rather, the issue is whether under the facts of the case, competition would impose undue hardship and impair the existing transport's ability to provide service to an extent that would be contrary to public interest. The PSC may consider competition case by case in any particular order with other factors, such as whether: (1) the applicant is fit and able to perform the proposed service; (2) public convenience and necessity require authorization of the proposed service; (3) public need for the proposed service can and will be met by existing carriers; and (4) the proposed service would have an adverse impact on existing transportation services. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Reexamination of Circumstances Reserved by Public Service Commission — No Error in Failure to Explain Departure From Prior Decision: The Public Service Commission (PSC) denied a Class D application in 1984, finding that competition with Three Rivers Disposal Company (Three Rivers) at that time would be destructive. In 1994, the PSC reconsidered and granted a Class D certificate to the 1984 applicant, finding that competition would promote the public interest in improving service and, perhaps, rates. Three Rivers contended PSC error in its failure to follow its own precedent and to provide a reasoned explanation for its departure from that precedent. Citing Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe RR Co. v. Bd. of Trade, 412 US 800, 37 L Ed 2d 350, 93 S Ct 2367 (1973), the Supreme Court noted that an agency has a duty to either follow its own precedent or provide a reasoned analysis explaining its departure from precedent. However, in this case, there was no change in prior PSC policy and standards; only the facts changed. In the 1984 decision, the PSC placed Three Rivers on notice that the power was reserved by the PSC to reexamine the situation and to grant a new authority if circumstances changed. Therefore, the PSC did not depart from established precedent and its order certifying a new motor carrier was correctly affirmed. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Unwillingness of Present Carrier to Provide Adequate Service — Unmet Shipper Need: Whether an existing carrier is capable of providing adequate service means nothing if it is unwilling to provide adequate service. It was not error for the Public Service Commission, based on overwhelming evidence of substantial unmet shipper need and inadequate service by a certified carrier, to consider competition when assessing public need and convenience in granting a certificate to another carrier that could fill unmet consumer needs, improve service, and, perhaps, improve rates. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Entry Into Business, Not Rates, Controlled by Commission: Through the authority bestowed on it in Title 69, the Public Service Commission controls entry into the garbage-hauling business; however, the Commission does not regulate rates charged by Class D motor carriers and does not regulate the quality of service provided. The express authority to regulate entry is not concomitant with the implied requirements to regulate rates. Rozel Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 226 M 237, 735 P2d 282, 44 St. Rep. 618 (1987).

Adoption of Self-Government Charter — Doctrine of Implied Preemption: Appellant private garbage haulers contended that the Legislature preempted the field of garbage regulation and preempted municipalities from collecting garbage by enacting 7-2-4736. Prior to the 1972 Constitution, cities had only those powers expressly given to them by the Legislature, and if the Legislature considered a subject to be a matter of statewide concern, it could enact laws on the subject and preempt local governments from the field. However, Art. XI, sec. 6, Mont. Const., states that a local government which adopts a self-government charter may exercise any power not prohibited by the Constitution, law, or the charter. The city of Billings adopted a self-government charter in 1976, and 7-1-102 allows the city to provide services or perform any functions not expressly prohibited. The Supreme Court held in Tipco Corp., Inc. v. Billings, 197 M 339, 642 P2d 1074 (1982), that "the only way the doctrine of pre-emption by the state can co-exist with self-government powers of a municipality is if there is an express prohibition by statute which forbids local governments . . . from acting in a certain area. The doctrine of implied pre-emption, by definition, cannot apply to local governments with self-government powers". Powers specifically denied to local governments are enumerated in 7-1-111 and include the exercise of any power that prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public convenience and necessity. Under this section, private garbage haulers are required to get a certificate of public convenience and necessity prior to doing business. The decision by Billings voters that the city should provide garbage services in no way prohibits the grant or denial of a certificate of public necessity. The Supreme Court held that the city was simply exercising its self-government powers to provide a service for its residents and was taxing them for that service. D & F Sanitation Serv. v. Billings, 219 M 437, 713 P2d 977, 43 St. Rep. 74 (1986), overruling Billings v. Weatherwax, 193 M 163, 630 P2d 1216, 38 St. Rep. 1034 (1981).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1)(a) near beginning after "filing of an application" inserted "for a certificate", after "Class D" inserted "or Class E", and near end substituted "provide notice of the application" for "give notice of the filing of the application"; inserted (1)(c) regarding limits on certain protests; in (4) substituted current language for "However, an application by a Class A, Class B, Class C, or Class D motor carrier for a certificate may be disallowed without a public hearing when it appears from the records of the commission that the route or territory sought to be served by the applicant has previously been made the basis of a public investigation and finding by the commission that public convenience and necessity do not require the proposed motor carrier service unless it is made to affirmatively appear in the application by a recital of the facts that conditions obtaining over the route or in the territory and affecting transportation facilities have materially changed since the previous public investigation and finding and that public convenience and necessity now require the motor carrier operation"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Saving Clause: Section 28, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 364 near beginning of (1) and (4), after "Class D", deleted "or Class E"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 481 in (1) and (4) inserted reference to Class E motor carrier; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1991.

Chapter 512 substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1983 Amendment: In (1), after "contract" substituted "as provided in 69-12-324" for "with the United States government (or an agency or department thereof)".

Composite Section: This section was amended by Ch. 25 and Ch. 55, L. 1979, and a composite section was prepared by the Code Commissioner, 1979. Both chapters amended subsection (1) concerning notice of hearing, and in preparing the composite the language "fix a time and place for hearing thereon" was not deleted, as was done in Ch. 55, in order to accommodate the changes made by Ch. 25.

Case Notes

Burden of Proof on Applicant — Certificate Properly Denied: A taxi company filed an application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity (PCN certificate) with the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.). The P.S.C. denied the application, and the District Court affirmed the denial. The taxi company appealed to the Supreme Court, which concluded that, as the applicant, the taxi company had the burden of proof to show that there was a statewide need for its services. Given the testimony before the P.S.C., the Supreme Court ruled that the taxi company had not met its burden of proof, and it affirmed the denial of the PCN certificate. Billings Yellow Cab, LLC v. St., 2014 MT 275, 376 Mont. 463, 335 P.3d 1223.

Criteria for Finding of Fitness of Motor Carrier Applicant: The Public Service Commission properly considered the following factors when evaluating whether a motor carrier applicant was fit, willing, and able to provide service: (1) the financial condition of the applicant; (2) the intention of the applicant to perform the service sought; (3) the adequacy of the equipment that the applicant has to perform the service; (4) the applicant's experience in conducting the service sought; and (5) the nature of previous operations, if there are allegations of illegal operations. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Discretion of Public Service Commission to Consider Competition as Factor in Determining Public Convenience and Necessity: The Public Service Commission (PSC) can properly consider competition as one additional factor in assessing public convenience and necessity when rendering a decision on an application for a motor carrier certificate. Inherent in the concept of competition is the notion that the new applicant may take away some business from an existing transport service, but this fact alone does not mandate denial of an application. Rather, the issue is whether under the facts of the case, competition would impose undue hardship and impair the existing transport's ability to provide service to an extent that would be contrary to public interest. The PSC may consider competition case by case in any particular order with other factors, such as whether: (1) the applicant is fit and able to perform the proposed service; (2) public convenience and necessity require authorization of the proposed service; (3) public need for the proposed service can and will be met by existing carriers; and (4) the proposed service would have an adverse impact on existing transportation services. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Reexamination of Circumstances Reserved by Public Service Commission — No Error in Failure to Explain Departure From Prior Decision: The Public Service Commission (PSC) denied a Class D application in 1984, finding that competition with Three Rivers Disposal Company (Three Rivers) at that time would be destructive. In 1994, the PSC reconsidered and granted a Class D certificate to the 1984 applicant, finding that competition would promote the public interest in improving service and, perhaps, rates. Three Rivers contended PSC error in its failure to follow its own precedent and to provide a reasoned explanation for its departure from that precedent. Citing Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe RR Co. v. Bd. of Trade, 412 US 800, 37 L Ed 2d 350, 93 S Ct 2367 (1973), the Supreme Court noted that an agency has a duty to either follow its own precedent or provide a reasoned analysis explaining its departure from precedent. However, in this case, there was no change in prior PSC policy and standards; only the facts changed. In the 1984 decision, the PSC placed Three Rivers on notice that the power was reserved by the PSC to reexamine the situation and to grant a new authority if circumstances changed. Therefore, the PSC did not depart from established precedent and its order certifying a new motor carrier was correctly affirmed. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Unwillingness of Present Carrier to Provide Adequate Service — Unmet Shipper Need: Whether an existing carrier is capable of providing adequate service means nothing if it is unwilling to provide adequate service. It was not error for the Public Service Commission, based on overwhelming evidence of substantial unmet shipper need and inadequate service by a certified carrier, to consider competition when assessing public need and convenience in granting a certificate to another carrier that could fill unmet consumer needs, improve service, and, perhaps, improve rates. Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 245, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997).

Entry Into Business, Not Rates, Controlled by Commission: Through the authority bestowed on it in Title 69, the Public Service Commission controls entry into the garbage-hauling business; however, the Commission does not regulate rates charged by Class D motor carriers and does not regulate the quality of service provided. The express authority to regulate entry is not concomitant with the implied requirements to regulate rates. Rozel Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 226 M 237, 735 P2d 282, 44 St. Rep. 618 (1987).

Attachment of Terms and Conditions: Under this section and 69-12-201, the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) is authorized and has a duty to administratively supervise every motor carrier in the state and may in its discretion, upon issuance of any certificate, attach such terms and conditions as in its judgment may be required. Walter v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 153 M 384, 457 P2d 479 (1969). (Annotator's Note: Chapter 686, L. 1985, transferred authority for setting motor carrier and motor vehicle safety standards from the Public Service Commission to the Department of Justice.)

Award of Contract Under Montana Procurement Act — No Preemption of Other Statutory Requirements: The plaintiff was awarded a state contract to haul goods for the school lunch program. The contract was contingent upon the plaintiff's obtaining a Class C certificate from the Public Service Commission by August 1, 1989. The Commission informed the plaintiff that a public hearing had to be held on issuing the certificate and that the earliest the hearing could be held was August 23, 1989. The plaintiff argued that the policy of the Montana Procurement Act to promote competition preempted this section, which operates to protect the existing carrier. The Supreme Court ruled that more specific statutes regulating carriers govern over the procurement statutes with respect to carriers. State ex rel. Roberts v. Pub. Ser. Comm'n, 242 M 242, 790 P2d 489, 47 St. Rep. 774 (1990).

Different Treatment of Transportation Companies Reasonable: The plaintiff was awarded a state contract to haul goods for the school lunch program. The contract was contingent upon the plaintiff's obtaining a Class C certificate from the Public Service Commission by August 1, 1989. The Commission informed the plaintiff that a public hearing had to be held on issuing the certificate and that the earliest the hearing could be held was August 23, 1989. The plaintiff argued that the hearing requirement denied him equal treatment because Class C solid waste carriers were exempt from the hearing process. The Supreme Court held that there was a reasonable basis for excluding solid waste carriers because they were regulated by other state laws and agencies. State ex rel. Roberts v. Pub. Ser. Comm'n, 242 M 242, 790 P2d 489, 47 St. Rep. 774 (1990).

No Blanket Exemption From Hearing Requirements: The plaintiff was awarded a state contract to haul goods for the school lunch program. The contract was contingent upon the plaintiff's obtaining a Class C certificate from the Public Service Commission by August 1, 1989. The Commission informed the plaintiff that a public hearing had to be held on issuing the certificate and that the earliest the hearing could be held was August 23, 1989. The plaintiff sought declaratory relief that all Class C carriers who had a state or federal contract were exempt from the hearing requirement. The Supreme Court ruled that there was no blanket exemption and that the plaintiff was required to adhere to the hearing procedure. State ex rel. Roberts v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 242 M 242, 790 P2d 489, 47 St. Rep. 774 (1990).

Waiver of Condition of Public Service Commission Approval of Certificate Transfer: Rite-Line Transportation Services, Inc. (Rite-Line), owned Certificate No. 1136 that authorized it to operate certain routes in Montana. Molerway Freight Lines, Inc. (Molerway), sought to obtain the certificate and entered into a buy-sell agreement expressly conditioned on Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) approval of the transfer. After tendering a $30,000 downpayment, Molerway made two monthly installment payments. The P.S.C. approved the lease of the certificate but indicated that portions of the certificate that were duplicative of other routes already covered in Molerway's other certificates would be canceled. Both parties feared that the cancellation of duplicate authorities would jeopardize the buy-sell agreement. Both Rite-Line and Molerway requested that the cancellation of duplicate authorities be delayed until the buy-sell agreement was fulfilled. Although the P.S.C. granted the parties' request, Molerway objected, stopped payment on its monthly installment, and sought to rescind the contract and get back its downpayment, which Rite-Line resisted. In enforcing the contract, the District Court properly concluded that even if the P.S.C.'s cancellation of the duplicate authorities constituted denial of the transfer, Molerway's conduct manifested a voluntary and intentional relinquishment of its right to rely on the condition precedent of P.S.C. approval in order to void the contract. *Molerway Freight Lines, Inc. v. Case Notes

No Authority to Revoke Compliant Certificate Based on Public Service Commission and Prior Certificate Holder Misconduct — Penalty Statutes Not Self-Executing: The Public Service Commission (PSC) authorized the purchase and transfer of a solid waste transportation certificate that had been purchased and transferred on three prior occasions with PSC approval. Plaintiffs contended that the first three owners had failed to comply with applicable rules and that the PSC failed to enforce the rules and that as a result of these violations, the certificate was invalid when it was transferred to the current owner and should be revoked. The PSC determined that the certificate was valid, the District Court affirmed, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court held that the penalty statutes applicable to revocation of a certificate are not self-executing, in that revocation of a certificate requires PSC action to implement the penalties, so a court may not revoke a compliant certificate holder's certificate based on misconduct. Thus, plaintiffs' complaint presented a nonjusticiable moot issue, and the Supreme Court declined to disturb the District Court's decision. Mont. Solid Waste Contractors, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 154, 338 M 1, 161 P3d 837 (2007).

Proper Notice of Violation and Opportunity for Discovery Required by Statute and Due Process — Remand to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Wilsons, who operated a garbage transport business under a certificate granted by the Public Service Commission, were served by the P.S.C. with a complaint and order to show cause why their certificate should not be terminated. The complaint and order did not refer to any particular rule, statute, or previous order of the Commission that was alleged to have been violated. Later, after the Commission denied an opportunity for Wilsons to discover the evidence to be used against them, the District Court granted Wilsons' motion to amend their application for a review of the P.S.C. order to include immediate review under 2-4-701. The Supreme Court held that the notice used by the P.S.C. did not comply with the requirements of this section, in that the notice did not specify the rule, statute, or order alleged to have been violated, and held that basic procedural due process was not followed by the P.S.C. in their denial of the Wilsons' request for discovery. The Supreme Court also held that judicial review of the final agency decision was not an adequate remedy when the record on which the final decision of the agency will be based contained no evidence of the statute, rule, or order violated; when no discovery was allowed; when there was no evidence that Wilsons had been notified of who would testify against them; and when, cumulatively, it appeared that Wilsons had been denied fundamental fairness. Wilson v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 167, 858 P2d 368, 50 St. Rep. 985 (1993).

Hearing Required: Cancellation of a person's certificate without giving him notice or an opportunity to appear or to show cause why it should not be canceled deprived such person of the right to operate as a motor carrier and was in violation of this section and Art. II, sec. 17, Mont.

Const., by depriving him of a property right without due process of law. State ex rel. Daniels v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 131 M 9, 306 P2d 264 (1957).

Petition for Rehearing: Montana Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission), granting motor carrier's application for certificate of convenience and necessity and granting railroad carrier's application to discontinue rail passenger service, was held not shown to be without authority to grant rehearing, notwithstanding change in membership of Board, when petition for rehearing was filed before conditions in Board's order had been fulfilled. In a suit for injunctive relief, the equity rule dispensing with the necessity for a reply was held applicable, except as to allegations concerning petition for rehearing and what was done about it, in the absence of an agreement between counsel that allegations of answer were admitted. N. Pac. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 13 F. Supp. 529 (D.C. Mont. 1935).

69-12-404. Suspension of certificate by petition.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 in (1)(a) substituted current language for "Every motor carrier as defined within this chapter may petition the commission in writing to suspend its intrastate operating authority for a period not to exceed 6 months. An additional 6 months' suspension may be requested and granted but no other"; in (1)(b) substituted "The suspension of a certificate of public convenience and necessity requested by a motor carrier pursuant to 69-12-311(1)(b) or 69-12-312(1)(b), by a Class C motor carrier, or by a Class D motor carrier may be granted" for "Such suspension may be granted by the commission"; in (2)(a) substituted current language for "The suspension of any intrastate operating authority of any carrier as provided for in subsection (1) for a period of 12 consecutive months shall be deemed to establish"; in (2)(b) at beginning inserted "The suspension of a certificate of public convenience and necessity for a motor carrier pursuant to 69-12-311(1)(b) or 69-12-312(1)(b), a Class C motor carrier, or a Class D motor carrier as provided in subsection (1) for a period of 12 consecutive months establishes" and in second sentence after "notice and hearing" inserted "motor carrier pursuant to 69-12-311(1)(b) or 69-12-312(1)(b), the Class C motor carrier, or the Class D motor"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Saving Clause: Section 28, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

69-12-406. Restriction on transportation of certain waste.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 substituted "Class A, Class B, Class C, or Class E motor carrier" for "Class A, B, or C carrier". Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Saving Clause: Section 28, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a saving clause.

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

69-12-408. Identification of ownership of certain large motor vehicles.Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 35 in (1)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause, after "combination of vehicles" deleted "except farm vehicles", and after "commission" deleted "interstate commerce commission"; in second sentence of (1)(a) inserted "If a number is displayed, it must be the"; in (1)(b) after "display" deleted "of name"; inserted (2)(a) concerning farm vehicles; in (2)(b)(iii) substituted "prospective buyer" for "prospect"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 20, 2013.

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 35, L. 2013, provided: "[This act] applies to certificates, records, reports, and identifications issued, completed, or displayed after [the effective date of this act]." Effective February 20, 2013.

1991 Amendment: In (1) (a), near middle, substituted "city and state of or the name or trade name and the public service commission, interstate commerce commission, or department of transportation" for "address or M.R.C. or I.C.C. certificate"; deleted (3) that was a misdemeanor penalty clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 1991.

69-12-415. Carrier fitness.Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 456 near beginning after "A certificate" deleted "of operating authority"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Transition: Section 26, Ch. 456, L. 2015, provided: "A motor carrier that possesses a certificate issued by the commission on or before June 30, 2015, is considered to possess a valid certificate."

Severability: Section 29, Ch. 456, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

1993 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 156, L. 1993, provided: "In determining whether a motor carrier should be granted a certificate of operating authority, a threshold question to be answered by the public service commission is whether the carrier is fit, willing, and able to provide the proposed service, otherwise referred to as an inquiry into carrier fitness. [Section 1] [69-12-415] is intended to clarify the public service commission's authority in this regard by codifying the carrier fitness requirement. Although 69-12-201 and 69-12-203 provide the commission with supervisory, regulatory, and enforcement authority over motor carriers, its authority to investigate and hear complaints concerning violations of Title 69, chapter 12, is not clearly defined. [Section 2] [69-12-210] is intended to clarify this authority."

Effective Date: Section 4, Ch. 156, L. 1993, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved March 24, 1993.

Case Notes

Definition of Motor Vehicle as Resulting in an Undue Burden on Interstate Commerce: Definition of motor vehicles (prior to 1979 amendment correcting the problem) as including a trailer, semitrailer, or dolly and requirement for a $5 fee (prior to the 1983 amendment authorizing the fee to be set by the Public Service Commission) on each motor vehicle constituted an undue burden on interstate commerce when Interstate Commerce Commission regulations provided for a maximum registration fee of $5 and the Interstate Commerce Commission definition of a motor vehicle was limited to the mechanical drive unit, not to whatever was being pulled by that power unit, because federal statute and regulations promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission were controlling over contrary provisions of state law. State ex rel. Sammons Trucking, Inc. v. Bollinger, 169 M 88, 544 P2d 1235 (1976).

Motor Carriers' Tax Held Unconstitutional: The Supreme Court held that the statute levying a tax on motor carriers for use of highways in the state was discriminatory and denied common carrier of general commodities uniformity of taxation, due process, and equal protection. Two factors were key in the decision. Motor vehicles used for carrying agricultural commodities, supplies and materials for construction and maintenance of highways, for logging and mining operations, and for transport of newspapers, newspaper supplements, periodicals and magazines, and business concerns which acquired their own vehicles and accomplished their own hauling were exempt from the tax. Secondly, the formula used to compute revenue payable under statute was based upon income-producing ability of vehicles in interstate commerce rather than upon the use of highways, and therefore constituted a tax on the privilege of doing business and placed burden on interstate commerce in violation of commerce clause. Garrett Freightlines v. Mont. R.R. & P.S.C., 161 M 482, 507 P2d 1040 (1973).

Fee Higher Than Allowed by Federal Law: The imposition of a $10 fee on motor vehicles engaged in interstate commerce conflicted with federal law and regulations thereunder. The state could impose a fee no greater than the $5 per vehicle permitted by federal regulations. State ex rel. Sammons Trucking, Inc. v. Boedecker, 158 M 397, 492 P2d 919 (1972), distinguishing Aero Mayflower Transit Co. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 332 US 495, 92 L Ed 99, 68 S Ct 167 (1947).

CHAPTER 13 PIPELINE CARRIERS

Chapter Case Notes

Fuel Storage Tank as Part of Pipeline — Construction in Agricultural-Open Zone Permitted: After careful and conscientious review by the zoning coordinator and planning department, a building permit for a 35,000-barrel diesel fuel tank on property zoned agricultural-open space was properly granted. The tank could be considered part of a pipeline, which is a permitted use within such a zone. The Supreme Court found that contentions of error in interpreting the county zoning plan, which disallowed liquid fuel storage in a tank no matter how temporary or in what context in any agricultural-open zone, to be too narrow and rigid. The court held that since zoning laws and ordinances are in derogation of the common-law right to free use of private property, such ordinances must be strictly construed and must be given a fair and reasonable interpretation, by the officials assigned to interpret and apply the zoning laws, with some regard to the proposed use. Whistler v. Burlington N. RR Co., 228 M 150, 741 P2d 422, 44 St. Rep. 1415 (1987).

Chapter Attorney General's Opinions

Parameters of County Commission Authority to Permit County Road Use for Pipelines: A Board of County Commissioners is charged with a significant amount of discretion under 7-1-2103, 7-14-2102, and 7-14-2107 in determining whether to permit the use of a county road right-of-way for the laying of permanent or temporary pipelines. This discretion is potentially limited by state regulations under Title 69, ch. 13, concerning pipeline carriers, depending on specific factual situations. To be consistent with the holding in Bolinger v. Bozeman, 158 M 507, 493 P2d 1062 (1972), the Board must find that the action: (1) is necessary for the best interest of the county roads and the road districts; (2) does not unreasonably impair the special easements of abutting owners in the street for purposes of access, light, and air; and (3) is conducive to the public welfare and serves one of the purposes for which highways and streets are dedicated. 42 A.G. Op. 40 (1987).

Part 1 General Provisions

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 44 throughout section in six places substituted “crude petroleum, coal, or the products of crude petroleum or coal or of carbon dioxide from a plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide” for “crude petroleum, coal, the products of crude petroleum or coal, or carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels”; inserted (2) defining plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 26, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 231 in (1) in introductory clause at beginning deleted “The following are hereby declared to be common carriers and subject to the provisions of this chapter” and at end substituted “is a common carrier if it engages in” for “of any kind whatever”; in (1)(a) in two places, in (1)(b), in (1)(c) in two places, and in (1)(d) inserted reference to carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Case Notes

Description of Secondary Access Right-of-Way Within Statutory Requirements: In its complaint for condemnation for a pipeline and fiber optic right-of-way access across plaintiff's property, Cenex incorporated by reference the “minimum necessary interest” requirement and included a map of the pipeline route and a description of the primary easement sought. When the District Court granted condemnation of the 50-foot easement, plaintiff appealed, alleging that the District Court erred because Cenex had failed in its description to set forth a fixed way of access. In affirming the condemnation grant, the Supreme Court held that because Cenex was entitled only to the “minimum necessary interest”, the description of the secondary right of access complied with the requirement of 70-30-203 through incorporation by reference of the requirement. *Cenex Pipeline LLC v. 2013 Amendment: Chapter 44 in (1) in third sentence substituted "delivery at all points on the pipeline of crude petroleum, coal, or the products of crude petroleum or coal or of carbon dioxide from a plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide" for "delivery of crude petroleum, coal, the products of crude petroleum or coal, or carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels of patrons at all points on the pipeline"; and in (2) in first sentence substituted "crude petroleum, coal, or the products of crude petroleum or coal or any carbon dioxide from a plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide" for "crude petroleum, coal, the products of crude petroleum or coal, or carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels" and in second sentence substituted "crude oil, coal, or the products of crude petroleum or coal or in carbon dioxide from a plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide" for "crude oil, coal, the products of crude petroleum or coal, or carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels". Amendment effective February 26, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 231 in (1) and in (2) in two places inserted reference to carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels; in (1) in first sentence after "tonnage" inserted "or carbon dioxide volume" and in second sentence after "tonnage" inserted "and volume"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

69-13-303. Prohibition of discrimination in rates or service.

Compiler's Comments

2013 Amendment: Chapter 44 throughout section in five places substituted "crude petroleum, coal, or the products of crude petroleum or coal or of carbon dioxide from a plant or facility that produces or captures carbon dioxide" for "crude petroleum, coal, the products of crude petroleum or coal, or carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels"; in (1) in two places before "produced or purchased" inserted "when any of those products were" and at end of last sentence in two places substituted "any of those products" for "the products". Amendment effective February 26, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 231 in (1) in four places and in (2) inserted reference to carbon dioxide produced in the combustion or gasification of fossil fuels; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

CHAPTER 14 RAILROADS

Chapter Case Notes

Federal Railroad Safety Liability Preemption — Shanklin Clarified, Not Overruled by Subsequent Federal Legislation: In Norfolk S. Ry. Co. v. Shanklin, 529 US 344 (2000), the U.S. Supreme Court held that when federal funds are used to install warning devices at railroad crossings, the preemption clause of the Federal Railroad Safety Act of 1970 (FRSA), 49 U.S.C. 20106 (1994), preempts state law tort claims. In 2007, Congress amended the preemption clause by adding an additional subsection clarifying state law causes of action. However, the amendment did not overrule the Shanklin preemption analysis or effect a substantive change to FRSA's preemption clause, but instead simply clarified the scope of the preemption clause, so the Shanklin preemption remains in effect. Smith v. Burlington N. & Santa Fe Ry. Co., 2008 MT 225, 344 M 278, 187 P3d 639 (2008).

Whistle Statute Applicable to Any Railroad Crossing, Not Just Public Railroad Crossing: Langemo was injured in a collision with a Montana Rail Link train at a private railroad crossing. Langemo contended that the railroad was liable for negligence per se under 69-14-562 (now repealed) because no whistle post was ever installed at the crossing, nor did the engineer sound the train whistle when approaching the crossing, in accordance with a longstanding railroad policy of not sounding the whistle at private crossings. The District Court applied the definition of road in 60-1-103, in which the word denotes a public way, and concluded that the whistle statute required bells and whistles to be sounded only at public crossings and granted summary judgment for the railroad. The Supreme Court disagreed and reversed. The District Court's interpretation violated basic rules of statutory construction and misinterpreted the applicable statutes. The whistle statute's use of the phrase "any highway, road, or railroad crossing", in its ordinary and usual meaning, meant every railroad crossing, not just public crossings. The whistle statute was not expressly repealed by the highway code, nor did the general highway code enacted in 1965 impliedly repeal the specific whistle statute of 1873. (However, note that 2001 amendments to 69-14-562 now explicitly require that railroad bells and whistles be sounded only at public crossings and the 2003 amendment provides for compliance with a written request to sound bells and whistles at a private crossing.) Langemo v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 2001 MT 273, 307 M 293, 38 P3d 782 (2001).

Improper Grant of Partial Summary Judgment on Issue of Whether Train Crew Gave Adequate Auditory Warning at Railroad Crossing: Mickelson was injured when the fire truck that he was driving was struck by a Montana Rail Link (MRL) train and sought damages. In its order granting partial summary judgment to MRL, the District Court ruled, as a matter of law, that the MRL train crew had properly sounded the train whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) and bell, in accordance with 69-14-562 (now repealed), and that because Mickelson had no memory of the accident, he could not produce any specific facts that presented a genuine issue worthy of trial. In the brief opposing summary judgment, Mickelson pointed out several inconsistencies in the testimony of the train crew that raised factual and credibility issues concerning the crew's story about how the accident occurred, particularly with regard to Mickelson's prior common practice of loading the fire truck in a particular manner, which conflicted with the crew's story. The Supreme Court held that the trial court committed reversible error by preventing the jury from deciding crucial factual and credibility issues regarding adequate auditory warnings, citing several cases that precluded summary judgment on whistle issues because of disputed facts. Mickelson v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 2000 MT 111, 299 M 348, 999 P2d 985, 57 St. Rep. 446 (2000). See also Easterwood v. CSX Transp., Inc., 933 F2d 1548 (11th Cir. 1991), Bowman v. Norfolk S. Ry. Co., 832 F. Supp. 1014 (D. S.C. 1993), and Borden v. CSX Transp., Inc., 843 F. Supp. 1410 (M.D. Ala. 1993).

Improper Jury Instruction Regarding Speed of Train — Applicable Law of Case: Mickelson was injured when the fire truck that he was driving was struck by a Montana Rail Link (MRL) train and sought damages. MRL moved for summary judgment, arguing that the subject of train speed was preempted by CSX Transp., Inc. v. Easterwood, 507 US 658, 123 L Ed 2d 387, 113 S Ct 1732 (1993). The District Court denied MRL's motion, ruling that a negligence action based on a state law duty to slow or stop a train to avoid a specific individual hazard was not preempted under CSX. Nevertheless, the court's instructions to the jury stated that "Under the laws governing the speed of trains, a train crew has no duty to slow a train until a reasonable and prudent train operator has reason to believe, based upon the circumstances present, that the operator of a motor vehicle will not yield to the train and there is a substantial risk of a collision" and that "Montana law does not provide the driver of an emergency vehicle any special privilege in relation to railroad crossings. Emergency vehicle drivers must follow the requirements when approaching and crossing railroad crossings as any other vehicle driver". Following jury deliberations, MRL was found not liable. The Supreme Court held that the District Court abused its discretion in instructing the jury on the speed of trains because the instructions did not state the applicable law of the case. As set out in Runkle v. Burlington N., Inc., 188 M 286, 613 P2d 982 (1980), whether a railroad is negligent in a particular manner, such as failing to reduce train speed, is a question of fact for the jury. Here, the jury instructions improperly removed the question of train speed from jury consideration, compelling the jury to conclude that the train crew did not have a duty to do anything more than they did, rather than deciding whether the facts and circumstances of this case constituted a specific individual hazard. Mickelson v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 2000 MT 111, 299 M 348, 999 P2d 985, 57 St. Rep. 446 (2000).

Master-Servant Relationship Between Railroad and Locomotive Service Facility Established by Common Control — Applicability of Federal Employers' Liability Act: Employees of the Livingston Rebuild Center, Inc. (LRC), sought damages under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA), 45 U.S.C. 51, et seq., alleging that they were injured during the course of their employment while nominally employed by LRC, but that LRC was actually the servant of Montana Rail Link, Inc. (MRL), which engaged in the business of common carrier by railroad in interstate commerce. MRL's affirmative defense was that plaintiffs could not recover FELA benefits against LRC because LRC was not a railroad and that they could not recover FELA benefits against MRL because they were not employed by MRL. The issue on appeal was whether the District Court erred when it held that plaintiffs were not employed by a common carrier by railroad for purposes of FELA. As applicable law, the Supreme Court cited Kelley v. S. Pac. Co., 419 US 318, 42 L Ed 2d 498, 95 S Ct 472 (1974). Among the factors typically considered for purposes of determining whether a master-servant relationship exists, the most significant is the degree of control that the alleged master exercises over the work of the alleged servant. In this case, a master-servant relationship was established between MRL and LRC not only by control of business practices through common ownership and directorship, but also through: (1) MRL's direct, frequent, and unique supervision of LRC employees; (2) MRL's at-will acquisition of LRC property, including land exchanges without consideration or for less consideration than full market value, when acquisition was in MRL's self-interest; (3) LRC's dependence on MRL for training, tools, equipment, and parts; and (4) MRL's use of LRC property for its own purposes without compensation, including the common sharing of physical facilities. Based on the master-servant relationship, the LRC employees were also considered employees of MRL at the time that they were injured and were thus covered under FELA. Watts v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 1999 MT 18, 293 M 167, 975 P2d 283, 56 St. Rep. 88 (1999).

Admissibility Dependent on Nature of Treatise: Learned treatises are permissible for use in cross-examination of an expert if the treatise is "established as a reliable authority by the testimony or admission of the witness or by other expert testimony or by judicial notice". Here, a treatise on design of grade railway-highway crossings was properly used to test the knowledge of an expert witness in cross-examination. Another treatise concerning the visibility and audibility of trains approaching crossings was properly held to be inadmissible, as it was merely advisory in nature. Treatises may be admitted upon the foundation that they: (1) show what is feasible to the jury; or (2) show what the defendant knew or should have known about safety precautions. Runkle v. Burlington N. Ry., 188 M 286, 613 P2d 982, 37 St. Rep. 995 (1980).

Warning Signal:

The court found that the obvious legislative intent of 69-14-562 (now repealed) is that the whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) and bell of a train be audibly effective to persons on foot or in vehicles approaching or crossing over an intersection with the railroad. The court found that the legislative purpose is satisfied if either the whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) or the bell, both being sounded for the statutory distance, gives an audible warning to others using the grade crossing sufficiently effective that a collision with the train can be avoided by exercising reasonable care. Runkle v. Burlington N. Ry., 188 M 286, 613 P2d 982, 37 St. Rep. 995 (1980).

The failure of railroad employees in charge of engine to sound the whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) was not the proximate cause of collision when a motorist struck the unlighted second passenger car of a train stopped on a crossing. The mere alleged failure of a signal at the crossing to function at time of collision was not evidence of negligence on part of railroad when it inspected the signals daily and found no defect in them and when they were in good order and functioned properly a few hours before and a few hours after the collision. In the absence of knowledge, the railroad was not under a duty to place a servant or light or other signal at or near the crossing to warn of the presence of a train on the crossing. N. Pac. Ry. v. Bacon, 91 F2d 173 (9th Cir. 1937), certiorari denied, Bacon v. N. Pac. Ry., 302 US 730, 82 L Ed 564, 58 S Ct 55 (1937).

While it may be conceded that a locomotive engineer who, on approaching a crossing, observes that signals are not heard or that his train is not seen by one crossing must give such additional signals as an ordinarily prudent man would deem necessary, refusal to give such an instruction was held not error as not warranted by the evidence. Norton v. Great N. Ry., 85 M 270, 278 P 521 (1929).

The burden of proving that defendant railway company's enginemen on approaching a highway crossing did not sound the locomotive whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) or ring the bell may be sustained by plaintiff's negative testimony, provided the attendant circumstances were such as to have afforded him a reasonable opportunity to hear the warning signals, if given. Grant v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 78 M 97, 252 P 382 (1927).

It is negligence for a railroad to permit its trains to approach a crossing without sounding the whistle (now designated as locomotive horn) and ringing the bell. Stroud v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 75 M 384, 243 P 1089 (1926); Sprague v. N. Pac. Ry., 40 M 481, 107 P 412 (1910); Hunter v. Mont. Cent. Ry., 22 M 525, 57 P 140 (1899).

When a person seeing a train approaching is killed in an endeavor to effect a crossing ahead of the train, failure of the enginemen to ring the locomotive bell or sound the whistle (now designated as locomotive horn), though punishable as a misdemeanor, is not a proximate cause of the death. Melzner v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 51 M 487, 153 P 1019 (1915).

A variance between an averment that defendant railroad was negligent in failing to give any warning of the approach of one of its trains and evidence which tended to show that, while warning was given, it was not until the train was within about 100 feet of the crossing was immaterial. De Atley v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 224, 112 P 76 (1910).

Evidence of failure of a railroad to give proper signals of the approach of its trains at crossings makes out a prima facie case of negligence. De Atley v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 224, 112 P 76 (1910); Sprague v. N. Pac. Ry., 40 M 481, 107 P 412 (1910); Hunter v. Mont. Cent. Ry., 22 M 525, 57 P 140 (1899). See Kelley v. John R. Daily Co., 56 M 63, 181 P 326 (1919).

Obstruction of Watercourses:

A railroad that quitclaimed land including the right-of-way across an irrigation ditch was not relieved of its statutory duty to maintain the cement drop, siphon, and wooden flume for the benefit of lower landowners who depended on the water. Harrer v. N. Pac. Ry., 147 M 130, 410 P2d 713 (1966).

A "watercourse" within the meaning of 69-14-532 (now repealed) is a channel cut by running water with well-defined banks through which water flows for a substantial period of each year. Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

Under the common law a railroad company was, and under 69-14-532 (now repealed) is, required to exercise the skill and knowledge ordinarily practiced in the construction of an embankment used with a bridge over a watercourse, and to leave sufficient openings for the passage of water known to flow in the stream in the time of usual freshets, and such as experience shows might occur at any time. Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

Under the common-law rule of liability for the obstruction of surface waters in force in this state in the absence of statute providing otherwise, the defendant railway company was not liable for damage caused to the plaintiff's property by surface waters which were dammed up by its embankment and for the escape of which it had failed to construct culverts or openings. Its duty in this respect was confined by 69-14-532 (now repealed) and 69-14-240 to providing outlets for streams, watercourses, etc., intersected by the embankment. The plaintiff's evidence failed to establish that the invading waters were conveyed through a natural watercourse. Le Munyon v. Gallatin Valley Ry., 60 M 517, 199 P 915 (1921).

Publication and Notice: The Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) is not required, when acting upon a petition or application for reduced rail rates, to cause publication and to give notice pursuant to section 72-117, R.C.M. 1947 (replaced by 69-14-305 through 69-14-310, all now repealed), and section 72-118, R.C.M. 1947 (pertinent parts replaced in 69-14-311 and 69-14-312, both now repealed), in advance of any action on such petition or prior to issuance of any authorization thereon. State ex rel. Mont. Motor Tariff Bureau, Inc. v. Smith, 144 M 110, 394 P2d 758 (1964).

Effect of Specific Indemnity Clause in Lease: A specific indemnity clause in a lease agreement between a railroad and a lessee which provided that the lessee would indemnify the railroad for claims, "whether due or not due to the negligence" of the railroad, was not invalid as applied to action against railroad for injuries allegedly received because of a violation of 69-14-562 (now repealed) by the railroad. Ryan Merc. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 294 F2d 629 (9th Cir. 1961), affirming Ryan Merc. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 186 F. Supp. 660 (D.C. Mont. 1960).

Obligation to Review: The fact that the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) ruled it had no jurisdiction to act on the railroad's petition to discontinue service did not authorize the railroad to discontinue service without the Commission's consent. The order was subject to review, and the obligation to have it reviewed rested on the railway company as a necessary step to procure consent for abandonment of service. Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 130 M 250, 298 P2d 1093 (1956), appeal dismissed in Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 352 US 904, 1 L Ed 2d 114, 77 S Ct 146 (1956).

Change in Rates: Advantage, preference, or discrimination standing alone is not sufficient justification for interference with intrastate rates. It is only undue or unreasonable advantage, preference, or prejudice or undue, unreasonable, or unjust discrimination that justifies intervention by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Mont. Citizens' Freight Rate Ass'n v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 128 M 127, 271 P2d 1024 (1954).

Disparity Between Interstate Rates and Intrastate Rates: The state board (now the Public Service Commission) has no authority to grant an automatic raise in intrastate rates simply because the Interstate Commerce Commission had granted a raise in interstate rates. The mere disparity between the interstate rates and the intrastate rates does not compel the state board to grant an increase so as to remove the disparity. Mont. Citizens' Freight Rate Ass'n v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 128 M 127, 271 P2d 1024 (1954).

Appellant Review: The findings of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) are by law considered prima facie just, reasonable, and proper. Courts should ascribe to them the strength given to the judgments of a tribunal appointed by law and informed by experience. The Board's conclusion is subject to review, but when supported by evidence it is accepted as final. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 126 M 568, 255 P2d 346 (1953), explained in Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 130 M 250, 298 P2d 1093 (1956).

Requiring Continuation of Service at a Loss: The fact that two trains were operated at a loss was not, standing alone, sufficient to justify discontinuance of the trains in question. The requirement that a particular service be rendered at a loss does not make a service confiscatory and thereby an unconstitutional taking of property. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 126 M 568, 255 P2d 346 (1953), explained in Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 130 M 250, 298 P2d 1093 (1956).

Federal Court Jurisdiction: A three-judge District Court was held to have jurisdiction of a suit by a railroad to enjoin Montana Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) from enforcing orders for continuation of operation of a certain of railroad's trains, because under this statute such review constituted exercise of a judicial function. Great N. Ry. v. Nagle, 16 F. Supp. 532 (D.C. Mont. 1936).

Liability for Flood Damage:

A railroad maintaining a bridge across a stream had the duty of ordinary care for protection of life and property along the course of the stream. The mere fact that flood occurring in valley was unprecedented in its volume and extent did not relieve the railroad of the responsibility to maintain a proper bridge across the stream. Whether it was negligent in failing to do so in anticipation of the flood and whether negligence was a proximate cause of the plaintiff's damages were questions for the jury. N. Pac. Ry. v. Wagner, 86 F2d 63 (9th Cir. 1936).

Liability for flood damage attaches only upon a showing of a railroad's negligence. When a railroad company constructs and maintains a grade across a watercourse, with proper culverts in conformity with statutory requirements and so as to provide for the passage of waters reasonably to be expected in times of usual freshets or such as are unusual but which experience shows might occur at any time, its construction or maintenance is not negligence per se. A railroad is not an insurer against flood damage. Peel v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry., 94 M 334, 22 P2d 617 (1933); Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

Restoration of Stream:

Instruction that "the law contemplates some variation from the original condition of the stream and allows some discretion in the engineers" was proper on the issue of restoring a stream. Wibaux Realty Co. v. N. Pac. Ry., 101 M 126, 54 P2d 1175 (1935).

The failure of a railroad to restore a stream crossed while constructing its road constitutes actionable negligence. The duty to restore does not require that the full width of the channel be left open for passage of water, but it may be fulfilled by widening it and deepening it to carry as much water as it did originally. The duty may not be broadened by the courts. Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

The usefulness of or "franchise" of a nonnavigable stream which 69-14-532 (now repealed) requires a railroad to restore is its use for irrigation purposes and drainage. Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

When a railroad company, after exercise of reasonable care in the construction of an embankment and bridge in crossing a stream, thereafter narrows the opening left for the passage of water or subsequently discovers that the opening is insufficient to carry away waters which may reasonably be anticipated, it must make suitable provision for such water within a reasonable time. Otherwise, the duty it owes under 69-14-532 (now repealed) to restore the stream to its original usefulness is not discharged. Heckaman v. N. Pac. Ry., 93 M 363, 20 P2d 258 (1933).

Authority to Lay Out Road:

The mere fact that one has made substantial improvements along a railroad in the expectation of its continued operation does not burden the railroad company with an implied obligation to operate. Briggs v. Great N. Ry., 92 M 463, 15 P2d 840 (1932).

A railroad company, in projecting a route through a town, had staked a line through the center of one of its streets 80 feet wide and caused it to be mapped and subsequently approved by its executive officer. In an action by a rival company looking to the condemnation of a strip of land 60 feet wide immediately adjoining one side of the street, the evidence was held insufficient to sustain a finding that such strip had already been appropriated by the first company for a public use of equal necessity, namely, for right-of-way purposes. Great Falls & Teton County Ry. v. Ganong, 48 M 43, 136 P 391 (1913).

The language of 69-14-532 (now repealed), "not exceeding in width one hundred feet on each side of its center line", is not a grant but a limitation. No obligation is imposed upon any company to take the full amount permitted, and in the absence of any necessity it cannot do so, either as against the will of the owner or the necessities of a competing road. Great Falls & Teton County Ry. v. Ganong, 48 M 43, 136 P 391 (1913).

Rates Not to Be Changed Retroactively: Both the Public Service Commission and the courts lack power to invalidate retroactively established rates and thus permit recovery of overcharge or undercharge by shipper or carrier. Although ruling in Doney case, cited below, allowing reparations when Commission subsequently changes rates, was in error, it was binding until overruled. Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), overruling contrary holding in Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), and followed in Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 216, 7 P2d 927 (1932). No federal right was infringed upon by trial court's adherence to Doney or Supreme Court's application of rule to past cases. Great N. Ry. v. Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co., 287 US 358, 77 L Ed 360, 53 S Ct 145 (1932), affirming Sunburst decision above.

Voluntary Rate Reduction: Voluntary reduction of a rate by a carrier, with consent of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission), does not make the prior rate unlawful, unreasonable, or discriminatory or the basis of an action for damages. Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932).

Procedure:

Certiorari did not lie to annul an order of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) directing removal of station facilities from one town to another because the relator had a sufficient remedy under 69-14-402 (now repealed) by bringing an action in the District Court to determine whether the order was just and reasonable. State ex rel. Mahood v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 73 M 1, 234 P 834 (1925).

A shipper, considering himself aggrieved by a rate fixed by the Montana Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) because unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory, must proceed under 69-14-402 (now repealed) if he desires to have it declared so. When no rate has been fixed or the one established is considered excessive, he must apply to the Commission for investigation and determination of his contention under 69-14-114 (now repealed) before he can maintain an action in the courts. If his case is predicated upon freight charges made in excess of those fixed and established by the Commission, his complaint must so allege and the action must be brought within 12 months from the date of payment, under 69-14-322 (since amended, now repealed). Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 216, 7 P2d 927 (1932), and Great N. Ry. v. Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co., 287 US 358, 77 L Ed 360, 53 S Ct 145 (1932).

Complaint: Because the presumption obtains that the Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) fixed and established reasonable rates in obedience to section 72-116, R.C.M. 1947 (replaced by 69-14-301, now repealed, 69-14-302, now repealed, and 69-14-321, now repealed), and that the rate as established is in accordance with the approved and published tariff, a complaint which fails to allege that freight charges were not in accordance with such tariff is defective. Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 216, 7 P2d 927 (1932), and Great N. Ry. v. Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co., 287 US 358, 77 L Ed 360, 53 S Ct 145 (1932).

Established Tariff — Effect of Statute: A tariff duty filed and published by the Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) has the force and effect of a statute and is binding alike upon the shipper and carrier until modified by the tribunal authorized to change it. Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), *Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Exclusive Remedy: The remedies prescribed by Montana carriers law for the recovery of damages caused by the exaction of discriminatory or unreasonable freight charges are exclusive, and a complaint based upon the common-law remedy and drawn in entire disregard of the provisions of the statute did not state a cause of action, the common-law remedies having been superseded by that law. Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 216, 7 P2d 927 (1932), and Great N. Ry. v. Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co., 287 US 358, 77 L Ed 360, 53 S Ct 145 (1932).

Hearing Complaint: A shipper, considering himself aggrieved by a rate fixed by the Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) because unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory, must proceed under 69-14-402 (now repealed), if he desires to have it declared so. When no rate has been fixed or the one established is considered excessive, he must apply to the Commission for investigation and determination of his contention, under section 72-118, R.C.M. 1947 (replaced by 69-14-114, now repealed, 69-14-301, now repealed, 69-14-311, now repealed, and 69-14-312, now repealed), before he can maintain an action in the courts. If his case is predicated upon freight charges made in excess of those fixed and established by the Commission, his complaint must so allege and the action must be brought within 12 months from the date of payment, under 69-14-322 (since amended and now repealed). Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 216, 7 P2d 927 (1932), and Great N. Ry. v. Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co., 287 US 358, 77 L Ed 360, 53 S Ct 145 (1932).

Injunction: The District Court has no power over any rate order of the Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) except by final judgment. This necessarily deprives a railroad, as well as a shipper, of the right to invoke and prohibits the court from issuing a preliminary injunction in its behalf. The District Court has, however, jurisdiction to use the provisional remedy of injunction in limine to suspend an order made by the Commission requiring a railroad company to operate a local passenger train each way daily between designated stations, pending final determination of action for review. State ex rel. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs v. District Court, 53 M 229, 163 P 115 (1917), explained in Mtn. States Power Co. v. P.S.C., 299 US 167, 81 L Ed 99, 57 S Ct 169 (1936).

Number of Directors: Section 69-14-501 (now repealed) fixes five as the minimum number of the directors of a railroad corporation. Great Falls & Teton County Ry. v. Ganong, 48 M 54, 136 P 390 (1913).

Filing of Charter or Articles: If a foreign railroad company, engaged as a common carrier of passengers between different states, seeks to engage in interstate commerce in this state, buys or is about to buy out another railroad, and seeks to avail itself of the benefits of 69-14-514 (now repealed), which requires the filing of its charter or articles of incorporation with the Secretary of State, it is not obliged to pay a fee, under 2-6-103 (now repealed), for the filing of articles of incorporation, on the basis of a percentage of its entire capital stock. The exaction of such a fee would be an unauthorized burden upon interstate commerce. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry. v. Swindlehurst, 47 M 119, 130 P 966 (1913). See State ex rel. Gen. Elec. Co. v. Alderson, 49 M 29, 140 P 82 (1914).

Street Railroads Not Affected: Section 69-14-555 (now repealed) has no application to street railroads. Helena Light & Ry. v. Helena, 47 M 18, 130 P 446 (1913); Daly Bank & Trust Co. v. Great Falls Street Ry., 32 M 298, 80 P 252 (1905); Cent. Trust Co. v. Warren, 121 F 323 (1903); Mass. Loan & Trust Co. v. Hamilton, 88 F 588 (9th Cir. 1898).

Eminent Domain: The provisions of 69-14-531 (now repealed), section 15-810, R.C.M. 1947 (now repealed), and section 72-205, R.C.M. 1947 (69-14-532, 69-14-533, 69-14-539, 69-14-552, 69-14-558, and 69-14-561, all sections now repealed), are exceedingly liberal, but they must be interpreted in the light of section 93-9905, R.C.M. 1947 (70-30-111), and the rule of necessity must be determinative of the right to take in each instance. N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912).

Construction: As a statute may be remedial in part and penal in part for purposes of construction, the penalty clause of 69-14-303 (now repealed) should be construed according to the fair import of its terms, with a view to effectuating its object, as required by section 94-101, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), but the part prohibiting unjust discrimination in charging for transportation should be liberally construed with a view to carrying out the legislative intention. John v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 18, 111 P 632 (1910).

Purpose: The purpose of 69-14-303 (now repealed) was not only to benefit the railroad companies by driving the ticket brokers out of business but to provide against loss to the purchaser of an unused ticket by requiring that it should be redeemed by the seller. It was enacted that the railroad companies should themselves be prohibited from indulging in kindred practices of pernicious discrimination between persons of the same class. John v. N. Pac. Ry., 42 M 18, 111 P 632 (1910).

Power to Acquire Realty: Under 69-14-532 (now repealed) and 69-14-553 (now repealed), a railroad may acquire any land necessary for the construction and maintenance of its road and its adjuncts and appendages by purchase or by voluntary grant or donation, subject only to the limitations that the right-of-way not exceed 200 feet in width, except where a greater width is required for excavations and embankments, and that the land for excavations, embankments, sidetracks, turnouts, shops, etc., not exceed the amount necessary for such uses and purposes. State ex rel. Bloomington Land & Live Stock Co. v. District Court, 34 M 535, 88 P 44 (1906). See N. Pac. Ry. v. McAdow, 44 M 547, 121 P 473 (1912); Postal Telegraph-Cable Co. of Am. v. Nolan, 53 M 129, 162 P 169 (1916).

Contributory Negligence: A railroad's failure to obey statute does not excuse citizen from use of at least ordinary diligence and prudence. Sprague v. N. Pac. Ry., 40 M 481, 107 P 412 (1910); Hunter v. Mont. Cent. Ry., 22 M 525, 57 P 140 (1899).

Consolidation Defined by Section — Leases: Section 69-14-512 (now repealed) is not merely a legislative declaration of the manner of consolidation but serves as a definition as well. The provisions of section 72-223, R.C.M. 1947 (codified in part as 69-14-513, now repealed) limiting the right of railroad companies to lease their roads to one another or to other companies that are not parallel or competing roads were repealed by section 72-229, R.C.M. 1947 (69-14-514, now repealed). State ex rel. Nolan v. Mont. Ry., 21 M 221, 53 P 623 (1898).

Parallel and Competing Roads:

Section 72-229, R.C.M. 1947 (69-14-514, now repealed), repealed section 72-223, R.C.M. 1947 (codified in part as 69-14-513, now repealed), insofar as section 72-223, R.C.M. 1947, limited the right of railroad companies to lease their roads to one another or to other companies that are not parallel or competing roads. State ex rel. Nolan v. Mont. Ry., 21 M 221, 53 P 623 (1898).

Under 69-14-514 (now repealed), one railroad company can lease its road to a parallel and competing road for a term of 10 years, and such lease is not a consolidation of the two roads within the meaning of the state constitution. Section 69-14-514 is to be read as merely authorizing the amalgamation or consolidation of railroads not forbidden to amalgamate or consolidate by the state constitution. State ex rel. Nolan v. Mont. Ry., 21 M 221, 53 P 623 (1898).

Injunction Against Interference With Competitor: When one railroad company, being duly authorized, has built its roadbed and obtained its right-of-way and grounds for station buildings, machine shops, sidetracks, etc., through a defile or canyon, the court will grant an injunction in its favor restraining another railroad corporation, authorized to build to the same point, from going upon or interfering with the track or right-of-way of the corporation first in possession until an adjustment of rights can be made by the court under the general railroad law. Mont. Cent. Ry. v. Helena & Red Mtn. R.R., 6 M 416, 12 P 916 (1887).

Part 1Role of Commission — Penalties*Part Case Notes

Telemetry Requirement Unconstitutional: The requirement that certain trains be equipped with end-of-train telemetry devices was preempted by the Federal Railroad Safety Act of 1970, 45 U.S.C. 421 through 444 (see 1993 amendment). Burlington N. RR Co. v. St., CV 91-38-H-CCL (D.C. Mont. 1992).

Authority of State to Regulate Railroads on Indian Reservation: The court, citing White Mountain Apache Tribe v. Bracker, 448 US 136, 65 L Ed 2d 665, 10 S Ct 2578 (1980), held that the proper test to determine whether the state had regulatory jurisdiction over a railroad operated by non-Indians on an Indian reservation involved balancing state versus federal/tribal interests in the particular circumstances. It found that the state of Montana had exercised comprehensive regulatory authority over all railroads in the state, including on-reservation lines, for over 70 years, whereas there had been no federal or tribal regulatory action for nearly 100 years. The court therefore held that the state's interest predominated and that the state Public Service Commission had jurisdiction. Burlington N. RR. v. Dept. of Pub. Serv. Regulation, 221 M 497, 720 P2d 267, 43 St. Rep. 1005 (1986).

Discontinuance of Service:

An order of the Board of Railroad Commissioners (now the Public Service Commission) that there should be no curtailment or discontinuance of passenger train service between points within the state except when authorized by Commission (now P.S.C.) is valid under the statute and in line with authority stating that a public utility may not discontinue its service without approval of the Public Service Commission. Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 130 M 250, 298 P2d 1093 (1956), appeal dismissed in 352 US 904, 1 L Ed 2d 114, 77 S Ct 146 (1956).

Railroad was not authorized to discontinue service without permission of commission (now the Public Service Commission), although in an earlier petition by the railroad to discontinue service the Commission had ruled it had no jurisdiction. That order was subject to review, and the obligation to have it reviewed rested on the railway company as a necessary step to procure consent of Board of Railroad Commissioners (now P.S.C.) for abandonment of service. Great N. Ry. v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 130 M 250, 298 P2d 1093 (1956), appeal dismissed in 352 US 904, 1 L Ed 2d 114, 77 S Ct 146 (1956).

Change in Rates: Advantage, preference, or discrimination standing alone is not sufficient justification for interference with interstate rates. It is only undue or unreasonable advantage, preference, or prejudice or undue, unreasonable, or unjust discrimination that justifies intervention by the Interstate Commerce Commission. (See 1997 amendment.) Mont. Citizens' Freight Rate Ass'n v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 128 M 127, 271 P2d 1024 (1954).

Disparity Between Interstate Rates and Intrastate Rates: The state board (now the Public Service Commission) has no authority to grant an automatic raise in intrastate rates simply because the Interstate Commerce Commission had granted a raise in interstate rates. The mere disparity between the interstate rates and the intrastate rates does not compel the state board to grant an increase so as to remove the disparity. (See 1997 amendment.) Mont. Citizens' Freight Rate Ass'n v. Bd. of R.R. Comm'rs, 128 M 127, 271 P2d 1024 (1954).

Hearing Complaint: A shipper, considering himself aggrieved by a rate fixed by the Montana Railroad Commission (now the Public Service Commission) because unjust, unreasonable, or discriminatory, must proceed under 69-14-402 (now repealed) if he desires to have it declared so.

When no rate has been fixed or the one established is considered excessive, he must apply to the Commission for investigation and determination of his contention under 69-14-402 before he can maintain an action in the courts. If his case is predicated upon freight charges made in excess of those fixed and established by the Commission, his complaint must so allege and the action must be brought within 12 months from the date of payment, under 69-14-322 (since amended). (See 1997 amendment.) Doney v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 209, 199 P 432 (1921), explained in Mont. Horse Prod. v. Great N. Ry., 91 M 194, 7 P2d 919 (1932), *Sunburst Oil & Ref. Co. v. Great N. Part 2

Requirements for Railroads

Part Case Notes

State Law Requiring Caboose Preempted by Federal Regulation: The provision in 69-14-232 (now repealed) requiring a caboose on all trains more than 2,000 feet in length was preempted by Federal Railroad Administration regulations permitting the use of telemetry devices as a substitute for visual inspection at the rear of trains. (See 1997 amendment.) Burlington N. RR Co. v. Mont., 880 F2d 1104 (9th Cir. 1989).

Statute Requiring Railroad to Maintain Freight Offices Upheld: Because it regulates economic activity, the standard for judging the constitutionality of 69-14-202 (now repealed) is the same under the Due Process, Equal Protection, or Commerce clauses. It will be upheld if it bears a rational relationship to a legitimate state interest. It is generally agreed that legitimate state interest is defined by the state's need to ensure that carriers serve the public need and necessity. The public convenience and necessity may require a railroad to provide adequate and suitable facilities for the convenience of the communities served by the railroad. When enacted in 1905, the predecessor of 69-14-202 was designed to serve the public convenience and necessity and was, therefore, valid. Burlington Northern did not meet its burden of establishing that the Legislature acted irrationally when it amended 69-14-202 in 1969. Therefore, the statute was upheld. Burlington N. R.R. v. Dept. of Public Service, 763 F2d 1106 (9th Cir. 1985).

Admissibility Dependent on Nature of Treatise: Learned treatises are permissible for use in cross-examination of an expert if the treatise is "established as a reliable authority by the testimony or admission of the witness or by other expert testimony or by judicial notice". Here, a treatise on design of grade railway-highway crossings was properly used to test the knowledge of an expert witness in cross-examination. Another treatise concerning the visibility and audibility of trains approaching crossings was properly held to be inadmissible, as it was merely advisory in nature. Treatises may be admitted upon the foundation that they: (1) show what is feasible to the jury; or (2) show what the defendant knew or should have known about safety precautions. Runkle v. Burlington N. Ry., 188 M 286, 613 P2d 982, 37 St. Rep. 995 (1980).

Operation and Effect: Section 69-14-207 (now repealed) merely declares just what the rule of law applicable in an ordinary negligence action would be in the absence of the statute. Burles v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 49 M 129, 140 P 513 (1914).

Pullman Cars: A person who enters a train consisting wholly of Pullman cars without paying Pullman car fare in addition to the purchase of a regular first-class ticket, may, if he refuses to pay such fare and if other trains have been provided for his carriage, be ejected, if done without unnecessary force. It is a passenger's duty to comply with all reasonable rules of the railway company. Doherty v. N. Pac. Ry., 43 M 294, 115 P 401 (1911).

Reduction of Fare:

In the absence of statutory prohibition, a railway company may sell, for a reduced fare, a particular form of ticket whereby its liability is restricted and its obligations curtailed. Miley v. N. Pac. Ry., 41 M 51, 108 P 5 (1910).

One who purchased a railroad ticket at a reduced rate to a certain station on defendant's line and boarded a train which did not stop at the point to which his ticket called for transportation, having failed to pay the regular fare, was not one of the class of persons for whose benefit 69-14-209 (now repealed) was enacted and therefore could not maintain an action for the penalty therein provided. Miley v. N. Pac. Ry., 41 M 51, 108 P 5 (1910).

Damages: In the absence of a special contract limiting the carrier's liability, the provisions of 69-14-210 (now repealed) would authorize the recovery of the actual value of the baggage lost. Rose v. N. Pac. Ry., 35 M 70, 88 P 767 (1907).

Constitutionality: Section 69-14-211(1) (now repealed) is constitutional. It is in the nature of a police regulation and not a provision for revenue purposes. St. v. Bernheim, 19 M 512, 49 P 441 (1897).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Glass Windshield Required: A railroad may not remove the safety glass windshield from a track motor car and substitute for it a canvas windshield. 28 A.G. Op. 65 (1960).

Interpretation of "Canopy or Top": If the climate is such as to require side curtains or similar protective devices for the complete protection of occupants of track motor cars from inclement weather, track motor cars must be equipped with such devices, in addition to a canopy or top. 28 A.G. Part 6

Railroad Highway Crossings

Duty of Driver to Stop:

A motorist who was killed when his car hit a train at a railroad crossing was negligent in that he did not comply with the statutory mandate to bring his vehicle to a complete stop not less than 10 or more than 100 feet from a railroad crossing when a train is within sight or hearing or if crossing and view is not clear, full, and distinct. O'Brien v. Great N. Ry., 148 M 429, 421 P2d 710 (1966).

A railroad has a right to expect motorists to approach a railroad crossing with caution and is not bound to protect against the negligence of a motorist. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

Section 72-164, R.C.M. 1947 (now 61-8-349) does not apply to trains that are not approaching a crossing but are actually occupying it. Broberg v. N. Pac. Ry., 120 M 280, 182 P2d 851 (1947).

Section 61-8-349, requiring a motorist, when the view of railroad crossing is obscure, to stop not less than 10 or more than 100 feet from the intersection of the crossing and the highway, does not impose on a driver a duty to stop within such distance from a grade crossing when the driver is not familiar with the location and when he cannot see the crossing because of peculiar conditions. Broberg v. N. Pac. Ry., 120 M 280, 182 P2d 851 (1947).

Contributory Negligence:

A railroad was not liable for the death of the plaintiff's son, even though it had failed to put out fuses at time when the car struck the train, because driver's view of the crossing was unobstructed, reflector signs warning of the crossing were in well-kept condition, and there were no other extrahazardous conditions. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

Knowledge or lack of knowledge of a custom to warn or of the fact that customary protective signals have been abandoned or are not in operating condition has an important bearing on the question of contributory negligence, but it does not affect the question of primary negligence. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

A truck driver could not recover for a collision with a train when he could have seen or heard the train if he had taken proper precautions. Monforton v. N. Pac. Ry., 138 M 191, 355 P2d 501 (1960).

Duty of Guest of Driver:

The negligence of a driver in failing to stop at a railroad crossing, as required by 61-8-349, cannot be imputed to his passenger. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965), followed in McGinnis v. Hand, 1999 MT 9, 293 M 72, 972 P2d 1126, 56 St. Rep. 39 (1999).

This rule does not absolve a passenger from taking reasonable precautions for his own safety. Grant v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 78 M 97, 252 P 382 (1927).

Hazardous Conditions: Railroad crossings are not made extrahazardous by the number of vehicles passing over crossing, dark-colored road surfaces tending to absorb vehicle's lights, or setting out of fusees by railroad. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

Motorist Not Absolved From Using Reasonable Care:

A railroad crossing is as a matter of law a place of known danger and one is bound by law to recognize it as such. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

One of the highest obligations of railroad operators is to protect the public at highway crossings. Watchmen and warning devices are required by law and installed for the primary purpose of warning the traveling public of approaching trains or cars, but the absence of such warning devices does not excuse the negligence of the highway traveler who is charged with reasonable care in the premises. Incret v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. Ry., 107 M 394, 86 P2d 12 (1938).

Railroad's Duty: The infrequent use of a railroad crossing may affect the degree of care required to be taken by the train in approaching the crossing, but when the train is on the crossing, that is in itself a sufficient warning of danger to the traveling public and a railroad is not negligent in failing to sound a whistle or bell, place warning lights along a train, or to provide a flagman to warn traffic. Hernandez v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 144 M 585, 398 P2d 953 (1965).

"Obscure" Defined: The word "obscure" as used in section 72-164, R.C.M. 1947 (now 61-8-349) means "not clear, full or distinct". Broberg v. N. Pac. Ry., 120 M 280, 182 P2d 851 (1947).

Outside Corporate Limits of Municipality: Crossing that was partly within city limits was not "outside" limits within meaning of section 72-164, R.C.M. 1947 (now 61-8-349), thus an instruction on the statutory duty to stop at a crossing outside city limits under certain conditions was inapplicable and the failure of a jury to follow the instruction did not require reversal of the judgment. Jarvella v. N. Pac. Ry., 101 M 102, 53 P2d 446 (1935).

69-14-602. Construction and maintenance of railroad crossings outside of incorporated cities and towns.Case Notes

Duty of Railroad to Construct and Maintain Safe Railroad Crossing — Summary Dismissal of Liability Case Against County for Road Construction Proper: The North Alaska road crossing was built in the early 1920s through the cooperative efforts of the county and the railroad. The crossing was entirely on railroad property, and the railroad allowed access to the county over the years to maintain the road and to erect signs on the railroad's right-of-way. Fisch was injured in 1998 when his dump truck was struck by a train at the crossing. The railroad sought to ascribe liability to the county for negligent design and construction of the crossing. The county denied all allegations of negligence, and the District Court granted summary judgment to the county on the issue of liability. The railroad appealed on grounds that ARM 18.6.311 required the county to construct and maintain the roadway through the crossing in a safe manner. The Supreme Court disagreed. The clear intent of the administrative rule was to limit application of the rule to projects arising from the state's allocation of federal funds made available to improve the safety of railroad crossings and did not address road-rail alignment or crossing design. The historical ambiguity of whether the railroad or the county chose the exact location for the crossing raised no genuine issue of material fact and was irrelevant to the question of which entity had the duty to construct and maintain the crossing. Rather, under this section, that duty was statutorily assigned to and rested clearly with the railroad. Thus, summary dismissal of the liability claim against the county was proper. Fisch v. Mont. Rail Link, Inc., 2003 MT 76, 315 M 13, 67 P3d 267 (2003).

Admissibility Dependent on Nature of Treatise: Learned treatises are permissible for use in cross-examination of an expert if the treatise is "established as a reliable authority by the testimony or admission of the witness or by other expert testimony or by judicial notice". Here, a treatise on design of grade railway-highway crossings was properly used to test the knowledge of an expert witness in cross-examination. Another treatise concerning the visibility and audibility of trains approaching crossings was properly held to be inadmissible, as it was merely advisory in nature. Treatises may be admitted upon the foundation that they: (1) show what is feasible to the jury; or (2) show what the defendant knew or should have known about safety precautions. Runkle v. Burlington N. Ry., 188 M 286, 613 P2d 982, 37 St. Rep. 995 (1980).

Jury Instruction on Negligence as Matter of Law — Effect of Department Manual: Plaintiff contended that it was error to refuse to instruct the jury that the state and Burlington Northern were negligent as a matter of law in failing to place signals on the railroad crossing where the accident occurred in conformity with the Department of Highway's (now Department of Transportation's) Manual on Traffic Control Devices. The manual, however, does not have equal dignity with statutory law. Before the defendants can be charged with negligence in violating the manual, it must first be determined: (1) that the crossing was extrahazardous; and (2) that failure to install additional warning signals was the proximate cause of defendant's injuries. These were questions of fact for the jury since conflicting evidence was offered at trial, so no error was committed by failing to give the requested instructions. Penn v. Burlington N. Ry., Inc., 185 M 223, 605 P2d 600, 37 St. Rep. 93 (1980).

Duty of Railroad to Construct and Maintain Safe Railroad Crossing — Summary Dismissal of Liability Case Against County for Road Construction Proper: The North Alaska road crossing was built in the early 1920s through the cooperative efforts of the county and the railroad. Locomotives — Safety Devices: The U.S. Congress has not preempted the field of warning devices on railroad locomotives, and a jury trying a railroad crossing accident case should be allowed to decide whether a railroad has a common-law duty to equip its locomotives with various warning devices. Henry v. District Court, 198 M 8, 645 P2d 1350, 39 St. Rep 430 (1982).

Locomotives — Standards of Care — Writ of Supervisory Control: Petition for Writ of Supervisory Control, brought by plaintiff suing railroad in crossing accident case, was granted where District Court incorrectly decided that federal law preempted the field of warning devices on locomotives and that the jury could thus not deliberate on the question of whether railroad had the duty to equip its locomotives with devices other than those required by federal law. Henry v. District Court, 198 M 8, 645 P2d 1350, 39 St. Rep. 430 (1982).

Proceedings in Another Court: Railroad sued in railroad crossing accident case moved for a stay of state court proceedings, contending that there was a substantial risk that the state decision would conflict with a federal circuit court decision; that the issue was a federal question of congressional preemption of an interstate commerce matter and thus more appropriately decided by the federal courts; that the risk of conflicting decisions would create a dilemma for the railroad in operating its trains in Montana and other states; and that the interests of justice, judicial economy, and good court administration required a stay. The Supreme Court denied a stay because there was in fact no preemption question and thus no substantial risk of conflicting decisions; the railroad did not sufficiently show that a great hardship would befall it were a stay not granted; the railroad did not satisfy the court that the hardship on it would be less than that on plaintiff; and it was very doubtful that judicial economy would be adversely affected by refusing a stay. Henry v. District Court, 198 M 8, 645 P2d 1350, 39 St. Rep. 430 (1982).

1993 Amendment: Chapter 363 in (1), near beginning of first sentence after "corporations", substituted "shall build" for "must make", after "maintain a" deleted "good and", and at end inserted exception clause and inserted second sentence allowing landowner or lessee to construct, maintain, or repair fence subject to approval and reimbursement by railroad corporation; near beginning of (2), after "not", substituted "build" for "make" and after "cars" inserted "because of the lack of a fence or maintenance of a fence"; inserted (3) allowing landowner or lessee to file complaint with Public Service Commission for fence in disrepair, requiring Public Service Commission to notify railroad corporation responsible for fence and to inform County Attorney that railroad corporation was notified of fence, requiring railroad corporation to repair fence within 30 days or be fined, requiring County Attorney to prosecute civil action against railroad for failure to repair fence, and requiring fine to be deposited in county general fund; and made minor changes in style.

Sufficiency of Complaint:

When injury to livestock was not occasioned by reason of the nonexistence of a fence enclosing defendant railway's tracks but, as alleged in the complaint, was caused by its employees in driving them away from the tracks into an enclosure where there was no water, the complaint insofar as it relied upon failure to fence did not state a cause of action under this section. Fabert v. N. Pac. Ry., 77 M 446, 251 P 546 (1926).

Under this section, a railroad which fails to maintain sufficient cattle guards is not liable for the value of livestock killed or maimed on its right-of-way unless the complaint alleges and the proof shows that the killing or maiming was done by its engine or cars, and the absence of such an allegation renders the complaint insufficient. Hunt v. White Sulphur Springs & Yellowstone Park Ry., 63 M 508, 208 P 917 (1922).

In an action against a railroad for damages sustained by the plaintiff in killed and injured cattle because of a railroad's negligence in failing to see that a private gate, which had been constructed by it in its right-of-way fence for plaintiff's convenience, was not left open, plaintiff need not allege or prove that defendant knew or should have known that the gate had been left open. Scheffer v. Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Ry., 53 M 302, 163 P 565 (1917).

In an action against a railroad for killing of livestock, it is necessary that the complaint allege plaintiff's ownership or possession of land along or through which the railroad runs, and that the stock was killed at such place. Metlen v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 33 M 45, 81 P 737 (1905); Beaudin v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 31 M 238, 78 P 303 (1904).

When, in an action against a railroad company for killing livestock, the only evidence was that the animals were found near the track, one dead and the other injured so badly that it had to be killed, and no showing was made as to the character of the injuries except that one had its legs broken, such evidence was insufficient to show that the animals were killed by an engine or cars of defendant. Beaudin v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 31 M 238, 78 P 303 (1904).

No allegation of defendant's negligence in the operation of its trains is necessary to render it liable under statutes of this character. Beaudin v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 31 M 238, 78 P 303 (1904).

Highway Crossings: This section, making it incumbent upon railroads to maintain good and legal fences on both sides of their track and property, impliedly excepts highway crossings, at which, however, they must install cattle guards made effective by wing fences on both sides of the highway. Bowers v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 61 M 200, 201 P 825 (1921).

Applicability to Station Grounds:

Railroad tracks at the depot and station grounds where passengers and freight are received and discharged, where employees are required to pass continuously back and forth, and where public convenience requires free and unobstructed access are impliedly excepted from the requirements of fencing made by this section. Bowers v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 61 M 200, 201 P 825 (1921).

No duty devolves upon a railroad to fence at a station under statutes of this nature. Beaudin v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 31 M 238, 78 P 303 (1904).

Not Applicable to Sidings or Spurs: Under this section, a railroad is not required to fence its tracks at spurs or sidings and is liable for injuries to livestock only at such places where its actual negligence is established. Knop v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 57 M 288, 187 P 1020 (1920).

Duty Relative to Private Crossing and Gate: When, for the convenience of a ranch owner, a railroad constructed a private crossing and a gate in its right-of-way, the railroad was, under this section, bound to see that it was not left open by persons passing through it. Failure in this respect constitutes negligence per se. Scheffer v. Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Ry., 53 M 302, 163 P 565 (1917).

Common-Law Duty to Fence: The duty to fence railway tracks may exist, not by virtue of the fencing statute but because of the railway company's common-law obligation to exercise ordinary care to furnish its employees with a reasonably safe place in which to work. Whether the duty does exist depends upon the presence of circumstances that may render such precaution necessary. Alexander v. Great N. Ry., 51 M 565, 154 P 914 (1916), appeal dismissed in Great N. Ry. v. Alexander, 246 US 276, 62 L Ed 713, 38 S Ct 237 (1918).

No Liability for Death of Child for Failure to Fence: The failure of a railroad to maintain a fence along its tracks does not render it liable on that ground for the death of a child who entered upon the unfenced track and was struck by a train. Nixon v. Mont., Wyo., & SW. Ry., 50 M 95, 145 P 8 (1914).

69-14-707. Liability for negligent destruction of domestic animals.

Case Notes

Injury to Livestock at Fenced Station Ground: In the absence of willfulness or negligence in handling their trains, railroads are not liable for injuring or killing livestock that stray into their depot or station grounds. A plaintiff who conceded that locomotive engineer was not negligent in handling the train which killed a horse for which damages were sought was not entitled to recover. Bowers v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 61 M 200, 201 P 825 (1921).

Evidence:

When the presumption of negligence on the part of a railroad company in the killing of livestock by one of its trains, relied on by plaintiff, is confronted with testimony of its train operatives that there was not any negligence on their part, the result is a conflict of evidence resolvable by the jury, and a directed verdict in favor of defendant was properly refused. Johnson v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 52 M 73, 155 P 971 (1916).

In an action against a railroad under this section, proof of an injury to an animal which would inevitably result in its death substantially supports an allegation of killing. Poindexter & Orr Livestock Co. v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 33 M 338, 83 P 886 (1905).

In an action against a railroad under this section, the testimony that the section boss showed the witness where the animal was struck and stated that after it was struck he killed it to end its suffering was not admissible as res gestae. Poindexter & Orr Livestock Co. v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 33 M 338, 83 P 886 (1905). See Callahan v. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R.R., 47 M 401, 133 P 687 (1913).

Instruction on This Section: A jury instruction, given in an action for the killing of livestock, to the effect that the law presumed such killing to have been the result of defendant's negligence, correctly stated the law, even though it appeared that while the animal was fatally injured by the locomotive and cars of the defendant the actual killing was done by one of the defendant's employees to end its suffering. Poindexter & Orr Livestock Co. v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 33 M 338, 83 P 886 (1905).

Admissions of Employee as Prima Facie Case: In an action against a railroad company to recover for injuries to stock, the admissions of an agent of the company, acting within the scope of his authority and with knowledge of the circumstances, that he had ordered the animal killed and the beef sold for the benefit of the company and the receipt of the proceeds of such sale by the company establish a prima facie case of the admission of negligence by the company. McCauley v. Mont. Cent. Ry., 11 M 483, 28 P 729 (1892).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 235 in (1) substituted current language requiring railroad company to report livestock killed or injured to Department of Livestock for former provision requiring record to be kept at county seat of train killing or injuring animal (see 1997 Session Law for former text); inserted (2) regarding liability of railroad failing to give notice to the Department; deleted former (2), (3), and (4) concerning inspection of records of animals killed or injured, notice of a railroad station designated to keep records, and liability of railroad failing to keep required records (see 1997 Session Law for former text); and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: Near end of (1) substituted "written demand provided for in 69-14-709" for "affidavit hereinafter provided for".

Case Notes

County Seat: When a railroad keeps the book required by this section in county seat town through which its line passes, it is under no obligation to cause a notice to be filed with the County Clerk designating the station at which it is kept. Its omission to do so does not render it liable in damages under this section. (See 1997 amendment.) Hunt v. White Sulphur Springs & Yellowstone Park Ry., 63 M 508, 208 P 917 (1922).

Failure to Keep Record Book:

When a railway fails to keep the book prescribed by this section, the District Court may, in an action to recover damages, decline to hear its defense and award judgment for plaintiff, the statute not being open to constitutional attack. (See 1997 amendment.) Foster v. Oreg. Short Line R.R., 62 M 230, 204 P 375 (1922).

The fact that the owner of cattle killed has actual knowledge of the killing does not prevent him from invoking the provision of this section imposing absolute liability for failure to keep the required record book. (See 1997 amendment.) Dewell v. N. Pac. Ry., 54 M 350, 170 P 753 (1918).

Constitutionality: This section is not unconstitutional for delegating lawmaking powers to the court or jury. Dewell v. N. Pac. Ry., 54 M 350, 170 P 753 (1918).

Pleading and Proof: Under this section it is not necessary for the plaintiff to allege or prove negligence on the part of the railroad. Dewell v. N. Pac. Ry., 54 M 350, 170 P 753 (1918).

Police Regulation: This statute is a general police power provision, analogous to one requiring fencing and cattle guards, and as such is valid. Dewell v. N. Pac. Ry., 54 M 350, 170 P 753 (1918).

Constitutionality: The provision of this section (prior to a 1919 amendment) allowing an owner, in an action brought by him to recover damages for cattle alleged to have been killed by railroad company, to recover also an attorney's fee if he is successful but denying such fee to the railroad company if it is successful, was unconstitutional as denying equal protection of the law. Dewell v. N. Pac. Ry., 54 M 350, 170 P 753 (1918).

69-14-721. Control of fire hazard along right-of-way.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendment: Chapter 588 substituted current text concerning control of dangerous or combustible material within the right-of-way for former text that read: "It shall be the duty of all railroad corporations or railroad companies operating any railroad within this state to keep their railroad track and either side thereof for a distance of 100 feet on each side of the track or roadbed, so far as it passes through any portion of this state, free from dead grass, weeds, or any dangerous or combustible material. Any railroad company or corporation failing to keep its railroad track and each side thereof free as specified above shall be liable for any damages which may occur from fire emanating from operating such railroad. A neglect to comply with the provisions of this section in keeping free any railroad track and either side for a distance equal to the space of ground covered by the grant of the right-of-way for the railroad corporation or company shall be prima facie evidence of negligence on the part of any such railroad corporation or company. No railroad corporation or company shall be required to keep free, as specified above, any land not a part of its right-of-way."

Case Notes

Definition of Railroad: The term "railroad" as employed in this section refers only to common carriers. Crowley v. Polleys Lumber Co., 92 M 27, 9 P2d 1068 (1932).

Logging Railroad: This section has no application to a logging railroad used solely in connection with the owner's logging business. Crowley v. Polleys Lumber Co., 92 M 27, 9 P2d 1068 (1932).

Rebuttal of Presumption: A prima facie case of negligence established by plaintiff may be overcome by evidence that the railway company exercised reasonable care to keep its right-of-way free from combustible material. Pure Oil Co. v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 56 M 266, 185 P 150 (1919).

Necessary Showing for Recovery:

In an action for the destruction of property by fire communicated to it through combustible material permitted by a railway to accumulate on its right-of-way, a prima facie case of negligence is established by showing that the defendant permitted the accumulation of such material on its right-of-way. To enable plaintiff to recover, he must show also that the property was destroyed by fire emanating from the operation of the railroad and that the combustible material was an agency through which the fire was communicated to the property destroyed. Pure Oil Co. v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 56 M 266, 185 P 150 (1919).

Failure to comply with this section does not render railroad liable for damage occurring from any fire emanating from operating the railroad unless combustible matter operated as an agency in communicating the fire to plaintiff's property. Spencer v. Mont. Cent. Ry., 11 M 164, 27 P 681 (1891).

Purpose of Damages: The damages awarded to individuals for the failure of a railroad company to comply with this section are compensatory only and hence are not a "penalty otherwise provided for" within the meaning of section 94-35-252, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed). Cooper v. N. Pac. Ry., 212 F 533 (9th Cir. 1914).

Who May Complain:

A lease was construed as exempting a railway from liability for loss occasioned by fire incident to or arising from railway operation but not exempting it for loss arising from fire due to the railway's violation of this section. Cooper v. N. Pac. Ry., 212 F 533 (9th Cir. 1914).

This section is for the benefit of all going on the right-of-way for the purposes of or incidental to transportation and of all off the right-of-way who may be injured by the railroad's failure to perform the duty imposed. The benefit does not extend to trespassers or tenants on the right-of-way who take the same as they find it, or subject to the terms of their occupancy. Cooper v. N. Pac. Ry., 212 F 533 (9th Cir. 1914).

Provision Not Offensive to Chartered Right: It is as much the duty of a railroad company to keep its right-of-way free from dead grass, weeds, or any dangerous or combustible material as it is to use proper means to prevent the emission of sparks of fire. A statute requiring this to be done does not trench upon the chartered right, under act of Congress, of such a railroad company. Diamond v. N. Pac. Ry., 6 M 580, 13 P 367 (1887). See Bielenberg v. Mont. Union Ry., 8 M 271, 20 P 314 (1889).

69-14-722. Maintenance of fireguards.Case Notes

Range or Grazing Country: One seeking recovery for failure to comply with this section must allege in his complaint that the property burned was situated in a "range or grazing country". Failure to so allege renders testimony relating to a breach of its provisions inadmissible and instructions relating thereto improper. Missoula Trust & Sav. Bank v. N. Pac. Ry., 76 M 201, 245 P 949 (1926).

Case Notes

Livingston Employees' Claims Against Railroad That Left Town: Claims of former railroad employees for damages caused by railroad's closure of its Livingston, Montana, operations, even though the railroad had allegedly twice promised that it would never leave town, were preempted by the federal Railway Labor Act. Therefore, the District Court had no jurisdiction over the claims. The employees' spouses' claims were also preempted because the claims were derivative in that the claims were based on damages the spouses allegedly suffered because their employee-husbands lost their jobs. However, a request to file an amended complaint to allege violation of this section and to claim damages under this section should not have been denied, and that part of the case should not have been dismissed. Polich v. Burlington N. RR Co., 942 F2d 1467 (1991). The decision holding that claims were preempted by the Interstate Commerce Act was affirmed in Polich v. Burlington N., Inc., 114 F3d 122 (1997).

Adequacy of Available Remedy — Availability of Injunction: Injunction was not allowed employees of defendant railroad when the latter attempted to move a home terminal because there was no convincing showing of any unlawful act, and if there were, a remedy in damages was plain, speedy, and adequate. Hamblin v. Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pac. R.R., 34 St. Rep. 1048 (1977) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

Case Notes

Locomotive Inspection Act Claim — Railroad Employee Injury — Cause of Accident Proper Question for Jury: The plaintiff, an employee of a railroad, pursued a cause of action under the Federal Employers' Liability Act (FELA) coupled with the Locomotive Inspection Act (LIA) for a work-related injury that prevented him from working as a conductor for 6 months. The District Court allowed the jury to weigh the evidence regarding whether snow and ice on the locomotive steps caused the plaintiff to slip, and a verdict was returned in favor of the railroad. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court after determining that the employee's burden of proof differs in a FELA case, which requires a showing of negligence, whereas a LIA case requires proof of a statutory or regulatory violation. As applied, there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's determination that the railroad was not liable for the plaintiff's injury due to the presence of ice and snow on the locomotive steps. Martin v. BNSF Ry. Co., 2015 MT 167, 379 Mont. 423, 352 P.3d 598.

Strict Liability for Railroad Safety Under Federal Act — Contributory Negligence No Factor — Summary Judgment Proper: A motion for summary judgment was properly granted to claimant when the railroad admitted violation of portions of the federal Safety Appliance Act, 45 U.S.C. 1, et seq., since under the Act violation by a carrier of a specific safety requirement is held to constitute negligence as a matter of law regardless of a showing of negligence on an employee's part. Plouffe v. Burlington N., Inc., 224 M 467, 730 P2d 1148, 43 St. Rep. 2341 (1986). See also Weber v. BNSF Ry. Co., 2011 MT 223, 362 Mont. 53, 261 P.3d 984, which held that the District Court erred in granting the railroad's motion for judgment as a matter of law on the injured railroad employee's Locomotive Inspection Act claim when the evidence presented at trial indicated the locomotive was not performing properly and the locomotive's failure created an unnecessary danger of carbon monoxide exposure to the employee.

Availability of Affirmative Defenses to Railroad — Absolute Liability: Plaintiff was employed by a subsidiary of Burlington Northern and was injured in an accident involving Burlington's railroad cars. The Supreme Court decided the federal Safety Appliance Act applied despite the fact the railroad cars involved in the accident were on a siding where loading operations were handled by the subsidiary. Noting that the U.S. Supreme Court has declared that the question of whether a railroad can assert contributory negligence or assumption of risk as a defense in a case involving a nonrailroad employee depends entirely on state law, the Supreme Court cited its 1966 holding that, where the theory of absolute liability applies, liability is established when it is proved that a statute has been violated and there is a proximate cause connection between the violation and the resulting injuries. Proximate cause in a case under the Safety Appliance Act is decided using the definition that prevails under state law. Comparing the 1966 case under the Scaffolding Act with this case, the Supreme Court denied the defendant the two defenses. The Supreme Court also noted that railroad employees are entitled to a more liberal standard imposing liability than nonrailroad employees. Reynolds v. Burlington N. Ry., 190 M 383, 621 P2d 1028, 37 St. Rep. 1883 (1980).

Duty to Provide Safe Working Place — Railroad Employee: In a case brought by an employee injured while working for a subsidiary of a railroad, the Supreme Court held that the plaintiff was owed the duty to provide him with a safe place to work. Noting that giving the jury information about the subsidiaries might well have been highly prejudicial to the defendant railroad, the Supreme Court nonetheless felt obliged to consider it in this case. The plaintiff was working directly in the operations of the railroad in every sense of the word. The railroad would not be absolved of the responsibility to provide a safe place to work for employees who are technically employed by a subsidiary corporation but whose employment is directly related to the operations of a railroad. Closeness of the businesses of the parent and subsidiary companies was a factor in the court's conclusion that both corporations owed the duty to provide the plaintiff with a safe place to work. Reynolds v. Burlington N. Ry., 190 M 383, 621 P2d 1028, 37 St. Rep. 1883 (1980).

Punitive Damages Not Allowable Under Federal Employers' Liability Act: Court erred in allowing plaintiff to amend his complaint alleging willful and wanton conduct as a basis for punitive damages because only compensatory damages are the measure of damages recoverable under the Federal Employers' Liability Act. State ex rel. Burlington N. Ry., Inc. v. District Court, 169 M 480, 548 P2d 616 (1976).

Knowledge of Danger:

In an action against a railway for injuries to the feet of a shop laborer resulting from wearing defective and improper safety shoes furnished by the railway, the defense of assumed risk was not available. Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946).

Under state railroad employers' liability law an employee generally assumes risks normally incident to the occupation in which he voluntarily engages but does not assume other and extraordinary risks and those due to employer's negligence until he is made aware thereof or they become so obvious and immediately dangerous that an ordinarily prudent person would observe and appreciate them. Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946).

Whether a carman falling from ladder that assistant foreman allegedly directed him to use until scaffold could be found for use in replacing part of the siding of a freight car in the defendant railroad's repair shop assumed the risk of his employment or risk in using a simple tool was a jury question. Great N. Ry. v. Wojtala, 112 F2d 609 (9th Cir. 1940).

The defense of assumption of risk may be interposed as a bar in an action for personal injuries to an employee when they have been caused by hazard which is incident to the particular business or when they have been brought about by an increased hazard occasioned by the failure of the employer to perform his primary duty with relation to the safety of the employee if the latter was aware of such increased hazard or it was so obvious that an ordinarily prudent person under like circumstances would have observed and appreciated it. Matson v. Hines, 63 M 214, 207 P 474 (1922), certiorari denied, 260 US 734, 67 L Ed 487, 43 S Ct 95 (1922).

When an employee, knowing that obedience to an order of his foreman will expose him to injury and that the danger incident to obedience is obvious, glaring, and imminent, obeys the command, suffering injury, he assumes the risk. When, however, he has no independent knowledge of danger and relies upon the superior knowledge of his employer, he may rely upon the latter's judgment and assume that the order could be safely obeyed without laying himself open to the defense of assumption of risk. Matson v. Hines, 63 M 214, 207 P 474 (1922), certiorari denied, 260 US 734, 67 L Ed 487, 43 S Ct 95 (1922).

In an action by a section hand for injuries sustained in lifting a rail, in which the negligence charged was failure of the defendant company to furnish a sufficient number of men to assist him in doing the work in hand, the Supreme Court held that the plaintiff, 28 years of age, familiar with the work he was engaged in, and who knew, as testified to by him, that it required from six to eight men to lift a rail weighing from 750 to 800 pounds with reasonable safety to the men doing the lifting, assumed the risk of injury from overstrain in attempting to lift it in company with three others. Matson v. Hines, 63 M 214, 207 P 474 (1922), certiorari denied, 260 US 734, 67 L Ed 487, 43 S Ct 95 (1922).

Liberal Construction: This statute is remedial in its nature, and its operation ought not to be limited by narrow construction. Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946); Regan v. Mont. Logging Co., 53 M 153, 162 P 388 (1917).

What Are Appliances: Safety shoes used by laborer in railroad shops were "appliances" and "equipment" within the meaning of this section. Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946).

Contributory Negligence — Pleading and Proof:

Contributory negligence on the part of a railroad employee does not bar his right to recover damages for injuries received during the course of his employment. The jury in such case is required to diminish the damages "in proportion to the amount of negligence attributable to such employee". Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946); Hall v. N. Pac. Ry., 56 M 537, 186 P 340 (1919).

Failure of a carman, injured by fall, to obtain a scaffold rather than a ladder that the assistant foreman allegedly directed him to use when replacing siding of freight car in repair shop would not be more than contributory negligence, which does not bar recovery under the statute. Great N. Ry. v. Wojtala, 112 F2d 609 (9th Cir. 1940).

Under the rule of comparative negligence declared by this chapter, contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff is a partial defense which must be pleaded. Cornell v. Great N. Ry., 57 M 177, 187 P 902 (1920).

This statute does not change the rule that in a personal injury action the burden of pleading and proving contributory negligence on the part of the plaintiff is upon the defendant. Cornell v. Great N. Ry., 57 M 177, 187 P 902 (1920).

Scope of Employment:

This act covers injuries to railroad employees while engaged in any part of work connected with, and necessarily and directly contributing to, operation of railroad or handling or movement of any train, engine, or car. Palmer v. Great N. Ry., 119 M 68, 170 P2d 768 (1946).

A conductor of a work train was not only acting in furtherance of the operations entrusted to him but was also within the scope of his authority when, in the temporary absence of the engineer, he assumed charge of the locomotive and in his endeavor to switch a caboose from the main line, where it was a menace to life and limb on account of passing trains, to a sidetrack, caused a collision with the caboose injuring the plaintiff. Wegge v. Great N. Ry., 61 M 377, 203 P 360 (1921).

Whether a section hand injured by a collision while resting in a caboose standing upon the main line after the dinner hour and waiting to be transported to work was acting within the scope of his employment was a jury question. Wegge v. Great N. Ry., 61 M 377, 203 P 360 (1921).

Removability of Action Joining Causes Under Similar State and Federal Liability Acts: A plaintiff did not waive the right to trial in state court by joining with a cause of action under Federal Employers' Liability Act a cause of action under similar state statutes based on identical facts. The action was not removable to federal court. When an injured railroad employee is employed in interstate commerce, his remedy under the Federal Employers' Liability Act is exclusive, such act superseding similar state acts. Hoepfner v. N. Pac. Ry., 61 F. Supp. 819 (D.C. Mont. 1945).

Repair of Rolling Stock: This statute includes the repair of rolling stock and was applicable when a carman fell from a ladder while replacing vertical siding of a freight car in a repair shop. Great N. Ry. v. Wojtala, 112 F2d 609 (9th Cir. 1940).

Sufficiency of Complaint:

A complaint of a boilermaker who lost sight in one eye while working with an air hammer caulking bolts in the firebox of a locomotive alleging by way of conclusion that it was railroad's duty to furnish him with reasonably safe tools and appliances and containing additional averments as to the conditions under which he was required to work and necessity for protective goggles was sufficient to state a cause of action. Morelli v. Great N. Ry., 89 M 603, 300 P 210 (1931).

When a plaintiff locomotive engineer had but one cause of action against the defendant railway company, i.e., its wrongful act in permitting an engine to move on the same track at the same time and in the opposite direction from the engine operated by the plaintiff, causing a collision, and in his complaint brought under the federal liability law alleged that he was injured while in the engine whereas at the trial he testified that the injury occurred by coming in contact with the ground as a result of his jumping from the engine to escape the collision, the amended complaint filed by leave of court to conform to the facts did not state a new and different cause of action, and therefore refusal to strike it from the files was proper. Gillespie v. Great N. Ry., 63 M 598, 208 P 1059 (1922).

Limitation of Action: When an amended complaint in an action brought under the federal liability law did not state a new cause of action, the action was barred by the 2-year limitation prescribed therein. The amendment relating back to the date of the commencement of the action was unaffected by the intervening lapse of time. Gillespie v. Great N. Ry., 63 M 598, 208 P 1059 (1922).

Apportionment of Damages: Contributory negligence of plaintiff employee in an action brought under the Federal Employers' Liability Act or state law does not bar recovery but is a fact which may be considered by the jury in apportioning damages. Kamboris v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 62 M 88, 203 P 859 (1921).

When Jury's Verdict Is Conclusive in Regarding Negligence: A jury's determination that a railroad was negligent in the death of a section man struck from rear by work train while shoveling cinders from track was conclusive when the evidence was in direct conflict. Kamboris v. Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., 62 M 88, 203 P 859 (1921).

Burden of Proof:

A plaintiff has the burden of proving negligence in a personal injury action by an employee against his employer, whether based upon this statute or not. Hassan v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 105, 198 P 446 (1921).

In action by a railroad section hand for injuries caused by a tie falling upon him from a car which he, with others, was unloading, a nonsuit was properly granted, his evidence not disclosing negligence on the part of anyone to which the fall of the tie and the consequent injuries could be said to have been attributable. Hassan v. N. Pac. Ry., 60 M 105, 198 P 446 (1921).

Common-Law Liability: The purpose of the Legislature in enacting this legislation was to substitute for the benefit of railway employees the action provided by it in place of the common-law action, and in case of death, to create a new cause of action in favor of the dependents named for the pecuniary loss suffered by them. Cornell v. Great N. Ry., 57 M 177, 187 P 902 (1920).

Definition of Railroad: "Railroad", as used in this section, includes a road used for logging purposes. Regan v. Mont. Logging Co., 53 M 153, 162 P 388 (1917).

"Operating" Construed: When the plaintiff, a brakeman on the defendant's logging road, was also required to assist in loading and unloading cars and while doing so was injured by the breaking of an appliance, the defendant company was "operating" its road at the time of the injury within the meaning of this act. Regan v. Mont. Logging Co., 53 M 153, 162 P 388 (1917).
